ERA OF AIR.

MANKIND TO FLY.

Marconi Says Race Will Soar.

Great Inventor Predicts Aerial Travel in Fifty Years.

Sees Relief for Congestion in Cities, and Life a Genial Function.

Approves of Decrease in the Birth Rate to Improve Society.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Guglielmo Marconi discussed today the marvels of the future.

The inventor of wireless telegraphy has come to America to increase his trans-Atlantic service from a capacity of 5000 words a day to 20,000. After predicting a great future for wireless telegraphy, he said:

"There seems to be a happy fate in the coincidence of scientific discoveries which on first thought are quite unrelated to each other. The development of the airship as shown in the astounding performance of Orville Wright's machine at Washington would seem to have nothing in common with the perfection of wireless communication, and yet if one looks into the future, the great airships which are to come, sailing at incredible speed and at unforseen and varying altitudes, could never without the wireless 'speak' each other as ships do at sea and so remain in touch with those safely at home.

RAIL TRAVEL DOOMED.

"And the airship is certain to come into general use, and that within the lifetime of our generation; not for freight, perhaps, but for people surely. In fifty years the people of New York will be freed of the vexing problem of rapid transit. There will be no need for surface cars, elevated roads, subways, tunnels and ferries.

"In fact, as I look into the years to come, I am convinced that life will be an easier problem, a more genial function in the scheme of things, than it is today. Aside from the economy of labor which follows the conquest of nature's forces, there will be fewer people among whom to divide the benefits. The birth rate will continue to decrease as I believe it should at least for the present. With the growth of intelligence among the mass of people there will come a realization of the folly of rearing more children than can be properly fitted to be efficient members of society. Quality, not numbers, will come to be the standard of racial excellence.

CONGESTION TO END.

"The conditions today is not one of 'race suicide,' but of social common sense. And if the present enlightenment of average men and women continues to its righteous turning point there will come an end of congested cities, with their wretched and starving children of the tenements, their crimes, their killing competition and their discouragement of the gentler aspirations of men.

"In all ways, science is more and more studying to perfect the practical comfort and well being of the world.

"Going back to my hobby of wireless communication, I want to say that we shall not have to wait long for the wireless telephone. Deforest and his colleagues are doing great things in that direction."

Guglielmo Marconi,
noted inventor of wireless telegraphy, who yesterday discussed the marvelous scientific probabilities of the future.

AERONAUTICS.

WRIGHT BREAKS HIS OWN RECORDS AGAIN.

In Two Flights He Establishes New Mark for Time, Speed, and Two-Man Performance—New York and Back Possible, Says Expert.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—In two flights at Fort Myer this afternoon, Orville Wright, in the Wright Flyer, broke three records. Staying up nine minutes and six and one-third seconds in the first flight, in which Maj. George O. Squiers, acting chief signal officer, accompanied him, Mr. Wright broke the record for a two-man flight, which he established on Tuesday. The first flight was at 4:29 o'clock.

In the second flight, which started at 5:17 p.m., Mr. Wright broke the record for time and distance of a heavier-than-air flying machine, which he established by remaining in the air one hour, fourteen minutes and twenty-four seconds. In this flight he also went nigher than an aëroplanist has ever gone before, ascending to an altitude of 250 feet.

Mr. Wright also maintained a faster speed than in previous flights at Fort Myer, traveling around the drill grounds at the rate of 38.75 miles an hour on the first flight, when Maj. Squiers accompanied him. The distance of this flight was 5.88 miles. In today's flight, Mr. Wright broke the world's record for time and distance for the fifth time this week.

A crowd of 5000 persons gathered to witness today's flight, and their enthusiasm knew no bounds.

They cheered Mr. Wright until he went away in the Signal Corps automobile.

NEW YORK AND BACK.

Col. James Templar, former chief of the aëronautical division of the British army, who has been sending reports to his government on his observations of aërial flights in this country, was an interested spectator at Fort Myer today. Octave Chanute, the pioneer aëronaut; Maj. Fornier, the French military attaché, and numerous others were present today. After the flights, Col. Templar said:

"I have always believed in the Wright brothers, although I had never witnessed any of their flights before. I am sure that Mr. Wright could fly in the machine he is now using to New York and back to Washington in one night, without making any stops for fuel.

"Just think what this would mean in time of war.

"The aërial flyers are an advancement in warfare and will lead to general pacification, I believe. The British army has been making experiments with aëroplanes for some time, but I am not at liberty to say what has been accomplished. I think within a month something will be heard from us. We have an American, F. S.

ASSASSINS.

TRY TWICE TO KILL.

Bomb for Gov. Fort Explodes.

Postoffice Employee Has Narrow Escape Examining Machine.

Hurls the Suspicious Package from Him When He Hears Igniting Powder.

Inspectors Seek the Men Who Tried to Murder New Jersey Executive.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Two attempts to kill Gov. Fort of New Jersey by means of infernal machines have been made by some one in this city.

On Friday afternoon in the Nicetown substation of the postoffice, a peculiar looking package addressed to the Governor exploded with great force when a clerk handled it carelessly.

Fortunately, the man threw it away from him when he heard the sound of igniting powder within. The explosion destroyed a light wooden box which encased the infernal machine and burned the paper surrounding it so that any possible clue to the sender was destroyed.

Today, when news of this infernal machine became public, the postoffice authorities announced that on August 28, they had intercepted another loaded package addressed to Gov. Fort. It contained a handful of powder, a handful of steel filings, several bullets and an arrangement of matches and sandpaper to fire the charge.

INSPECTORS BUSY.

The postoffice inspectors in this city admit they are investigating the mailing of an infernal machine in this city to Gov. Fort, of New Jersey, but will discuss the case no further. It was learned, however, that the postal authorities have little hope of catching the person who mailed the package.

The package was mailed on August 28, the day after Gov. Fort issued his proclamation regarding the sale of liquor on Sunday in Atlantic City.

The device was contained in an ordinary two-cent government envelope and the Philadelphia authorities had their attention attracted to it because its weight required the placing of a two cent "due" stamp on it.

BOMB SMALL BUT OF FATAL EFFECT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SEA GIRT (N. J.) Sept. 12.—An attempt to assassinate Gov. Fort of New Jersey has been thwarted by the watchfulness of postoffice employés, who discovered in the mails an infernal machine addressed to the Governor.

The package was a cleverly-contrived combination of powder, bullets and matches, which had been so arranged that had the Governor opened it in the ordinary way, there is little doubt it would have killed him.

That the death-dealing package was intercepted before it had reached its destination was due to the vigilance of the postal officials, who have scanned the Governor's mail with unusual care since the Executive's recent crusade against violation of the law at Atlantic City.

MAIL WAS WATCHED.

The attitude taken by the Governor when he directed that the excise and other similar laws at the great seaside resort be strictly enforced, and even threatened to order out the militia if necessary, aroused resentment in some quarters. To guard the Governor as much as possible from any annoyance arising from that affair, unusual watch was put on his mail.

Several days ago when a package of somewhat unusual shape was found to bear insufficient postage, it was taken by a clerk to one of the postal inspectors. The inspector became more impressed by the shape and condition of the package than by the shortage of stamps, and at once wrote the Governor informing him that a package of suspicious appearance addressed to him was being held at the office. The inspector asked for permission to open it without forwarding it to its destination.

The permission was given at once. Exercising the greatest care, the inspector and his assistants removed the wrappings from the package to find that their worst fears were confirmed. It was a real infernal machine, crude, but so cleverly constructed that it was capable of doing tremendous damage. It contained a quantity of powder, with bullets and matches so arranged that a hurried opening of the package would have set off the powder and hurled the bullets in all directions.

SENDER HUMOROUS.

That the sender of the machine had a grim sense of humor became apparent from an examination of the contents of the package. On a bit of paper he had written a message to the Governor which read:

"Please notify us promptly of any change in your postoffice address."

Another read: "You will know me better after we are acquainted."

Another line by which it is believed the sender sought to give the impression that the machine was sent by a foe of constitutional government, instead of a personal enemy of the Governor, reads:

"And the gun against this rotten government."

Gov. Fort said today that he did not care to discuss the matter in any way. "It speaks for itself," was the only comment he would make when he was questioned about his narrow escape.

JAP DIPLOMAT SOUNDS A WARNING.

"TO HELL, IF IT'S ORDERS."

COL. STEWART READY TO TAKE LONG RIDE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

TUCSON (Ariz.) Sept. 12.—Col. Stewart did not take the test today. He waits for the completion of the preliminary physical examination and further orders. He is apparently in good condition.

The greater part of the Huachuca garrison left today with mounts for Los Angeles to take the practice march.

Col. Stewart is left at Huachuca with only three other officers. He is indignant.

He said: "I have wired three times to Washington since I arrived here, September 9, for further orders. I have received no answer and get no attention. I am ready to ride but get no further orders. I don't know what to do but to stay here. I don't want to go back to Fort Grant but will go to hell if ordered because I am an officer of the United States Army and am accustomed to obey."

The only medical officer left at Huachuca to examine Col. Stewart is one assistant surgeon, Capt. Porter, the surgeon in charge, left with the troops. The probabilities are that when Col. Stewart receives orders he will ride ninety miles with Lieut. Dockery, the only available officer at the post. The supposed route will be from Huachuca to Fairbanks to Tombstone to Huachuca, a triangle of thirty miles to each leg. Stewart is 59 years old but lean and wiry and says the ride will not bother him in the least.

PUT TO TEST.

WYOMING TO MAKE OIL BURNING TRIAL.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12. — [Exclusive Dispatch.] The United States monitor Wyoming will soon leave Mare Island navy yard, San Francisco, for a coast trial trip, in which she will experiment with oil as a fuel for steam purposes.

The Wyoming, a 4200-ton ship, is the largest craft of the American Navy to experiment with oil. The furnaces of the monitor have been equipped with oil burners similar to those now in use by harbor boats and other craft engaged in Pacific Coast trade.

The experiment is not a new one with the navy. In fact, the value of oil has been clearly demonstrated in the past to such an extent that the new torpedo-boat destroyers, to be built under the last naval appropriation act, are to be oil-burning boats exclusively. In addition to this, all of the bigger ships of the American Navy are equipped with old burners, as well as coal.

The practicable good to be demonstrated by the Wyoming may result from a reduction in the cost of fuel for ships on the Pacific station. The steaming capacity of oil is about 40 per cent. greater than coal, and the cost of oil pound for pound compared with coal is about the same rate cheaper. The coal used on the Pacific Coast is largely British Columbia coal, with some Welsh coal. The price charged is exceedingly high.

Navy Department officials hardly look to the time when oil will be used by all big ships, but they do expect that the fuel has tremendous possibilities for coast defense work. The first experiments with oil in the American Navy were in 1865, and about eight years ago a boiler test in Washington navy yard was the subject of a comprehensive report to the department.

The British navy has experimented considerably with oil, but the dual plan of burning oil and coal in conjunction on British men-of-war was found impracticable and abandoned.

SKELETON IN CLOSET.

MILLIONAIRE'S CHILD IS PUBLIC CHARGE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DENVER (Colo.) Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Secretary Whitehead of the State Humane Society will take steps to prevent the State of Colorado from being taxed to pay for the results of a crime by a Pittsburgh millionaire. Not even the task of lifting the veil from the skeleton that has long been hid in the closet of a big steel and sugar king of Pittsburgh, estimated to be worth at least $25,000,000, will stop Mr. Whitehead from protecting Colorado.

Early in the week the police picked up a man and woman for fighting. They gave the name of Martinez. Later a forgery charge was placed against the man, and the Humane Society went to the protection of the little 8-year-old girl whom they found in the rooms of the couple, neglected and hopeless. The mother today told this tale of a conspiracy, backed by gigantic funds.

Some years ago the woman, Cora Bell Davis, then a girl of 17, fell a victim to the lures of a Pittsburgh steel king. She was given jewels, carriages and wealth to be the toy of this millionaire. For a time the illusion lasted.

The man tired of his plaything, and cast about for a means of casting her forth from his life. But the little girl, who is now being supported by Colorado, had come, and it was not so easy.

The next step was the bribery of one of his employés to marry his former flame. The price paid is said to have been $50,000 and a responsible place in the steel trust.

TUG HITS GUNBOAT.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12.—The United States gunboat Vixen was run into by the tugboat Ogontz in the Delaware River today, and damaged. As a precaution the war vessel was beached on a mud bank. Henry Berger, a gunner's mate, was injured, and was removed to a hospital. The cause of the collision is not definitely known, but it is said the captain of the tug had temporarily left the wheelhouse in charge of a deck hand.

WARNING.

NEED OF DEFENSE.

Okuma Sees Vulnerable Spot.

Jap Diplomat Says the Pacific Coast of America Weak in Fortifications.

Thinks Growth of Japan Has Inspired United States to Rule Ocean.

Doubts That Public Opinion Will Permit Building Bigger Navy.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

YOKOHAMA, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "The United States of America may be the most wealthy country in the world, but she has not a sufficient protection for defense on the Pacific should the two nations come to hostilities."

In these words Count Okuma, who has been sometimes described as an "undiplomatic diplomat," expressed his opinion on this question during an interview on affairs of international interest, more particularly concerning the relations of the nations toward the Pacific and the Far East.

"America is striving to acquire the control of the Pacific Ocean. I do not dare say that the sending out of the Pacific squadron into the Far East means the expulsion of the Japanese, but there is no doubt it is the chief motive for this act on her part.

NOT WELL FORTIFIED.

"Thus it will be seen that the growth of Japan has inspired America with the intention of acquiring control of the Pacific Ocean.

"The American coast facing the Pacific Ocean is not well fortified, therefore Americans have become very nervous about the new rising nation, which is accredited as being a military race. Americans think that Japan will usurp all the markets of China and drive the foreigners out of Asia. Public opinion is in accord that the rival of America is Japan, and that a powerful navy must be constructed against the Rising Sun.

JAPS CRAZY FIGHTERS.

"But I doubt that this policy against Japan will continue, since the American government must conform to public opinion, which is likely to change as soon as a better light is thrown on the real intentions of Japan.

"Nothing can be more dreaded than crazy people, and the Japanese are a very crazy nation. In fighting she will go on like mad, as was well illustrated in the late war.

"Under the circumstances it would not be futile to dwell on the present condition of the world. Peace prevails throughout the planet, but it is not maintained through humanitarianism. Diplomats and sovereign refer to 'an armed peace' or to the 'limitation of military equipment.' The tendency is that all countries are competing in expanding armaments."

WOMAN SCORNED.

DESERTED WIFE SEEKS HUSBAND.

LOCATES HIM IN RENO, STARTS FOR NEVADA.

Determined to Have Spouse Returned to Former Home in Shreveport, La., for Prosecution—Was Arrested in Los Angeles Once, but Requisition Was Refused.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SHREVEPORT (La.) Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Louis Malkus, wife of a former well-known local contractor, has left for Reno, Nev., determined to have her husband returned to Shreveport for prosecution for wife-desertion.

The charge was preferred over a year ago, when Malkus disappeared from here, breaking a contract to build the Odd Fellows' Home at Crowley and causing Capt. J. L. Busbey, his bondsman, of Shreveport, to suffer. Following a miraculous rescue from a steamship wreck off the California coast, he was arrested in Los Angeles and an effort was made to have him returned, but the request for requisition was refused.

Since then his whereabouts were unknown until the message today from Nevada.

CHURCHILL IS MARRIED.

President of London Board of Trade Weds Clementine Montague-Hosier.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Winston Spencer Churchill, president of the Board of Trade, was married in this city this afternoon to Clementine, daughter of the late Sir Henry Montague-Hosier, who for thirty-two years was secretary for Lloyds.

The ceremony occurred at St. Margaret's Church.

The congregation attending the ceremony included the leaders of both political parties and persons prominent in society to the number of about 800, while crowds of the curious gathered in the church and in front of the home of the bride.

TRICKS IN ALL TRADES—BRYAN

Oklahoma Bank Guaranty Has Joker.

Fund Is Increased by Big State Deposit.

Campaign Speeches Give but One Side of Story.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GUTHRIE (Okla.) Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There are some features of the Oklahoma bank deposit guarantee law that William J. Bryan does not refer to in his campaign boosts of the "Oklahoma idea."

For instance, a statement was recently prepared by Gov. C. M. Haskell and given to the public through Roy Oakes, secretary of the State Banking Board, quoting figures to show that the deposits in the Oklahoma guaranteed banks have increased $4,509,221 since the law went into effect on February 4, last.

Mr. Bryan comments lovingly upon this fact, as proving that the people like the deposit guarantee plan. What Mr. Bryan does not dwell upon, however, is the fact that increase in the deposits in the guaranteed banks is due to the deposit in those banks of a special fund belonging to the State, controlled by State officials, and amounting to $3,500,000. The money belongs to the State school fund and not to private individuals, as the campaign orators seem to want the people to believe.

HASKELL'S TRICK.

Under the Statehood Act Congress set aside $5,000,000 of the proceeds of the land sales for the benefit of the Oklahoma school fund. When the new State began business $1,500,000 of this amount was withdrawn and the balance of $3,500,000 left in the United States treasury. After the deposit guarantee law went into effect, however, Gov. Haskell withdrew the $3,500,000 and deposited it in the State banks. That accounts for practically all of the increase in the deposits boasted of by Mr. Bryan.

The same statement shows that during the same period the State withdrew from the national or unsecured banks a total of $669,919. These figures are intended by the Democratic spellbinders to show that the depositors' guarantee law has resulted in a great increase of deposits in State banks protected by the guarantee fund and a correspondingly large loss to the unsecured banks.

SNAP FOR BANKERS.

A close examination of the banks, however, shows that during the period from February 14 to May 14 the national banks actually gained in deposits from sources outside the State funds $69,112.

Another feature of the guarantee plan, as it is working in Oklahoma, has not been dwelt upon by Mr. Bryan. It is the fact that the fund which is being held to guarantee losses by bank failures is deposited in some bank or banks of the State, and that the bankers who are getting the use of the money are not required to pay interest upon it to the State. This furnishes a snug sum upon which some one may speculate without any outlay of interest if he should so desire.

INTERESTING DEBATE.

LIAR—BRYAN; LIAR—HEARST.

LEADERS IN YELLOW KID POLITICS EXCHANGE AMENITIES.

Former Says He Didn't Seek Support of Independent Leaguers and Latter Says He's Sorry (Sic!) He Is Forced to Call Nebraskan a Prevaricator.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

ATLANTA (Ga.) Sept. 12.—William R. Hearst, when shown Mr. Bryan's denial of Mr. Hearst's statement that four months ago Bryan proposed to support Mr. Hearst four years hence, in return for Mr. Hearst's support in this campaign, made the following statement:

"I don't see why Mr. Bryan is always proposing policies that he has to recant, saying things that he has to retract, and doing things that he has to deny.

"When Mr. Bryan came to New York some four months ago I did not call on him, as I had nothing to see him about. He did call on me, as apparently he had something to see me about.

"I kept his visit a secret, but Mr. Chanler, in a suit against me, stated in his affidavit that he had seen Mr. Bryan at my house, and so the visit was inadvertently made public. That visit was without result, as I purposely avoided politics. Shortly after, I received an invitation from a friend of mine to dinner. When I went to the dinner I found Mr. Bryan. After dinner Mr. Bryan stepped aside with me in the hall and said exactly what I said he did.

"I wish he had not said it. I was surprised and humiliated by the proposition. It showed that Mr. Bryan had no appreciation or conception of the work I had done for him, or of the reason I had worked so hard and made so many sacrifices in the cause. It showed that he considered me merely a traitor working for some personal advantage or promotion in politics. I left the house humiliated, as I say, but more than ever opposed to Mr. Bryan, more than ever convinced that I was right in opposing him."

BREAKS HAND AS EMPHASIS.

Minneapolis Mayor at Political Meeting Pounds so Hard He Fractures Bones.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MINNEAPOLIS (Minn.) Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mayor Haynes of Minneapolis is a forceful speaker. He demonstrated this fact this afternoon, when, in trying to clinch an argument while addressing a political meeting, he struck the table with such force that he broke the fingers of his right hand.

There were a number of physicians in the audience, and the Mayor's hand was quickly bandaged. He did not continue speaking, however.

STRAUS SHOWS BRYAN DANGER.

SAYS TAFT IS REAL FRIEND OF LABOR.

Cabinet Officer Will Take Active Part in Campaign, Believing That Democratic Policies Are More Threatening Now Than the Sixteen-to-One Scare.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CINCINNATI, Sept. 12.—The position of the present administration and Judge Taft on the labor question is to be made the special subject of consideration in the campaign by Oscar Straus, Secretary of Commerce and Labor, who, with T. V. Powderly of the Immigration Bureau called on the candidate today.

"I am going to make as many speeches, and do as much work in the campaign as my official duties will permit," said Secretary Straus, after his conference with Mr. Taft. "I will speak in New York and Chicago at least and undoubtedly in other places.

"Being the head of the Department of Commerce and Labor, I am decidedly interested in the welfare of labor, and I regard the Bryan fallacies as much more dangerous to labor than to any other element in the campaign. His government ownership of railroads and his bank-deposit scheme would so cripple industry as to reduce the wage-paying fund more than his previous fallacy of sixteen to one.

"I don't think that even Bryan himself would claim that President Roosevelt was inimical to labor, and I know from my own connection as a trusted member of his Cabinet, and I say this without disclosing any of the privacies of the Cabinet room, that whenever the labor question came up either in or out of that room, Mr. Taft's position was universally for the best interests of the laboring man."

FARMERS' BUREAU.

Mr. Powderly said he was here to establish a receiving bureau for the answers to inquiries his bureau had sent out to the farmers, particularly of the South, asking their needs with respect to farm labor. The rural carriers, he said, had already carried to the farmers of the country 1,500,000 postal cards, making the inquiry as to the character and quantity of farm help needed, to be used in giving advice to arriving foreigners.

Cincinnati has been selected, he said, as the receiving point of the answers because of its geographical location.

Judge Taft has been presented with the gavel and pounding board used by Chairman Harry S. New in calling to order the last Republican National Convention. The wood from which the souvenirs was made was taken from a Spanish block house on San Juan hill by an American army officer, who carried it to Fort Robinson, Neb., where Quartermaster Wheelwright Irish made the gavel and pounding board. It was presented to Chairman New by Representative Kinkead of Nebraska.

FAMILY REUNION.

There is to be a reunion of the Taft family, to which Judge Taft has been invited at Triangle, Broome county, N. Y., September 17. The exigencies of the campaign will prevent the acceptance of the invitation.

S. M. Felton, president of the Mexican Central Railroad, had an interview with Judge Taft today. Mr. Felton said that in his judgment the election of Mr. Taft was of the utmost importance to railroad men as a class, "because it means the restoration of confidence, which is necessary before we can hope for a permanent revival of business."

Democrats to Show Moving Pictures of Bryan in Chicago on Labor Union Day.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—Another feature besides the talking machine with records of the speeches of candidates has been added to the novelty of the Presidential campaign by the Democratic National Committee, which announced today that moving pictures of William J. Bryan in Chicago on Labor Union Day would be thrown upon canvases at political meetings all over the country.

National Chairman Mack and heads of bureaus today witnessed a reproduction of the Bryan Union Labor Day scenes by the moving-picture machines. The pictures show Mr. Bryan's arrival at the station and his reception by the crowd at the hotel. Later, the candidate is disclosed reviewing the big Union Labor Day parade and acknowledging the cheers of the marchers.

Have Three-cornered Scrap on in Omaha—Dahlman, "Cowboy Mayor" of Omaha, Opposed to George W. Berge and Only Lukewarm in Support of A. C. Shallenberger.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OMAHA (Neb.) Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Democratic party in Nebraska is handicapped in this campaign by a three-cornered factional fight as a holdover from the recent primary election.

A. C. Shallenberger, the Democrat who won the primary was opposed by "Jim" Dahlman, the "cowboy mayor" of Omaha, and by George W. Berge of Lincoln.

Up to the present campaign Shallenberger has been a bitter opponent of Bryan. He is a wealthy man, a banker and has always been classed with the "railroad crowd." He will get scant support from Berge and Berge's friends, and although Dahlman has already assured him of his support, the Omaha mayor will take little part in the campaign because he has promised to accompany Bryan during the last five weeks of the latter's tour through the different States.

Mayor Dahlman is also fighting G. W. Hitchcock, the Democratic candidate for Congress in the Omaha district.

In the third district Edgar Howard, defeated at the primaries for the congressional nomination, is fighting State Senator Latta, who defeated him. Howard declares Latta won because he was a banker.

Scherubel and his attorney claim they have made frequent trips to Guthrie, Okla., and have been unable to collect the board bill.

Prominent Polish-American political leaders and Roman Catholic priests were listed as Russians according to the investigators, who allege that the mistakes were made intentionally for the purpose of reducing the apparent political strength of the nationality.

INCENDIARY ATTEMPT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 12.—An attempt to set fire to the wharf and [illegible] of the Pioneer Flour Mills, valued at $250,000, was frustrated just in time last night to avoid a serious conflagration. The plant is situated in [illegible] of the railroad and shipping section, and had a serious blaze spread the loss would have been tremendous. A bunch of oil-soaked waste was found by a watchman blazing in the center of the storage room, and a man was seen running from the building just as the alarm was spread. The entire police force of the city is looking for the incendiary.

MERRY WIDOW GETS DIZZY.

CHAMPAGNE, ABSINTHE AND HOT TODDY TOO MUCH.

Mrs. Bina Lawrence, Claiming to Be Wife of Los Angeles Millionaire, Taken to Hospital in San Francisco and Operated on by Stomach Pump for Hallucinations.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Bina Lawrence, the dashing widow of J. N. Lawrence, who, she says, was a Los Angeles millionaire, was carried into the Emergency Hospital early this morning suffering from hallucinations. She is at the Fairmont and contends she was drugged and robbed, but admits she had champagne for dinner and a little absinthe afterward.

Mrs. Lawrence is heir to a large estate which is being contested by her stepson. She seemed much disturbed over what this man would say when he heard of her escapades.

An automobile party picked Mrs. Lawrence up at the Casino on Fulton street. She was on the Casino steps, screaming at the top of her voice. She was taken to the hospital, and her stomach pumped out. Then she was taken back to the hotel, and put to bed.

Later in the day she said that she had been over the bay and returned to this city about 11 at night. It was a fine night, and she decided to take an automobile ride to the park. She hired a machine, and at the beach she told the chauffeur she was cold. He suggested a hot drink, and she recalls that he told the barkeeper to put gum in it. That gum, she thinks, proved deadly, as she remembers nothing more.

She said she was going back to Los Angeles tomorrow night. She had had enough of San Francisco.

OIL GAS AT TRACY.

Great Excitement Over Results of First Boring in San Joaquin County.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The whole west side is greatly excited over a large flow of oil gas struck today in a well being sunk about four miles west of Tracy. The experts who have had considerable experience in other fields, declare it is only a question of a short time until a large quantity of oil will be disclosed by the drills.

The well is in San Joaquin county and is being bored by Bussey and Horton, two well-known miners of Goldfield, who own most of the famous Daisy mine. They have bonded or have options on fifteen sections of land in the district, located partly in San Joaquin county, where the first well is being sunk, and in Alameda and Contra Costa counties. The first well is down only about 1200 feet.

The Standard Oil Company has sent three representatives to the district and they have been making an effort to induce the land owners to bond their property for a term of years, but only two large tracts have been secured to date. Others declare they want more money, especially after this good showing developed. Bussey and Horton intend spending $100,000 in boring wells in search of oil.

AFTER AUBURY'S SCALP.

Monterey Coal Company Wants Him Ousted for Alleged Attacks Upon It.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Monterey Coal Company has taken steps to have Lewis E. Aubury ousted from office because of his attacks on that company, claiming it has no known deposits of marketable coal, and that it is depending upon the values of another company's property to prove its value—in others words, charging it with being a wild-cat concern.

W. H. Davies, local representative of the coal company, appeared before Gov. Gillett today, and requested him to look into the accusations and ascertain whether Aubury was justified in his public utterances. The Governor told Davies if he had any charges to make against Aubury to make them in a formal manner, and they would receive consideration.

Davies stated that fifteen other coal companies will back his company in its efforts to bring Aubury to time.

MYSTERIOUSLY KILLED.

Andrew Kloman III, Grandson to Former Partner of Carnegie, Shot in Pittsburgh.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 12.—Andrew Kloman III, aged 24, a grandson of Andrew Kloman, a partner of Andrew Carnegie in the pioneer iron and steel business, was found shot through the head and the shoulder on the Grant boulevard, near Center avenue, early today, and died this afternoon.

The young man was hurried to a hospital in a critical condition, and members of his family were summoned to his bedside.

Relatives of young Kloman, who is employed by the Carnegie Steel Company, claim he was the victim of a highwayman, and declare a sum of money, his watch and several papers are missing from his pockets. The police are puzzled over the mysterious shooting and are not ready to accept the theory that Kloman was held up, robbed and shot.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 12.—According to figures compiled by State Mineralogist Aubury, the [illegible] for California for 1907 is [illegible], a gain of $3,921,864 over the [illegible].

COLLISION.

STEAMERS HIT IN DENSE FOG.

Passenger Boats Crash Into Each Other.

Chippewa and Sentinel in an Accident at Sea.

Panic Is Stopped by Cool Headed Men.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SEATTLE, Sept. 12.—In a dense fog about 8:45 this morning, the Chippewa, a large steel steamer, on the Victoria run for the International Steamship Company, crashed into the Sentinel, owned by the Kitsap County Transportation Company, and bringing about thirty-five prominent men and women from Crystal Springs, a fashionable summer colony on Bainbridge Island, to Seattle.

The force of the blow swung the Sentinel alongside the larger vessel, and felled several women to the deck, cutting the wife of a South Bend physician behind the ear. The vessels were lashed together and the passengers of the Sentinel went aboard the Chippewa over the gangplank. There was excitement on both boats, and cool-headed men on the Sentinel had to use force to prevent men and women from leaping overboard.

The Chippewa hit the Sentinel just abaft the stem, and smashed the bow like an egg shell. Had the blow been struck six feet farther astern, the Sentinel would have been cut to pieces and there would have been a great loss of life.

Officers on both ships kept their heads and did all in their power to quiet the passengers. The Sentinel is said to have suffered about $1000 damage. She was placed on the King & Wynn dry dock at West Seattle, and will return to the run Monday morning.

FOR CHEAPER BERTHS.

PULLMAN RATE TO BE PROBED.

COMMERCE COMMISSION WILL MAKE INVESTIGATION.

St. Paul Man Says Charges Can Be Reduced Fifty Per Cent. and Still Return Profit and Advocates Less Charge for Upper Berths. Hearing on Thursday.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A general investigation of the Pullman company, its schedule of rates and its alleged discriminations, is to be begun by the Interstate Commerce Commission in Chicago next Thursday, according to plans announced today.

The case grows out of complaints filed with the commission by George S. Loftus, a former railroad man of St. Paul. He declared that rates charged by the Pullman company can be reduced 50 per cent. and still yield large profits. He also maintains that a smaller charge should be made for an upper than for a lower berth.

Mr. Loftus first complained of Pullman rates between the Twin Cities and Chicago. A hearing on this complaint was begun in St. Paul nearly a year ago, but was adjourned to be taken up again in Chicago. A little later a second complaint was filed by Mr. Loftus, asking that a general investigation be made of the Pullman company's rates. The hearing Thursday will include both complaints.

Commissioner Lane will probably hear the case. Mr. Loftus will be represented by Attorney James S. Manahan of St. Paul.

Western Society of California Pioneers Pass Over to Keeping of California Society of Chicago Memories and Traditions It Has Borne for Half a Century.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With simple, but impressive ceremony, the fifteen surviving members of the Western Society of California Pioneers, today, passed over to the keeping of the California Society of Chicago the memories, the traditions and the responsibilities, which they have borne for over half a century.

The ceremony took place in the Grand Pacific Hotel, where the members of the two societies met to celebrate the fifty-eighth anniversary of the admission of California into the Union. It was also the eighteenth annual meeting of the Western Society of California Pioneers.

One year ago there were fifty of the pioneers at the annual meeting; today there were but fifteen.

HIGH UP.

WEDDING WILL BE ROMANTIC.

AT SUNSET ON MOUNTAIN OVERLOOKING SIX STATES.

Miss Allen Tupper of New York City to Marry Alfred Galpin Wilkes of Los Angeles on Highest Point in Catskills as Sun Is Sinking in the West.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Miss Allen Tupper, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Allen H. Tupper of Gramercy Park, this city, whose marriage to Alfred Galpin Wilkes of Los Angeles will take place on September 16, will have a sunset wedding at the Overlook Mountain home, on the highest residence portion of the Catskills.

From the verandas of the dwelling can be seen the Hudson River and portions of New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Vermont, New Hampshire and Massachusetts.

Miss Tupper's father, who is to perform the ceremony, is pastor of the First Baptist Church, Brooklyn. The bridegroom-to-be is a son of Judge T. A. Wilkes of Los Angeles, and is vice-president of the Commoners of America, an insurance company of that city.

A link connecting Miss Tupper and Mr. Wilkes with the past was the strong friendship existing years ago in England between their respective grandfathers, who afterward came to this country, one settling in New England and the other in South Carolina.

While on a visit to California, Miss Tupper, representing the southern branch, met Mr. Wilkes, her distant cousin, at the residence of Col. Alfred Reynolds. Out of that meeting the coming marriage is the result.

Both are kin to Martin Farquhar Tupper, as well as to Sir Richard Tupper of Canada. Following the wedding will be an old-fashioned Virginia supper, at which the heart-shaped menu cards will bear the Tupper crest. The picturesque festivities are to conclude with a cotillion.

The bride will be given away by her mother. She will be gowned in ivory white satin crepe, ornamented with Duchesse lace and pearl ornaments. Her flowers will be white roses and orchids.

REVELATIONS.

SENSATION IN BOOTH AFFAIRS.

FISH TRUST WRECKED ON ROCK OF DECEPTION.

Investigation Said to Have Traced Frauds to One Officer High up and to Have Disclosed Double Set of Books—Two Sets of Employees Involved.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Sensational developments came this afternoon in the affairs of A. Booth & Co., whose business was put into the hands of a receiver last Wednesday. It was declared that the alleged deceptions practiced by the auditing department were traceable to a single officer and on top of this was spread a rumor that the use of a double set of books had been revealed.

Previous to his denouement developments followed one another thick and fast during the day and financial discussions all over town, outside of pending business, were centered in startling disclosures as they were made one by one.

At the moment there are mutual incriminations. The present management accuses the old and vice versa. It appears that every fresh clerical staff knew of what had been done by the preceding set of employés, but succeeding rosters suppressed the methods of their predecessors.

It was not until the company had come to the end of its bonding ability that its condition became known. For two years, it is alleged, the true state of the organization's quick assets were "corrected" for the beleft of old and prospective creditors. But the vital point of the investigators is to be the nature of the "investments" made.

It is asserted that certain money which was supposed to have been used in the purchase of additional property was really diverted to acquire the company's own securities. Representatives of creditor banks are to hold a meeting here next Monday with a view to a complete reorganization of the concern.

INDICTED FOR FREIGHT FRAUD.

Illinois Terminal Railway and Glass Company Must Stand Trial on Charge.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

QUINCY (Ill.) Sept. 12.—The Federal grand jury today returned joint indictments against the Illinois Terminal Railway Company and the Illinois Glass Company of Alton for alleged frauds in transcontinental shipments. It is alleged that the railway company received through shipments from the Indiana gas belt and that cars were sent out by them at the glass works at Alton. The glass works took out glass bottles and glass stock, and then reloaded the cars with their own shipments consigned to other parties on the Pacific Coast and in this way benefitted 11 cents a hundred at the expense of western railroads.

These are the first cases of the kind brought before the Interstate Commerce Commission and much importance is attached to the outcome.

The matter was presented to the grand jury by L. B. Johnson of Washington, attorney for the Interstate Commerce Commission.

MORMONS DEPORTED.

BOSTON (Mass.) Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Despite their appeals to the immigration authorities in Washington and the efforts of the Mormon church in their behalf, nine converts, who arrived here August 23 on the steamship Republic from Liverpool, were today deported. They were George and Catherine Roth, their six children, ranging from 8 years to 3 months, and Delphine Dodsworth, an English girl of 21, who admitted belief in the practices of polygamy. Miss Dodsworth wept bitterly when placed on the steamer, protesting the laws of the United States were cruel and unjust. The Roths were deported on the ground that they were assisted in reaching this country.

OLD QUESTION.

IRISH PROBLEM IS UNSOLVED.

Financial End of Purchase Scheme Breaks Down.

Nationalist Agitation Again Threatens.

Cash not Available, New Crisis Appears.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Unless steps are taken by the Asquith government to remove the grievances in Ireland most of the fruits of the agrarian movement will be lost and the coming winter will see a renewal of nationalist agitation, with all this would imply. The financial part of the Irish land-purchase scheme has broken down.

It is one of the principal objects of the American visit of John Redmond and Joseph Devlin to explain to friends of Ireland beyond the seas that the discontent and disturbances which may seem unreasonable to them are the logical results of an inexcusable delay on the part of the imperial authorities in establishing urgently needed reforms connected with the land question.

According to the scheme of the land act of 1903—a measure hailed by Mr. Healy as a "superb solution of the Irish question"—the landlords were to be paid in cash, raised through the issuance of stock guaranteed by Parliament, to the extent of 100,000,000 pounds, and Parliament was to provide a bonus of 12,000,000 pounds for the landlords.

The cash is not available, and cannot be had for many years unless a new scheme is adopted. The operations of the act are at a standstill and Ireland faces a new crisis.

STEP FORWARD.

CONGO REFORM NOW IN SIGHT.

BELGIAN SENATE'S MOVE MEETS APPROVAL.

London and Washington, However, Are not Entirely Satisfied and Sir Edward Grey Sends Note Asking for Definite Information as to What Will Be Done.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Reforms along the "Dreadful Congo" are at last brought within the range of practical polities through the adoption of the Congo annexation treaty and the colonial charter by the Belgian Senate.

But the end is not yet. London and Washington have to be consulted before this dark chapter in international history is closed. Mr. Root and Sir Edward Grey are acting together and the latter is sending a fresh note to the Belgian government asking what steps will be taken by Belgium for the abolition of evils which have been an offense to civilization.

"We may be sure," says an evening paper, "that Great Britain and the United States, having put a hand to this plow, will not look back."

CHAMPAGNE CROP FAILS.

Big Loss to Growers but not General Disaste ras There Is Old Disaster as There Is Old

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Because of failure of this year's champagne harvest those interested in the department of Marne hope Parliament, moved by their distress, will take effective measures to limit the use of the name champagne to wines grown in the department of Marne and a few communes in Aisne. Mildew has ruined the crop this year. While the average output is 45,000,000 bottles in ordinary years, this year it will scarcely exceed 2,000,000 bottles. This need not mean an immediate increase in the price of champagne, as the average sale is 36,000,000 bottles, and there is a surplus stock of 112,000,000 bottles.

One hectare this year only averages 300 litres, worth about $500, while the mere cost of cultivating a hectare is $500. The loss to growers already is millions of dollars. Thirty-two thousand casks of wine grown outside the champagne district are expected to reach Marne soon, and they will be champagnized and sold as local product.

JUMPS TO HER DEATH. SPECTATORS HORRIFIED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

PARIS, Sept. 12.—Still another woman has sought the Arcade Triomphe as a means of putting an end to her life. The act of today was particularly horrifying. As the woman jumped, her dress caught on a cornice, and she hung suspended for several minutes. She was in full view of the horror-stricken spectators below and the sightseers on the platform. The latter tried to rescue her, but before any one could get to the place where she was, her dress gave way, and she dropped to the pavement below, where she was crushed to death.

The identity of the suicide has not yet been established. She was dressed expensively.

Many of the rivers and smaller streams have overflowed, inundating valleys and doing great damage.

The new extension of the Southern Pacific railroad has been washed out in many places.

EUCHARIST CONGRESS.

ASQUITH FORBIDS THE CHURCH PROCESSION.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LONDON, Sept. 12.—The agitation by the extreme Protestants against the procession to be held tomorrow in connection with the Eucharistic Congress has apparently ended with forcing the government's hand.

The announcement that Premier Asquith had intervened in the matter, and that as a consequence there had been some modification of arrangements was made tonight at a mass meeting of 10,000 in Albert Hall, where it caused an uproar.

As soon as Cardinal Van Nuttelli, who was accompanied by the brilliant array of cardinals and bishops, took the chair, Archbishop Bourne arose and said that he had a statement to make which would be a source of disappointment and pain. He had received a communication from Premier Asquith on Thursday, deprecating Sunday's procession and advocating its abandonment. This announcement was greeted with groans and cries of "Shame!" by the assemblage.

Archbishop Bourne continued that he had replied to Mr. Asquith that he could not act on a private intimation, whereupon the Premier answered that the communication was purely confidential and must not be published. The archbishop insisted that if a change in the proposed programme was necessary Mr. Asquith must take the responsibility of making a public request.

The Premier replied that in the government's opinion it would be better in the interest of order and good feeling that the proposed ceremonial, the legality of which was open to question, should not take place.

There were further cries of "Shame!" and after a prolonged interruption, Archbishop Bourne continued, saying that he had replied to the Premier that "In deference to your wishes all the elements of an ecclesiastical ceremonial will be eliminated.

"The procession of cardinals and bishops will walk in court dress, and we expect the government to insure comfort and courtesy to our honored guests."

The archbishop added amid a renewed uproar, that the ceremonial procession would be held within the cathedral walls, and that the benediction would be given to the multitude from the balcony of the cathedral. He exhorted the people loyally to accept the arrangement and behave with dignity and self-respect.

A message was read from the Pope expressing the greatest satisfaction at the successful inauguration of the congress, and blessing with all his heart the bishops and clergy, who had contributed "to the consoling success of this solemn manifestation of Catholic faith among the English people."

Before the Eucharistic Congress met it inspired very little attention in England outside of Catholic circles. Few realized that it was to be the largest meeting of Roman Catholics in Great Britain since the reformation. If nothing else served to impress these facts upon the public it would be the great crowds who choked the streets in the neighborhood of Westminster Cathedral since the services began, and the number of foreign priests seen everywhere about the city.

Beside the clergy there are many of the Catholic laity here, citizens of France being in the majority.

Judging from the number of letters which have poured into the newspaper offices from Protestants considerable feeling exists among a certain number of members of the established church that the Church of Rome should have chosen London for such a meeting. They apparently regard it as a move on the part of Rome toward the conversion of the English. On the other hand many Protestants write urging that the visitors be given the fullest exhibition of English liberty and toleration.

All the newspapers discuss the questions that have arisen because of the congress. The Spectator today says: "It is impossible to deny that this assemblage of the princes of the church and the leader members of the Roman hierarchy from all parts of the world bears the appearance of the administration, and almost of a challenge, which excites apprehension in respectable quarters and has given rise to regrettable effusions of bigotry in others. An unfounded idea has been disseminated that the congress is a move in the campaign for restoration of the temporal power of the papacy and the reëstablishment of direct relations with the Vatican."

It is certain that a great multitude will be on the streets during tomorrow's procession and the police have made preparations to deal with the situation. Today nearly 20,000 pupils of the Catholic schools of London gathered on the Thames embankment and marched under the banners of the various societies to the house of the Archbishop of Westminster from a balcony of which they were reviewed by the archbishop and Cardinal Van Nuttelli.

BREAKS RECORD AGAIN.

Cody, and Capt. Dunn of our army, who have been making experiments for some time. The Wright brothers are the pioneers, though, and they are perfect."

MAKE SLIGHT CHANGES.

Wright's assistants, C. W. Taylor and C. W. Furnass, spent part of today making a few changes in the aëroplane, which were determined upon by the aëroplanist after the flight made yesterday for the purpose of determining the rate of speed at which the machine has been traveling. The sprocket of the shaft now has ten teeth. The gearing will be reduced by substituting a sprocket with nine teeth. This will result in a greater number of revolutions of the shaft in proportion to the propeller, thereby increasing the power, but diminishing the speed. The latter will then be increased by giving greater speed to the motor.

In his flights so far Mr. Wright has used his motor at 1240 revolutions per minute, but when the new sprocket is in, he intends to increase it to 1450 revolutions. With this change the aviator expects to maintain an average speed of at least forty-four miles an hour, which would give him a bonus of $10,000 if this speed were maintained in the official speed trial. So far the motor has never failed and during the longest flights has never become overheated, nor shown any indications of skipping to any serious extent.

MOTOR RELIABLE.

On one or two flights after it had been running for over an hour, the motor skipped one cylinder out of the four in every ten seconds or more. This made no apparent difference in the speed of the aëroplane and Mr. Wright considers it of no significance.

It has been suggested to M. Wright by several officers that he put a rim around his propellers, thus securing a gyroscopic effect.

"That would be a great disadvantage," was Mr. Wright's comment. "The machine would then travel in a straight line and that is just what we don't want. We want to have its control absolutely in our power."

WAR VALUE DISCUSSED.

The chance remark of a sergeant of artillery at Fort Myer during the flights was the basis for a discussion of one of the important features of the government interest in the aërial craft for war purposes.

The discussion took place at a dinner tendered to Mr. Wright by naval officers.

Said the sergeant: "Airships are no good to launch a shell from because you can't get the 'centrifugal force' that is necessary to hit an object."

The idea which the non-commissioned officer intended to convey was that the whirling motion given a shell by a modern steel bore gun could not be accomplished in dropping an explosive shell from an airship.

The main facts brought out in the discussion of the aëroplane as an instrument of war were that a machine such as that of the Wright brothers would be practically invulnerable as a target for the enemy's guns; that with a little target practice an explosive could be dropped on a war vessel with damaging results, and that the aërial war craft could be launched from the deck of a battleship.

HAS PRACTISED AIMING.

Mr. Wright said he made experiments with a swinging weight to see how closely he could hit objects over which he was flying.

"I found that after a little practice, it became comparatively easy to put the weight just where I wanted it," said Mr. Wright.

"One allowance which must be made is the effect of a wind striking the course of the airship at right angles."

"On your present machine, how much weight could be added in the shape of a gun?" Mr. Wright was asked by Lieut. Sweet, the naval officer detailed to observe the Fort Myer aëronautical tests.

"One hundred and fifty pounds," replied Mr. Wright.

The merits of launching an explosive from a gun were then discussed.

Mr. Wright said there would not be a sufficient "kick" to cause the aëroplane to diverge from its course. A shell might be dropped into the funnel of a warship, causing terrible damage to the machinery and completing its work of destruction by bursting the boilers. It was suggested by one of the officers present that attacks could be made by a number of aëroplanes as is now done by the torpedo boats.

It was pointed out that the cheapness of the aëroplane and the fact that but one life for each ship would be sacrificed would make these attacks much more economical from both a humanitarian and a monetary viewpoint.

EDISON DISCUSSES AIRSHIPS. BELIEVES THEY ARE COMING.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) Sept. 12.—Thomas A. Edison, the inventor, who is taking a vacation on the Pacific Coast, says that neither the aëroplane nor the dirigible balloon will successfully solve the question of navigating the air. He said:

"I am fully convinced that the time is near at hand when it will be possible to sail through the air as easily and as safely as we now go by land or by water. I have little faith in the aëroplane or the balloon as a means of aërial navigation.

"The aëroplane of the Wright brothers depends too much on the personal equation. Place some other man in that aëroplane, and it would not work. It depends upon the skillful handling of the invention by its inventor. I look to see the application of a principle different from either in the successful airship. The airships of the future will be lifted by a mechanism something like a spiral. It will have the ability to rise without first giving it forward momentum, and it will not imitate closely the flight of birds.

"With the helical appliance for lifting—an improved device for balancing in the air—the future airship will sail into the teeth of the wind, will rise to heights where favorable currents may be found, or skim the surface of the earth. Yes, navigation of the air will surely come. It is simply a question of applying mechanical knowledge in a new way."

MAY FORCE BINGHAM OUT.

GOTHAM POLICE COMMISSIONER TO RETIRE.

Magazine Article Ascribing Fifty Per Cent. of Crimes to Jews Said to Be Responsible for Political Pressure Brought to Bear on Mayor McClellan.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Police Commissioner Bingham will end his rule of the police department on Monday, according to a rumor at police headquarters today. He is being forced out, the latest gossip has it, by the influence of the Jews of New York, who today filed a petition of protest at the Mayor's office.

Many of the prominent Jews of the city were stirred up by an article in the North American Review signed by Commissioner Bingham, in which the latter declared that 50 per cent. of the criminals were Jews. Experts were employed to examine police and criminal court records and the Jews assert that Bingham did their race a gross injustice.

Political pressure is said to have a great deal of weight with Mayor McClellan. There are one hundred thousand Jewish votes in New York and Tammany leaders have been worried since Bingham's attack on the race. Although they may be at outs in other matters, both Tammany Leader Murphy and Senator McCarren of Brooklyn are said to be of one mind on the Bingham question. They want him ousted, and ousted quickly.

DAVIS'S WIFE IN CALIFORNIA.

OMAHA, Sept. 12.—A letter has been received by the Davis family from Mrs. Charles E. Davis, in California, inquiring about the troubles of her husband and indicating that she would come to Omaha if necessary. The family refuses to divulge her California address. She has been separated from her husband seven years.

BERLIN CONGRESS.

AMERICA HAS LEADING PLACE.

Delegates Will Work for World's Peace.

Have Two New Arbitration Propositions.

Sanctioned in Principle by State Department.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] America promises to play a leading role at the conference of the Inter-Parliamentary Peace Union which convenes next Wednesday. Not only will the American delegates take a prominent part in the programme of the conference, but they will put forward some new arbitration propositions which, it is the belief of their leaders, will furnish a basis for some of the most important discussions of the week. These propositions which, it is understood, have been sanctioned in principle by the State Department at Washington and are now being carefully reviewed in Berlin will be substantially as follows:

The adoption of the principle that in no case submitted to the international court of arbitration shall an award be handed down which involves the loss or alienation of any territory to which either nation concerned now has an undisputed claim.

The second American proposal relates to the appointment of a special commission to determine how the proposed permanent court shall be constituted so as to insure fair numerical representation to all the participating States.

CHOLERA DEATHS MANY.

Disease in St. Petersburg Assumes Proportions of Epidemic Seventeen Years Ago.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 12.—The Asiatic cholera in St. Petersburg has assumed the proportions of the epidemic of 1891. Up to noon, today, twenty-three deaths and 109 new cases had been officially reported at the hospital.

The scourge continues to find its victims almost exclusively among the lower classes, who exist in conditions ideal for the propagation of the cholera. In one quarter, for example, there reside 10,000 workmen who have the services of but a single doctor. There are no water mains in this section and the people drink the polluted water of the canal.

GERMANS VIGILANT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BERLIN, Sept. 12.—Prof. Kirschter, of the Prussian health office, said today, that the German authorities are examining with the greatest care all immigrants from Russia, and they continue to inspect rigidly all craft coming down the Vistula, Memel and Warthe Rivers.

COLORADOANS INDORSE TAFT.

DENVER, Sept. 12.—In less than six hours of actual deliberation, the Republican State Convention today nominated a full State ticket, and Presidential electors and adopted a platform which characterized W. H. Taft as a "statesman tried in the hard school of experience," and "renews allegiance to the national organization, and indorses its platform and its candidates."

The platform commends Senator Guggenheim for his efficient and faithful services.

The State ticket follows: Supreme Court Judges—A. R. King of Delta county, Joseph C. Helm of Denver, J. M. Maxwell of Lake and Luther M. Goddard of Denver; Presidential electors—J. L. Carnahan of Mesa, Thomas F. Walsh of Arapahoe, William Story of Ouray, C. A. Ballreich of Pueblo, and John M. Springer of Denver; Congressman-at-large, James C. Burger of Denver; Governor, Jesse F. McDonold of Lake; Lieutenant-Governor, G. V. Benson of Larimer; Secretary of State, T. M. O'Connor of Boulder; Treasurer, George D. Stattler of Weld; Auditor, H. S. Stevens of Las Animas; Attorney-General, George L. Hodges of Denver; Superintendent of Public Instruction, Katherine L. Craig of Jefferson; Railroad Commissioners, W. L. Dayton of Denver, M. J. Guerin of Chaffee and G. G. Withers of Pueblo; Regents of State University, O. J. Pfeiffer of Denver and W. J. King of Saguache; State chairman, John F. Vivian of Jefferson.

HAINS WANTS DELAY.

Anticipation of Speedy Trial Dispelled by Announcement of Attorney Shay.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Anticipation that a speedy trial for Capt. Peter C. Hains, Jr., and his brother, T. Jenkins Hains, would be acceptable to both the defendant and prosecution has been dispelled by Attorney Shay of the defense who now says he will not be ready to proceed at the opening of the fall term of Queen's County Supreme Court, Monday, October 5th, despite the preparations by Dist.-Atty. Ira D. Darrion.

Instead of weeks or days, Mr. Shay says it will take months for the defense to get in shape for trial.

SEEK TO BREAK WILL.

RENO, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] What promises to be a long-fought legal battle will be started in the courts here at an early date over the $18,000 estate left by Fred Kats, who died at Sheridan, Cal., about a year ago.

According to the suit filed, the relatives of the deceased in Michigan claim that the will probated in California was a forgery; that the name was signed while Kats was suffering from a stroke of paralysis, and was gained by misrepresentation, and that it was not his last will and testament, but that a will, executed in 1907, at a later date, and left in trust in this city is the last will and testament.

The case will be tried before Judge Orr here in Reno.

RAILROAD ATTACHED.

RENO, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] W. L. Stevenson's private railroad from Wadsworth to Olinghouse, has been attached on complaints of Frank Cantion, who has served the road as master mechanic.

Cantion alleges that the company is indebted to him for $605 for services rendered and bills taken over by him for transferring merchandise to the railroad construction crews, making nearly $1200 involved in the suit. Capt. lon also sued the Nevada Consolidated Mine at Olinghouse, thus tying up all operations. With the completion of this road, about a year ago, Olinghouse held open house and Col. Stevenson entertained all who went to Olinghouse to help celebrate railroad day. The road opened with a flourish and had done a phenomenal business.

SANTA CLARA CONVENTION.

LIFE'S SEAMY SIDE.

THRONGS HUNT FOR KIDNAPERS.

Enraged Citizens Seek Man Who Stole Girls.

Are Now Satisfied He Lured Two from Home.

Fugitive Is Man Who Slew Nora Fuller.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Chicago's mysterious kidnaper, F. J. Blair, who stole little Veronica Cassidy and tried to lure away a dozen other girls, is being hunted by hundreds of enraged residents of Ravenswood, who are attempting also to clear up the mysterious disappearance of Emily Haben, 14 years old. They believe Blair kidnaped Emily, and therefore are in lynching mood. Detectives of half a dozen city police stations were sent to assist in clearing up the mystery, and after a hurried investigation they became convinced that the girl had been lured away, and that her kidnaper was Blair, whom detectives have chased all over the country. The methods used to lure Emily Haben away were identical with those of the kidnaping of the Cassidy girl.

The girl has been missing since Thursday morning, when she was seen to join a man half a block from her home.

Blair is the same man who killed Nora Fuller in San Francisco, and left her dead body in an empty house.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN JOSE, Sept. 12.—After questioning Freddie Sulphoda, the 8-year-old boy, who last evening deliberately shot and killed little Peter Bernal, Sheriff Langford and deputies state that the boy gives every evidence of being a criminal by instinct. His parents have not yet been located. Freddie says they started for Livermore a few days ago, leaving him and two younger children in the house with his uncle. The inquest on the slain boy will be held tomorrow.

CRIME BRIEFS.

Bride's Trousseau Stolen.

OAKLAND, Sept. 12.—S. H. Nelson of Watsonville, Cal., who arrived in Oakland today with his bride, complained to the police this morning that they had been robbed of all their baggage. The groom said not only was his bride's trousseau gone, but he did not even have a shirt left. The dress suit cases were stolen while they were taking a car ride before hunting a hotel.

Keene's Friend Kills Himself.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—George Crough, once wealthy, but who for many years is said to have lived on a pension provided by James R. Keene, the broker and horseman, with whom he once was allied in business, killed himself at the Hoffman House, today. He had been in ill health for some time, and was despondent.

Wyman Arrested.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 12.—H. C. Wyman, secretary of the California Boiler Works, who is alleged to have stolen upward of $5000 from the concern, was arrested in Oakland last evening and turned over to the San Francisco police.

Lack of Work Causes Suicide.

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 12.—John Orr, an aged laboring man, despondent because of lack of work, committed suicide in a Second-street lodging house tonight by drinking carbolic acid.

Indicts Professional Procurer.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 12.—The indictment of Henry Villett, member of that league of professional procurers which is known as "The Protective League of San Francisco," came from the United States grand jury yesterday, and is the most important development thus far in the crusade made by the immigration officials against the importation of girls for immoral purposes.

NEW QUARTERS.

THAW TO BE TRANSFERRED.

TO BE TAKEN TO WESTCHESTER COUNTY JAIL.

Order Is Made at Request of Present Custodian, Who Has Never Relished His Job of Caring for Slayer of Stanford White—Change Will Be Made Tomorrow.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

POUGHKEEPSIE (N. Y.) Sept. 12.—Harry K. Thaw will be transferred on Monday from the Dutchess County Jail to the jail at White Plains, Westchester county, under an order issued by Supreme Court Justice Mills at a special term in this city today.

The White Plains Jail was selected because Thaw's habeas corpus proceedings under which he hopes to obtain a jury trial as to his sanity are to be heard by Justice Mills at White Plains on September 21. Thaw would have been transferred to White Plains on that date, and the effect of Judge Mills's new order is simply to send him there a week earlier than intended.

The application was made by Edward Perkins, attorney for Sheriff Chanler, who has never liked being custodian of Thaw, and who took advantage of the report of Secretary McLaughlin, of the State Prison Commission, on conditions in the Poughkeepsie jail to ask the court to transfer Thaw.

Charles Morschauser, attorney for Thaw, made no opposition.

TO BE CITED FOR CONTEMPT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 12.—A petition for a certificate citing Hary K. Thaw for contempt for his failure to attend the second meeting of his creditors here, yesterday, was filed before Referee in Bankruptcy Blair, today, by Attorney Boyd of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., representing a Poughkeepsie hotelkeeper. Referee Blair stated that the certificate would be issued.

Referee Blair later issued the certificate.

It is now believed that Mr. Boyd will file the certificate in the United States Court and ask for a rule to force Thaw to come to Pittsburgh and show cause why he should not be punished for contempt. This will probably be done next week.

Roger O'Meara, trustee for Thaw, returned from Poughkeepsie today. He said that Thaw was well, but was not particularly anxious to come to Pittsburgh at this time unless his creditors wanted him to come.

SCIENTIST ACCUSES WIFE OF ATTEMPTING MURDER.

Dr. J. H. Carpenter Files Suit for Divorce, Naming Herbert O. Chapin as Object of Mrs. Carpenter's Infatuation—Mrs. Chapin Leaves Husband for Same Reason.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The wrecking of the homes of two Chicago families was completed today, when Dr. J. H. Carpenter, noted X-ray scientist and member of the Frances Willard hospital staff, filed suit in the Superior Court against his wife, Mary Carpenter, charging her with attempted murder by arsenical poisoning and infatuation for Herbert O. Chapin, manager of Sears, Roebuck & Co. Mrs. Chapin has left her husband and is also preparing to file suit for divorce.

In the bill for divorce, Dr. Carpenter charges his wife with numerous indiscretions, prominent among which are tete-a-tetes with Chapin, drunkenness, abusive language, threats against his life and finally an attempt to murder him by putting arsenic in his food.

Mrs. Chapin left her home yesterday and her husband admitted that she had left him on account of Mrs. Carpenter.

STEADY PLUGGING.

ADDS MILES TO RECORD.

Immense Crowd at Twenty-four-Hour Auto Race.

New World's Mark Set by Cobe and Mulford.

First and Second Places Fall to Lozier Teams.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BRIGHTON BEACH, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] At the finish of the twenty-four-hour automobile race, the positions of the teams were as follows: Lozier, Cobb and Mulford, 1107 miles; Lozier, Lynch and Michener, 1092 miles; Fiat, Parker and Copra, 1074 miles; Stearns, Laurent and Marquis, 1050 miles; Simplex, Robertson and Lescault, 1029 miles; Allen-Kingston, De Palma and Rippingill, 1025 miles; Acme, Strang and Rogers, 976 miles; Thomas, Roberts and Martin, 955 miles; S.P.O., Kjeldsen and Juhasse, 635 miles.

Amid a mighty roar from more than 20,000 throats, a huge white fifty-horse-power Lozier car, driven by Ralph Mulford, won the twenty-four-hour automobile race at 11 o'clock tonight. As the referee's huge horn screeched "finish," the Lozier machine was fifteen miles in front of the field and twenty-eight miles ahead of the world's record.

The winner's sister car, driven by Harry Michener, finished second, eighteen miles ahead of a Fiat car in charge of Parker. She, too, was thirteen miles ahead of the record.

Harry Cobe, who had steered the Lozier to the lead during the day, was fatigued a short time before the finish and he retired in favor of Mulford, his partner. Mulford continued the record pace set by Cobe, but because of tire trouble was halted several times and as a result lost much ground. Nine of the starters finished. The Renault, which went through the fence last night, and the Garford, quit for some unknown reason, hundreds of miles behind.

As the victorious cars slowly wended their way from the judge's stand, they were followed by a big mob, including many women. They jumped aboard and impeded the triumphant march for many minutes. Thousands were on the track and the efforts of the entire police force were unavailing to keep them away.

It was an extraordinary crowd. Fifteen hundred cars, carrying several thousand followers of the sport, passed through the gates and with thousands of other stylishly dressed men and women, filled the grand stand and clubhouse. In the field stand were other thousands.

Harry Cobe won the most applause. And if daredevil driving entitled him to such, he surely deserved it. With the white tassel of his cap flying through the air like a comet, he sped past the stands and around the turns with the speed of a streak of lightning.

FIRST RUGBY GAME.

Barbarian Team of San Francisco Has no Difficulty in Beating Stanford Freshmen.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In the first Rugby match of the season today the Stanford freshmen lost to the Barbarian team from San Francisco by the score of 24 to 0 in a hard-fought, though sometimes careless game.

The first half was a no-score contest, though the Barbarians fought hard to score a try, being prevented every time by the aggressive work of the freshman forwards. Six tries and three converts in the second half, secured three fast passing rushes which the freshmen were too inexperienced to stop and constituted the visitors' score, credit for which belongs principally to Elliott, the clever Barbarian captain.

In scrums and line-cuts the freshman pack proved more than a match for their opponents, and during the first half made long gains on dribbling rushes only to lose again by a well-timed kick to touch by Elliott. The freshmen back field got little opportunity to show its ability, though Brown at full-back, a former Harvard School player, did the star work of the day by long kicks into touch when playing a defensive game.

A big brace in the second half allowed the Barbarian back field to get in some passing rushes, which soon piled up the large score. Freshmen substitutes put in during the latter part of the second half, forced the Barbarians to fight hard to prevent a score.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

STOCKTON, Sept. 12.—Hal Chase was the main attraction at Oak Park this afternoon when Stockton defeated Oakland 8 to 0. He made a single and a double, stole a base, and scored twice. Moskiman was only hit twice. Shay pitched the last of the game and Dewey caught. Score:

Stockton, 8; hits, 9; errors, 2.
Oakland, 0; hits, 2; errors, 6.

Alameda, 0; hits, 2; errors, 8.

Oldfield's Fluke Victory.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 12.—Barney Oldfield won a victory today over Waltie Christie in the finals of the sweepstakes automobile contests at the Latonia track in which Oldfield, Christie and Soules were entered.

There was small exaultation to be had over the victory, as both the automobiles met with mishaps and it was only a question which would be gotten into the best shape by such hurried repairs as could be made at the track. Oldfield happened to have the better luck in this respect and he won the match in the comparatively slow time of 1m. 11s. They run another race tomorrow.

SATURDAY GOLF.

J. S. Carroll Finishes First in Battle With Col. Bogey at Match Play. Very Few Players.

On account of the hot weather, only thirteen players participated in the golf sweepstakes, 18 holes handicap match play against bogey, at the Los Angeles Country Club yesterday. Five score cards were handed in.

J. S. Carroll finished in first place, with a 2 up score, his handicap being 6 on a 4 down gross score. Newton, with a handicap of 1, was 1 up, for he made a bogey round. Steckel also finished 1 up, with a handicap of 5 on an 82 round. Frederickson, with a minus 1 handicap, finished 2 down, his gross being 1 down. Charles Mau's net score was 3 down, for with a 9 handicap, he finished 12 down on bogey.

Steckel and Newton tried to play off their tie in the finals of the contest that began last Saturday, but they again tied for the third time.

Claims Two Record Sales.

H. O. Harrison claimed two record sales last week. There have been all kinds of stories about machines sold in forty-five minutes and an hour, but Harrison claims one twenty-minute sale and another of five minutes. The new low-priced Oldsmobile was sold to J. E. Tripp. Mr. Tripp came down from Redlands, and twenty minutes after he walked into the Harrison salesroom he had purchased the car. It was not even necessary to give a demonstration. The five-minute sale was a taxicab to J. W. Owen. Mr. Owen will have four taxicabs in service here soon. The Oldsmobile cab is expected here this week.

Wonder Knocked Out.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mickey Ganlon gave proof positive tonight that he is the lad with a punch. For two rounds Paddy Livin, who came here heralded by Billy Papke as the best boy of his weight in the country, made Mickey look badly. Beginning with the third round there was a different story to tell. Mickey went after his man like a house afire and within a minute of the end of the third Ganlon caught him with a short right on the jaw and Livin went down and out.

Case Postponed.

DETROIT, Sept. 12.—Attorney Sheehan, in pleading today for a postponement of the hearing of the members of the Detroit American League game for playing a game of Sunday baseball with Cleveland two weeks ago, declared that it was "a matter of public necessity" that the team be permitted to go out to Bennett Park for morning practice. Justice Stern, who had listened gravely to the argument, thereupon postponed the hearing for a week.

Edisons Victorious.

REDLANDS, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Edison baseball team of Los Angeles defeated the Redlands nine today, score 15 to 5. Batteries: Ybarrando and Eagle, Edisons; Phelps, Glover and Gregg, Redlands. Hits, Redlands, 9; Edisons, 10.

WISE TALKS
By The "OFFICE BOY."

Do good and make money and then use that money made by doing good to make more money to do more good with. The rich man, who drops a nickel on the contribution plate and expects a golden crown, has faith to burn, and the merchant, who becomes rich by paying our bright girls three, four and five dollars a week to sell his wares at a big profit, is a philanthropist—not. I wish the good people, who seem to take so much interest in the welfare of us boys and girls, would get up a petition asking every merchant in town to agree to pay his salesladies, cashiers, wrappers, in short, every woman employed in his establishment, not less than $10 a week, it would accomplish more good, relieve more suffering and lessen more crime than any movement ever advanced. The old man would rather make it $15, but $10 would not work a hardship on any honest, legitimate merchant. Now then, here's a chance to do a great good to a lot of poor, underpaid, worthy young women. I can't for the life of me see why people don't trade at stores where the men and women are well paid, well fed and happy and contented, like the boys and girls are in the Silverwood Stores.

URIC ACID GRAVEL.

Is Caused by the Kidneys Being Unable To Carry the poisonous waste Matter out of the Blood.

The urine of persons suffering from uric acid or gravel is generally scanty, and after it has stood a while, a reddish, sediment like brick dust forms in it. In advanced stages the uric acid sometimes appears as fine sand, or large crystals.

Those who pass gravel in any considerable quantity are usually troubled with inflammation of the kidneys, bladder and urinary organs, sour stomach, indigestion, heartburn, gout and rheumatism.

CURED BY WARNER'S SAFE CURE.

"I have used Safe Cure for chills caused by uric acid poison in my system and I have been perfectly cured. It has done for me what I have never known any other medicine to do. It cures people in the South who suffer much from malaria, which always affects the kidneys. If all the doctors would prescribe Safe Cure instead of quinine for cases of malaria there would be less bad after effects, as quinine does not remove the disease germs from the system like Safe Cure. I take 'Safe Pills' when I need a gentle laxative."—MRS. M. E. DEAN, Treas. Lotus Club, Chattanooga, Tenn.

IF IN DOUBT MAKE THIS TEST.

Put some urine in a glass or bottle. After it has stood 24 hours, if it is cloudy, or contains a reddish-brown sediment, or if particles float about in it your kidneys are diseased and unable to do their work, and if not attended to at once Bright's Disease, diabetes, rheumatism, gout, uric acid, inflammation of the bladder, gallstones or urinary troubles will develop and prove fatal in a short time.

ANALYSIS FREE.

If after making this test you have any doubt as to the development of the disease in your system, send a sample of your urine, putting your name and address on the package, to the Medical Department, Warner's Safe Cure Co., Rochester, N. Y., and our doctors will analyze it and send you a report, with advice and medical booklet, free.

Safe Cure is the only absolutely safe and certain cure for all these forms of kidney, liver and bladder diseases. It is purely vegetable, free from harmful drugs found in many so-called kidney cures, contains no sediment and is pleasant to take.

For sale at all drug stores, or direct, 50c and $1.00 a bottle.

Refuse substitutes and imitations. They are worthless and very often exceedingly dangerous. Ask for Warner's Safe Cure, it will cure you.

WARNER'S SAFE PILLS move the bowels gently and aid a speedy cure.

Trial Bottle Free To convince every sufferer from disease of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood that WARNER'S SAFE CURE will cure them, a trial bottle will be sent FREE OF CHARGE, postpaid, to any one who will write WARNER'S SAFE CURE CO., Rochester, N. Y., and mention having seen this liberal offer in The Times. The genuineness of this offer is fully guaranteed.

HORRIBLE.

"BLACK HAND" SLASHES HIM.

ody of Italian Found Cut in Many Places.

Apparently Butchered, Then Hid in Alley.

ridence of Awful Struggle Against Knives.

Slashed almost beyond recognition, the corpse of George La Rocca, an Italian who lived at No. 340 Summit avenue, was discovered in a dark alley, leading off Lawrence street, between Enterprise and Hunter streets, early this morning. Circumstances point to "black-hand" work in the affair.

The discovery was made by two negro women who were passing along Enterprise street. They hastily gave the alarm and several detectives were dispatched to the scene. The man had evidently been dead several hours. The police are inclined to believe that the murder was committed elsewhere and the body carried into the alley. Though the corpse gave evidence of a fierce struggle, there were no traces of such in the neighborhood where it was found, and the murderers had laid the remains out with great care, folding the arms over the breast and straightening the legs.

DESPERATE STRUGGLE.

On the body were found fourteen knife wounds, any one of a dozen of which would have caused his death. That there was a desperate battle before La Rocca was done to his death, is evidenced by the fact that the insides of his hands were horribly lacerated, showing that he madly grasped the knives of his assailants in his frantic efforts to save his life.

The left hand was almost severed at the wrist, while the right was so cut up that the fingers hung only by shreds. One of the knife wounds evidently pierced the heart, while the lungs were punctured in several places.

ROBBERY NOT MOTIVE.

That robbery was not the motive of the murder is made clear by the fact that, on the bloody corpse, was found a watch and a ring. The pockets of the dead man had not been disturbed, apparently, though all other evidence pointed to deliberate work on the part of the slayers.

La Rocca was a cement worker and lived with his brother and sister. He was in the habit of sending money back to Italy in regular installments, and was considered a very steady man. He was 30 years old.

The man appears to have incurred the enmity of some of the Italians of the city, and it is asserted that, from time to time, he received "black-hand" letters, threatening him with death. He always made light of the communications and was given to boasting that he was not to be frightened by any such theatrical means.

The remains were removed to Pierce morgue.

SMOKE HANGS OVER CHICAGO.

Forest Fires in Northern Minnesota Sends Haze to Lower End of Lake Michigan.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—A haze, like that of Indian summer, but due to the forest fires of northern Minnesota and the burning of peat beds at Norway, Wis., spread over Chicago today.

The grayness of the air was first popularly attributed to fog, but inquiry at the weather bureau showed this was an error. The smoke hung all along the lake shore to the north, according to reports from Milwaukee and intermediate towns.

Recently the wind has been from the west and southwest, but last night it shifted to the northwest, carrying with it the smoky evidence of northern forests and of the Wisconsin peat fields.

BEAT HIM TO IT.

BANKER GETS HIMSELF FINED.

TOOK NO CHANCES ON LAWYER AS RIVAL.

Globe Citizen After Fight With Attorney Hastens to Justice, Swears Out Complaint and Pays Ten Dollars, to Save Himself from Prosecution by Expert at Law.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GLOBE (Ariz.) Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] To get himself arrested and fined was the expedient hit upon by N. Milick, a Slavonian banker of this city, after a fight with Attorney W. G. Scott, of whose legal ability he was afraid.

The men had been discussing some business matter on the street this afternoon when the argument became so hot that both struck out at the same time. They were quickly separated by bystanders, and the attorney returned to his office, but the banker began to ponder upon what the law could do.

He went before Justice Rawlings, swore out a complaint against himself, pleaded guilty and cheerfully paid a fine of $10.

"That man is a lawyer," said Milick, on leaving the courtroom. "If I had not done that, he might have sworn out a complaint against me. He could have argued his own case, and I would have had to take chances with a lawyer that might be a friend of his. I thought it was cheaper to pay the fine right away. I have nothing to say."

PRESIDENT IS BUSY.

Tells Inquirers at Garden Party That His Main Object Is to Get Taft Elected.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

OYSTER BAY, Sept. 12.—President Roosevelt took time this afternoon to spend an hour at a garden party and fair given at John A. Week's country home, "Tranquility," for the benefit of the Nassau Hospital at Mineola, L. I.

With his son, Theodore, he rode down from Sagamore Hill, dressed in khaki, and soon he was mingling with the many society people present. Some one remarked to him that it was very good of him to come to their fair at a time when he must be a very busy man.

To this he replied: "I am very busy now. My main interest at present is in getting Mr. Taft elected. When that is done, I'll be through with my job as President. Then I'll turn my attention to Africa."

German Army Officer Surpasses Zeppelin's Feat With Military Balloon.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BERLIN, Sept. 12.—A record flight was made by the military semi-rigid dirigible balloon under command of Maj. Gross, who returned here shortly before noon today, after being in the air for thirty-four hours and two minutes.

This surpasses the record made by Count Zeppelin, when on July 1st he traversed the greater part of Northern Switzerland, occupying twelve hours in the journey. The new record which was entirely unexpected is greeted with enthusiasm.

DEMOCRATS GIVE HALF-CENT.

Ratio of Contributions to Bryan Fund in Oklahoma Is Low, Per Capita.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GUTHRIE (Okla.) Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Notwithstanding the fact that Gov. C. N. Haskell, treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, has pleaded through personal letters to Democratic newspapermen throughout Oklahoma to raise money for the national campaign fund, and notwithstanding that a majority of the Democratic papers are making direct appeals to their readers for funds, thus far the ratio of donations from the 200,000 Democrats in the State is but a half cent each.

FLAGSTAFF (Ariz.) Sept. 12.—Henry Horton, an old pioneer, and one of the first men to come west over the old Santa Fé trail, was found dead in a sheep camp sixty miles north of here yesterday morning by a cowpuncher who happened by the camp. So far as known he came to his death by natural causes.

BUILDING WAR VESSELS.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—An official statement issued at the Navy Department shows that naval vessels now under construction number twenty. Of these, four are battleships, five torpedo-boat destroyers, seven submarine torpedo boats, two colliers and two tugboats. With the exception of the colliers and the tugboats, all the work is being done at private shipyards. These figures soon will be increased by the addition of the battleship Florida and three colliers, ten torpedo-boat destroyers and submarines.

The Cat's Characteristics.

Cats, rather than belong to a new master, will cling in grief to the old walls and refuse to be taken away from them. But if they can follow their master they will go with him to the end of the world. One must not forget that they are extraordinarily nervous and timid, and from timidity easily lose their heads and run away, they themselves know not whither. They must be well protected and made to feel that they are guarded and cared for. We must not, however, expect a cat to obey like a dog. It is a free and independent little beast—a cousin of the lion—a tropical animal which needs great warmth in order to become most beautiful and as large as its nature permits.—[Century Magazine.

ANOTHER MARK.

RECORD RUN IN HURDLES.

Shaw Gallops Over Sticks in Fifteen Seconds.

Garrells Unable to Compete Because of Injury.

Olympian Athletes Take Part in Amateur Meet.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—A world's record for the 120-yard high hurdles was established today at the annual meet of the Central Amateur Athletic Association on Marshall Field.

The meeting was an easy victory for the Chicago Athletic Association, which scored 89 points, compared with 19 points for its nearest rival, the University of Chicago.

The new high hurdle record of 120 yards was established by Arthur B. Shaw of Joliet, Ill., a graduate of Dartmouth, who lowered the time of J. C. Garrells, 15 1-5s. to 15s. amid a burst of cheers from a large crowd that filled the stands. His time might easily have been even better had he had opposition but he finished far in the lead and slowed down as he approached the tape.

Once before at an eastern meet Shaw did the distance in 15 flat but the record was not allowed.

The absence of John C. Garrells was the most bitter disappointment of the afternoon, so far as track events were concerned. Garrells participated in the weight events, but owing to an injured leg did not enter the hurdles. J. A. Rector of the University of Virginia, who was expected to try for a world's record at 120 meters, did not attend the meet.

Summary:

One-mile run—J. R. Murphy (C.A.A.) won; time, 4m., 40 4-5s.

The 440-yard dash—M. A. Merriam (U.C.) won; H. P. Ramsey (C.A.A.) second; time, 50 2-5s.

DECREASED NUMBER OF IDLE CARS NOW.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Another big boost toward prosperity is indicated in the bi-weekly report of the Car Efficiency Committee of the American Railway Association, which was issued today. The total of surplus cars on the railroads of the United States and Canada has been reduced to 222,632, a decrease of 30,371 since the last report. Of this decrease 21,723 are box cars and 7253 coal and gondola. The decrease in box cars is the largest since the maximum surplus of 413,605 was reached.

An increasing activity in repairing cars is shown by a reduction of 7662 in the number of bad order cars.

Small shortages are reported on a few railroads, the shortages totaling 1418. Regarding this condition, Arthur Hale, chairman of the committee, says:

"Whenever these shortages are of such a nature and extent as to justify action by the committee, the conditions are brought to the attention of the roads reporting a surplus and arrangements made to transfer the equipment to the road having use for it. During the past week the committee has been called upon in several instances for assistance in preventing local shortages."

The Cheapest Fat Reducer Is the Best

The attention of all who are half choked and generally bedeviled by an excess of fat which, by the way, always seems more excessively excessive during the sultry season than any other, is called to the Marmola Prescription Tablets.

Seventy-five cents secures enough of these remarkable fat reducers from any druggist to last you a good while, in fact, it buys an extra large case. This is enough to make a very desirable change in almost anyone's weight. Taken one after each meal and at bedtime, the loss of as much as a pound of fat a day has been attained innumerable times.

This is a royal result that seems all the more remarkable when one realizes these tablets are cheaper by a half than anything else your druggist has. But the net loss they bring about is not the only good feature of these tablets. They are pleasant to take; don't disturb the stomach; don't require one to exercise a particle or diet a mouthful, and last, but not least, do not cause wrinkles. They reduce one quickly but evenly—naturally. They produce, in short, the identical results of the famous Marmola Prescription, with which they are identical in composition. Try a case. If your druggist is sold out then write the makers, the Marmola Company of Detroit, to send you one by mail.

WASHINGTON.

PROBING OUR WASTEFULNESS.

National Conservation Commission Investigating.

Is Hunting It Down in All Its Varied Forms.

Will Try to Find Some Way of Checking It.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—The National Conservation Commission has just made public the first of its schedules on which the inventory of the country's natural resources is being conducted.

It is plainly evident from the inquiries being sent out that the commission intends to hunt down waste in all its varied forms, and to devise some means to prevent it. This is apparent in the general schedules to each of the four sections of the commission—waters, forests, lands and minerals. For instance, the schedule relating to lands inquires into waste of soil by erosion. That schedule also suggests waste through "bad agricultural methods." The lands schedule likewise goes into waste in the carrying capacity of the public range in the West. The section on waters is inquiring into how much land capable of irrigation is wasted by not being irrigated. More important still is its suggestve inquiries, tending to show that we are wasting our waterways to an alarming extent by not using them as we should.

Perhaps the greatest form of waste brought out in the entire schedule is that relating to water power. Two of the inquiries are as follows:

"Are existing developed water powers put to their full use?"

"To what extent can coal be saved by the substitution of water power?"

Under the head of flood waters, the commission inquires as "to what extent are flood waters wasted."

The minerals section of the commission is seeking to find out "the nature and extent of waste in the mining, extraction and use of mineral products," and "methods of preventing or lessening this waste."

The commission is also conducting a census by correspondence to find out the common waste in "the wood-using industries."

The returns from the inquiries will form part of the report of the commission.

PURCHASES TINY DOG.

Philadelphia Woman Buys Mlle. Atom, Supposed to Be Smallest Canine in World.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Mlle. Atom, the smallest of griffon dogs, and which weighs twenty-five ounces, has been sold for a price generally understood among dog fanciers to have been $40 an ounce.

She is the smallest $1000 worth of dog ever seen in this country, and so far as is known nothing so tiny of that breed has ever been sold in the world. The record for littleness had been held until her advent by a griffon weighing three pounds.

Mlle. Atom was purchased by Mrs. John G. Windrim, whose husband is a prominent architect in Philadelphia. The little creature was found in a little village near Brussels. Her parents were both prize winners in dog shows in Paris and Brussels.

ANOTHER COFFEE WRECK
What's the Use When There's an Easy Way Out.

Along with the coffee habit has grown the prevalent "American Disease"—nervous prostration.

The following letter shows the way out of the trouble:

"Five years ago I was a great coffee drinker and from its use I became so nervous I could scarcely sleep at all nights. My condition grew worse and worse until finally the physician I consulted declared my troubles were all due to coffee.

"But being so wedded to the beverage I did not see how I could do without it, especially at breakfast, as that meal seemed wholly incomplete without coffee.

"On a visit some friends deprived me of coffee to prove that it was harmful. At the end of about eight days I was less nervous but the craving for coffee was intense, so I went back to the old habit as soon as I got home and the old sleepless nights came near making a wreck of me.

"I heard of Postum and decided to try it. I did not like it at first, because, as I afterwards discovered, it was not made properly. I found, however, that when made after directions on the package, it was delicious.

"It had a soothing effect on my nerves and none of the bad effects that coffee had, so I bade farewell to coffee and have used only Postum since. The most wonderful account of the benefit to be derived from Postum could not exceed my own experience." "There's a Reason."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in packages.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

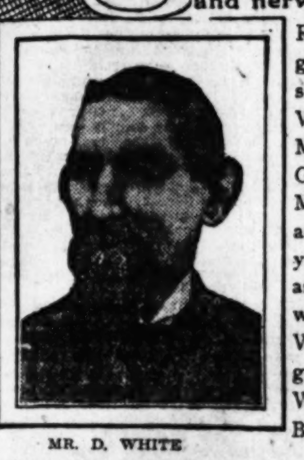
Praise the Great Body, Brain and Nerve Builder

MRS. D. WHITE



MR. D. WHITE

Mr. and Mrs. White, of Bloomington, Ill., praise Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for curing Mrs. White of Grippe and restoring her to health and vigor. They recommend Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey to those who are in need of a tonic stimulant to build up body, brain and nerves.

Recently they wrote: "You will be glad to hear that Mrs. White and myself have used Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey with the very best results. Mrs. White had a bad attack of the Grippe; I myself gave her Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey according to directions, and she very soon felt the benefit of your medicine. She is getting stronger and healthier every day. We surely will recommend Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey and we thank you for such a great medicine.—Mr. and Mrs. D. White, 709 East Buchanan Street, Bloomington, Ill."

Thousands of unsolicited letters of gratitude like this of Mr. and Mrs. White are received from grateful patients who are anxious to extol the merits of this great life saver and renewer of youth—Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is an absolutely pure distillation of malted grain; great care being used to have every kernel thoroughly malted, thus destroying the germ and producing a predigested liquid food in the form of a malt essence, which is the most effective tonic stimulant and invigorator known to science; softened by warmth and moisture its palatability and freedom from foreign substances render it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach.

It is invaluable for overworked men, delicate women and sickly children. It strengthens and sustains the system; is a promoter of health and longevity; makes the old young and keeps the young strong.

CAUTION—When you ask your druggist, grocer or dealer for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey be sure you get the genuine. It's the only absolutely pure medicinal malt whiskey and is sold in large sealed bottles only; never in bulk. Price $1.00. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and make sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Write Consulting Physician, Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Some of the contestants who have made the scholarship race of 1908 the greatest of all.

The Times' Scholarship Contest of 1908 will end tomorrow at midnight. Subscriptions and coupons must bear postmark not later than that hour and date to be counted.

Boom! boom! boom! went the scores of yesterday. Up! up! up! went the gains, until all previous records for corresponding dates were smashed and 150,000 points were recorded for the fifty contestants, averaging 3000 points to each.

The little lady from Waterloo street handed in a cool 10,000 points and ran her present standing to 150,000. What she will have by tomorrow night or what any one else will have to gain to pass her is a big question, and the scholarship manager does not know the answer; but the 200,000 line will be crossed.

Pomona goes over the 100,000 mark today. Thomas McKinley sent in over 12,600 to do it, and rumor says that tomorrow he will break the bank. Monrovia's representative hustled in five new annuals and had a consequent gain of nearly 6000. She will go above 100,000 Monday. Myrtle Hall gained nearly 6000, David Boardman's friends boomed him to the tune of 6000 points, and Margaret Chung gained over the magic 6000. Leo Domke ran his day's gains over 7000, and Ramona Carter, the baby of the contest who has made such a gallant race, recorded an increase of over 4000.

Scores under 3000 are hardly worth mentioning on such a day but they all counted. That Westminster lad, Homer Watson, who means to have a scholarship in the University of Southern California, made a champion showing yesterday, and Murrey Royar, one of the most successful of the boys, rushed in nearly 6000 for the day.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

Half a hundred young workers on the home stretch; half a hundred boys and girls who have devoted their vacation days to educational advancement; half a hundred young business men and women in training for the future; half a hundred heroes ready for a well-earned reward—that is what the Times Scholarship Contest of 1908 has meant, this is why it spells progress to the community.

Now the goal is in sight; one more day, one final spurt in the race and the career of each young worker for the next twelve months will be practically settled, and his life bent decided in many cases. The contestants have left many miles behind them during the summer, have canvassed among people of all kinds and conditions, have kept up their courage in season and out, because they wanted an education in business, or art, or music, or perhaps a soldierly training.

People who have watched their progress the present time, and there are thousands of such, would like perhaps to know something of each boy or girl, and his or her particular ambition, so as to decide which worthy recipient to boost on the final day, for the contest closes tomorrow night, and Monday is the last day of grace for a subscription or a coupon to count in favor of any contestant until 1909 rolls around.

waste when it might benefit such contestants as David Boardman Ruth von Kirbach, Myrtle Hall and many others who must very soon confront the problem of self-support.

David Boardman has already faced his problem and has been driving a laundry wagon for two years to aid his mother and three little sisters. David is 14 years of age and he needs a business course to fit him for the big responsibilities that have come to this man of the family so early in life.

David has had many kind letters and many coupons have been sent to help increase his score. The following is a sample of the kindness that people feel for such a deserving case:

"This is a tiny help, but it carries my good wishes with it to the plucky laddie who is working against such odds. I learned when about David's age how hard a fight it was to win an education and a living at the same time, but I did it and so will he. Since olden times, small Davids have been noted as conquerors of big giants, and the boy who is manly enough to lift the heavy burdens from his mother's tired shoulders has the right brand of stones for putting a quietus on discouragements. I wish David Boardman every success."

Ruth von Kirbach is a lovely brown-eyed girl of 15, who has the same problem turned around a little bit. She must support herself, and needs a business training to do it. She also intends to keep her mother from killing herself with work. She has selected the Brownsberger scholarship.

Myrtle Hall, the brave young Methodist maid, whose father has been helpless with paralysis for over a year, is another who must find a way to be self-sustaining, and she has made a determined race for a scholarship in the Woodbury Business College. Then there is Laura Easton, the bonny lass of the Soldiers' Home, who has made such a splendid race this year. She is another girl working to fit herself for business, and she has the good wishes of hundreds of veterans, whose loyal old hearts are still beating beneath the "blue."

Winifred Spencer of Hollywood needs a business course. She hopes to be her father's assistant in business, for there is a large family to care for, and Winny wishes to lend a hand. Pretty Mae Simmons, too, the English Rose, must be ready to earn a living ere long, and she has worked steadily to win the way. The Huntington Hall contestant this year is the splendid "Favorite of the Foothills," Mary Pearl Pottol, who has made one of the best campaigns in the contest, starting in two weeks after the race began, with the handicap of over 12,000 points taken out of her district by another contestant, who dropped out of the race.

Pomona is represented by Thomas McKinley, who has mapped out his future, and it includes a course in electricity at Throop Polytechnic Institute. He intends to be the captain of his own fate, if possible, and though busily engaged in making a living he entered The Times contest as a thorough business proposition to earn his course.

Leon Riesenweber and Glenn Anderson are the two Pasadena boys who have made a good race for the same Highland is represented in the contest by a lovely and popular girl, Miss Florence Jarman, who may make the other towns and Los Angeles as well sit up in astonishment by the last score. Santa Barbara has for her candidate Gladys Hill, a Santa Barbara High School girl, who has lately lost her father, and who is working to prepare herself for a teacher. Grace Tyler of Upland, the girl who is working for a Heald's business course, and Ida May Benjamin of Covina complete the circle of out-of-town girls in the race, and The Times is proud to own them.

TO BE MISSIONARY.

Margaret Chung, the Chinese girl, who is trying to earn her own education that she may become a medical missionary in China, is worthy of all support, and she is sadly in need of a cash prize to help in her school expenses, for Margaret belongs to a large family and has much to do at home in addition to her school duties.

Gertrude Flick is another brave little Methodist girl, who is striving for an education at the University of Southern California, and if her story were told, this little snowdrop would certainly go up high, for she is a worker to be proud of.

Ralph Warren, the Alhambra lad, and Eva Mathews, the pretty Gibson girl, have set their hearts on the Los Angeles School of Art and Design, and are a talented two. Murrey Royer is the son of Philip Royer, a Mason, who has suffered the sad fate of paralysis, and this sturdy young son of 12 must fend for himself in educational opportunities. Wallie Swain, the soldier lad, has many friends and loyal supporters among the army people, for he is the fourth of his line to become a soldier, and he is in the race for a scholarship at the California Military Academy.

Zarrah Morse of Santa Ana, the first baby ever born in Orange county, represents Santa Ana in the race, while Gardena has for its contestant Anna May Elliston, who is working for a course in expression, with Wava Tift striving for a similar course.

The tale of contestants would not be complete without the little Catholic girl with the dimples, Celeste Benton, who is working for an education at the convent, where she may be sheltered by the good sisters while her mother is busy working for her support. Ottilia Kraft is another little Catholic girl, who wants convent advantages, and Mabelle Wasell, one of the most attractive young girls of all, has done her very best in trying for a musical course.

FOR MUSIC.

Walter Damrosch looked down at an audience of public school children last spring in Los Angeles, and he was so impressed by the musical spirit and enthusiasm, that he became a prophet and declared that a great composer of the future was probably looking up at him from that splendid crowd of boys and girls.

The many contestants in The Times race, willing to dare everything and put their precious summer holidays in the balance in order to win musical advantages, show that Damrosch was not far wrong, and that there is a hunger in the hearts of California children more potent and compelling than the actual hunger for bread, and that is the deep-seated longing for the beautiful and poetic. Seventeen out of the fifty are working for musical advantages. Marguerite Jones, the lovely little blue-eyed girl at the top, daughter of Detective Jones of the city force, is only 12 years of age, but is already started on a musical career, and she is working for one of the best musical scholarships offered. If she stays on that top perch until the final score she will also win the valuable Fairbanks piano from the Southern California Music Company, which will be an enviable possession.

Hazel Franklin, the splendid basketball player of the Delta Chi Sunday School team, and also of the Polytechnic High School, has also been in the race for music, and hopes to be a fine pianist, as well as a successful athlete. She is a great favorite in the Christian churches of the city, and several of the Sunday-schools have offered prizes for the greatest number of didate of the Magnolia Avenue Christian Church. Hazel is the daughter of Deputy United States Marshal Franklin, whose many friends have also rallied around Hazel, and may yet place her on the top line in the final score.

Princess Alice of Pasadena, otherwise, Alice Capron, has been the khaki soldier of the campaign. All through the hot summer time Alice, in khaki suit and mounted on her trusty wheel, has been a familiar sight in the streets of Pasadena and the outlying districts. She has made a classy race, and has won many friends. She is working for the scholarship in the Verdi School of Singing.

Leo Domke is a fourteen-year-old musical genius, who has spent the summer hustling for his winter's tuition. He is a rare pianist, and his teacher declares that he is a pupil of the greatest promise, but Leo has the sad misfortune of being blind in one eye. Most of his beloved music is memorized, so as to spare his sight as much as possible.

Farther down in the score, quite far down in fact, is a little violinist, Charles Yglesias, who will draw his bow some day before great audiences and thrill them with the poetry and power of his musical interpretation. He belongs to an old Spanish family of Southern California. He has worked hard during the hot days, but he is very small for his twelve years, and business ability and musical temperament do not always go hand in hand. Charles will need quite a boost to be sure of the violin course in the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music and Arts. He has lately been made a member of the First Methodist Church orchestra on account of his unusual talent, the usual age of entrance being sixteen years. Music is the dear desire and the high ambition of the little Presbyterian maid, Ellen Robinson. Ellen is a wonderfully attractive young girl of fourteen years, and quite talented. Having lost her father a number of years ago, she is obliged to earn her own advantages and she has done it bravely and nobly. Last year she won a course in the Fillmore School of Music and one of the cash prizes as well. This year Ellen's mother has been ill nearly the entire summer and the little lady has carried on her canvass alone, and has stood high in the score right along. Councilman Healy gave his yearly renewal to Ellen, yesterday, and Mrs. George B. Yaw, sent in some coupons to the little "Lark Ellen."

Down the line of little musical aspirants is Lizzie Shapiro, the vivid little dark-eyed maid who is just three years away from the borders of Russia. Lizzie has made a determined fight for her music, and with her hand in hand has gone Hazel Pestor, the young girl, so gentle and quiet, from the Los Angeles High School, both striving for the same piano course, and both longing to win. Every one who has ever seen these small girls are anxious for them to succeed.

Katharine Veronee is another young girl who is determined to succeed as a musician. She has a gallant spirit, has Katharine, for she must struggle to get a piano as well as a course of instruction. Like many of the others she has but a slender portion of this world's goods, but judging by her records at school Katharine will be able to succeed. She is working for the course in the Von Stein's Academy for Pianists, and she will be a valuable acquisition as a pupil.

There is a small chance for music lessons for the eldest daughter of a family when the family includes nine children and the eldest is only 13 years of age. Especially is it hard when the father has had the misfortune to be out of work during a large part of the summer. All these handicaps, however, have not dimmed the bright hopes of thirteen-year-old Teresa Camp, who has canvassed diligently, and has sent her small brothers and sisters out to collect coupons far and near, for she has those music lessons in her mind's eye, and has not been able to see anything else, not even the discouragements.

The musical list includes that brave little Lillian Trippensee, who is prac-has adopted her and her delicate little sister. Lillian wants musical advantages just as much as though she were more fortunately situated and has overcome an immense amount of natural timidity to canvass for her scholarship.

Clarence Wesner is a popular little contestant, but it is hard to mention him without his brother, Orval. They are two small gentlemen in knee trousers, and both have worked every day this summer without a single vacation to win that scholarship in the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music and Arts for Clarence. The two lads play on the piano and they have never been known to refuse when invited to entertain others with their music.

Lean Aiken is another small girl who wants music, and Lupe Bustillos is the lovely Spanish girl who longs to sing, but she is employed all day long and cannot do much canvassing in the interest of a scholarship.

Myrtle Elgin would like to issue a last hurry call to the colored citizens of the city, for she is still far down in the list and she is one of the greatest music lovers of the entire contest. She is anxious to earn a scholarship in piano work so that the natural gift she has may find expression.

THE PRIZES.

Besides the valuable scholarships for which the young people are working, The Times offers fifteen cash prizes for those making the highest scores next to the top liner, who will receive the prize piano. The cash prizes, totaling $1200, are arranged as follows:

THE PIANO.

The first prize to be awarded to the winner of the contest in addition to a choice of scholarships is a splendid Fairbanks piano from the Southern California Music Company, valued at $400. It is a beautiful instrument of superior construction, handled by an old and reliable company as a special feature, and is doubly guaranteed. It is known among musicians for its exquisite tonal qualities and responsive action. The case may be of rich mahogany or dark oak.

Pittsburgh Scientist Observes Remarkable Aurora Borealis and Immense Sun Spot.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) Sept. 12.—Attracted by probably the most remarkable aurora borealis ever witnessed in this section of the country, Dr. John A. Breashear, the well-known scientist and astronomer, last night made a measurement of an immense sun spot he had just photographed.

This spot covers 2,250,000,000 square miles of the surface of the sun, and has a temperature estimated at 6000 deg. above zero. The aurora Borealis flashed in brilliant shafts from the west to the north. The display lasted nearly six hours.

Dr. Brashear believes there is close connection between the aurora borealis and sun spots.

"I expect we shall hear of magnetic disturbances due to these sun spots," said Dr. Brashear.

HUNTING FOR CLASSMATE.

Yale Men Going About Search for Charles Wilson Andrews in Systematic Manner.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—In an effort to find Charles Wilson Andrews, son of the late Chas. B. Andrews, Governor and later Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Connecticut, Yale men of this city are conducting a canvass of the United States and Canada.

He was last seen here about February 11, when he left the Hotel Dresslin, since which time neither his Yale comrades nor his invalid mother, who lives in Litchfield, Ct., have heard anything from him. At the time he was suffering from rheumatism, which induced melancholia. His friends believe he is wandering about the country and avoiding them that they may not be bothered by his troubles.

According to the plan mapped out, the members of Mr. Andrews's classes in the university and the law school in this city, and members of the faculty in New Haven have written to every member of their classes and to Yale men generally, asking that they use every effort to find Mr. Andrews and care for him until his family can be notified. The work has been done quietly, and though the police have been asked to help, the only notices sent out were confidential ones.

PASADENA.

TALKS ON WATER AS HOMEKEEPER.

MRS. BURDETTE EARNESTLY ADVOCATES PURCHASE.

Is Followed by Husband, Whose Biblical Comparison Makes Hit With Audience of Two Thousand People—Chafin and T'dore Bell Address Meetings.

Office of The Times, No. 28 S. Raymond Ave.

PASADENA, Sept. 12.—Mrs. Robert J. Burdette is the first woman to publicly express her opinion in favor of the city purchasing the local water plants. At the great meeting last night on Green street, which was attended by nearly 2000 people, she told of the advantages to be gained. She even surpassed her famous husband in this respect. Mrs. Burdette said in part:

"I am here to say a word for the people, for all the water, for all the city, for all the time; because I am first a home-keeper, secondly a tax payer, thirdly a citizen of Pasadena.

"As you cherish the health of your homes and your city, see to it that every provision be made, that not only our present home-makers, but those who would be attracted to us are able to obtain abundant water for domestic purposes. This calls for municipal ownership. You have no right to take it for granted that the water companies, though composed of our own good citizens, are going to go on and make a large future asset for this city at a large personal expenditure at present. One ownership only can do this. Municipal ownership will give us that assurance and insurance at profitable rate of premium to ourselves. Don't you like that kind of insurance where you get the principal and keep the premium yourselves?

"As a taxpayer I am eager for it, and fail to understand the business acumen of those voters who say the city is too heavily bonded already, and that they do not want to increase the burden.

"If you are inclined to impeach the statement set forth by the Pasadena Realty Board, which I cannot believe any loyal citizen would do, you have only to take the case of cities throughout the United States, 73 per cent of which, having a population of over 30,000 people, own their own water plants. Only one did not pay operating expenses, and 24 per cent. made money out of the waterworks. Los Angeles, in the face of an investment of $2,000,000, not only paid operating and extension expenses, but interest, created a sinking fund, and lowered the rate 30 per cent.

SHOULD SNAP UP BARGAIN.

"If you do not snap up this bargain, what assurance have you that there may not be profit-takers from an entirely foreign corporation who, seeing an opportunity to make money out of a necessity Pasadena must have, might come in here and purchase, and while their money was invested here, might not be of us as citizens, but could do with us as they like? There is always that possibility.

"All the womanly sympathy is aroused in me when I see the 'dry tract.' Have you seen it? Do you know where it is? Have you seen the little homes that were honestly started with the supposition that they could have water to make them as beautiful as those of their neighbors, and when the courts decided that the North Pasadena company did not have to furnish them water, they were powerless to insist. Have you seen them without water for lawns or flowers, and sometimes without water for baths and toilets?"

BURDETTE IS BIBLICAL.

Rev. Robert J. Burdette followed his wife and won the audience by drawing a comparison between the present situation in Pasadena and that in the days of Moses. He said:

"These two wells alone are worth more to the city than our local interest in the Philippines or the Owens River. Do you suppose that when Moses called forth living fountains, leaping in sparkling coolness from the heart of the desert rock, that the children of Israel hesitated, with their swollen tongues hanging from their sun-cracked lips, and said: 'Hold on now, don't be rash, let us discuss this matter a little. Isn't there maybe some other way by which we can secure a permanent water supply?' It is hardly plausible, to think that a Jew was ever such a fool as that. But I doubt not there were people in that multitude who criticised the plan of Moses and said very likely if they waited a few years, they might be able to make a more satisfactory arrangement with Pharaoh, whereby the Nile might be piped under the Red Sea, across the desert by an aqueduct and through a conduit, over the River Jordan, up to the pool of Siloam. Why, man, that is the way Thompson't colt, who holds the record as the biggest fool in the corral, got a drink. He swam across the river to reach a humane society watering trough."

Among the other speakers were Mayor Earley and Dr. G. Roscoe Thomas.

PROHIBITION ADVOCATE.

Eugene W. Chafin, Prohibition candidate for the Presidency, spoke yesterday evening at Library Park to a large crowd. His remarks were along the line of his set campaign speeches, in which he advocates that Congress abolish the liquor traffic and manufacture of liquor.

T'dore Bell was in the city yesterday, also, and attracted a curious crowd.

PASADENA BREVITIES.

J. C. Cosgrove, the Florence man arrested in a raid recently, was fined $100 yesterday for conducting a "blind pig."

Austin Roehrigh, son of F. L. Roehrigh, of No. 501 Oakland avenue, narrowly escaped being run over by a street car on California street yesterday. He was riding a motorcycle and fell in front of a moving car. The motorman, A. D. Clay, stopped the coach just in time to prevent running over the boy.

Rev. W. B. Hinson, pastor of the First Baptist Church of San Diego, will fill the pulpit at both services of the church here today. Rev. Albert Smith, the pastor, is still in the East.

Earl M. Weight, son of former Mayor Weight, has just returned from an extended tour of the East.

Mrs. W. S. Breithelle and daughter, Helen, and Miss Jean Melloy, have just returned, after spending a month at Long Beach.

SAVES LIVES AT SANTA MONICA.

SAN FRANCISCO BOY RESCUES TWO SMALLER LADS.

Latter's Frail Boat Is Swamped by Unusually High Swell and Visitor Swims to Their Aid—Los Angeles-Pacific Completes Broad-Gauging North Loop Tracks.

SANTA MONICA, Sept. 12.—Emmett Roberts of San Francisco, rescued two boys from drowning about 5:30 o'clock this evening.

The boys, Edward Lee and John Rouse, had been playing in the surf for an hour or so, swimming out to meet the breakers and riding back to shore on the crest of the high waves, in a small boat which they had fastened by a rope to a log on the shore.

They had gone out to meet an unusually high swell, and were in the boat, ready for the trip to shore, when the wave broke with great force, and the frail little vessel, torn from the rope which had held it, was turned over, and carried out to sea.

The boys struggled manfully against the current, but, in spite of their efforts, were borne from the land. Their strength was nearly exhausted when they attracted the attention of Emmett Roberts, who was bathing in the surf.

Roberts, who is an expert swimmer, started to the rescue, and reached the boys none too soon, for they were at the mercy of the waves, and were clinging desperately to an oar which had fallen from the upturned boat. He managed to place himself in position so that grasping the oar, with one hand, he struck out for the shore. His strong, even stroke soon brought them out of danger.

The two boys required vigorous treatment before they could be taken to their homes, north of Santa Monica. Lee had received a blow on the head from the oar, and fainted when he reached the beach.

COMPLETES BIG TASK.

The Los Angeles Pacific Company today completed the broad-guaging of its north loop tracks and today began the running of cars north on Third street. The travel on this line has been interrupted for several months, while the big development work has been in progress. The resumption of train service comes as a great accommodation to the residents of the northern end of the city.

President Goetz of the Board of Trade has received a request from the National Irrigation Congress for the appointment of two delegates to attend the sixteenth annual session, which will be held at Albuquerque, N. M., from September 29 to October 3.

DEFIANCE.

REFUSES TO OBEY STATE BOARD.

VACCINATION PROBLEM STIRS LONG BEACH BOARD.

Says It Will not Expel Scholars Whose Parents Refuse to Allow Them to Be Made Smallpox Proof. City Fails to Induce Belmont Heights to Stay in.

LONG BEACH, Sept. 12.—When the old board of school trustees was legislated out of office by the operation of the city charter, which gave control of the schools to the city, it left as a legacy a practical defiance of a demand by the State Medical Board for compulsory vaccination of pupils. This demand the old board refused to obey, and when the new trustees took charge they saw no reason for any different order. This morning Dr. Bancroft, a representative of the State Board of Health, appeared before the school trustees and notified them that the school reports indicated they were not obeying the vaccination law of the State, which is compulsory, and neglect of which is fine and imprisonment, or both.

President Craig, speaking for the entire board, said all the pupils had been notified to be vaccinated, and that every effort short of force had been made to obey the law, but beyond that the board would not go. All the members would resign before they would obey such an order from the State Board, nor would they expel any pupil who refused to be vaccinated.

"But the State Board will compel you to do so," remarked Dr. Bancroft.

President Craig intimated that the board would have a big job on its hands, and Dr. Bancroft left, with the threat that the matter would be taken up and suit brought.

The Board of Education has the support of probably a majority of parents.

WOMAN IN TROUBLE.

On complaint of Mrs. Anna Leaming, Mrs. M. M. Broderson, once a prominent real estate operator in this city, was arrested this morning, charged with issuing a check for $150 on the First National Bank without having any funds there, a felonious offense. Unable to furnish $2000 bail, she was remanded to the County Jail until Monday. It is alleged that during the past six months Mrs. Broderson has been implicated in several shady deals, and issued many checks which were dishonored because of no funds, but most of the victims have refused to prosecute. When a check for $100 was refused payment, Erving Fordham had her arrested. Friends made good the amount and the indictment was quashed by the District Attorney. The defendant has two small children, who will be looked after by friends. There is a Mr. Broderson, but he has not lived with his wife for years.

BOWS TO BELMONT.

Wishing if possible to prevent the incorporation of a sixth class city on its eastern limits in territory which is regarded as property of Long Beach suburb, Mayor Windham and the City Council today submitted a proposition to the Executive Committee of the residents of the proposed new city of Belmont Heights. Summarized briefly, it is that of the petition for incorporation, which is to come up for hearing before the Supervisors Monday is abandoned, Long Beach will incorporate in a proposed bond issue of provision for $20,000 to be expended on a pleasure pier at Devil's Gate, part of the Belmont ocean frontage recently annexed to Long Beach. It also will see that the Naples boulevard within the city limits is constructed and will make no further effort to annex this suburban territory until the residents ask for it. Pending the acceptance of this offer, Long Beach will make no attempt to get signers of the incorporation petition to withdraw their names. The Executive Committee took the proposition under advisement, and later called a meeting of the Belmont residents tonight to settle the acceptance or rejection by vote. The taxpayers decided to go ahead with incorporation, there being only one vote in favor of the Long Beach proposition.

GREEK LOCATED.

Acting on a tip from a local Greek merchant, Detective Phillips last night, found Gregore Artemas, who Miss Jennie Parsons, said was pursuing her. He was located at the Darby rooming house packing his grip and denied the young girl's story. He said he had but a passing acquaintance with her and only came here en route to San Pedro to get a steamer back to San Francisco. As the detective had a warrant for a wife deserter at San Pedro he accompanied the Greek to that city, and warned him to cease persecuring the girl. Meanwhile, Miss Parsons, still fearful, packed up last night and with her aunt went to Los Angeles to escape the fellow.

CHILD TO BLAME.

Cassell W. Adkinson, son of Dr. A. W. Adkinson, district superintendent of the Los Angeles Methodist Episcopal Conference, with his wife and twin babies, had a narrow escape from serious injury when their buggy was overturned on Pine avenue, near Fifth street, and all were thrown out. The girl twin was painfully bruised and Mrs. Adkinson, who fell out holding the boy in her arms, was slightly hurt. A little girl who was the innocent cause of the accident was also bruised. She ran across the street in front of the horse and was thrown beneath the rig, but was not trampled on or run over. The horse turned sharply, throwing the buggy against the curb, causing it to upset.

BOYS RUN AWAY.

Loran Zinzant and Leslie Killie, each aged 9 years, and Sidney Killie, aged 10 years, are missing from home and so is a horse and buggy belonging to F. B. Davis of Twentieth street and Magnolia avenue. The boys were seen about midnight in the buggy headed for Los Angeles, and the police there have been notified.

PRESIDENT AND STUDENTS.

Cleo Zinn was elected president of the High School student body last night. Other officers are Lilian Reid, vice-president; Ruth Andrews, secretary; Glen Stone, treasurer; Ralph Scott, sergeant-at-arms, and Fred Wilkins, member of the advisory board.

The Board of Education has changed the name of the Alamitos school at Fourth and Junipero to Carrol Park school, to avoid confusion with Alamitos Heights school.

HIGH AND NOISY.

Breakers are again high and noisy and considerable of the beach is being cut out, though it will redeposit again in a few weeks. Bathing far out was dangerous today. A heavy wave this morning reached the lifeboat and set it afloat. Harold Davies, a small boy who was sitting in one end, fully dressed, was carried out by the receding water, but was rescued by the life guards.

HER HONEST OPINION.

Charles Howe, the recreant husband whose buggy ride with Widow Walsh was stopped by his wife, came to the city this morning and, accompanied by a police officer, went to his home and packed his clothes. His wife made no objection, but she forcibly gave her opinion of him during his stay. Howe insists that he was guilty of no wrong and took Mrs. Walsh to his grandmother's because his wife would not.

Thirty real estate operators have organized a realty board and appointed a committee to draft bylaws and constitution and report in ten days, when officers will be elected. The object of the association is to cut out "curbstone" operators and protect each other in collecting commissions.

REDONDO.

REDONDO, Sept. 12.—This has been by far the most successful season in the history of this resort.

While nothing definite has been decided with reference to the bath-house proposition, it is stated that a mammoth establishment will be erected by the Redondo Beach Improvement Company.

At the Maccabees picnic today five thousand people were in attendance. Next Saturday the Nebraska picnic will be held here.

The case of the city against F. L. Lewis, charged with a violation of the ordinance against selling on commission and by sample, was called in the Recorder's Court today, but was postponed. The defendant is a man of small means, who has been earning a somewhat precarious livelihood by gathering and selling beach stones and by acting as advertising agent for Los Angeles concerns.

It is reported that an application will be made Monday to the Superior Court for a writ of habeas corpus in the case of S. Pappadopulos, who was sentenced on Thursday to ninety days in the County Jail for disturbing the peace. It is said that he did not understand what he was being tried for, as he speaks little English. The act complained of was the result of a family quarrel, and the wife is as unhappy as her husband because of his punishment. The man's business was sold today and he is penniless.

OCEAN PARK.

OCEAN PARK, Sept. 12.—Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Gibson of Ozone avenue have as their guest Baroness von Richtofen, widow of Baron von Richtofen, prominent during his life as one of the leading mining men of London. Upon coming to this country he amassed wealth in the Cripple Creek mines.

Wonderful Shoe Bargains

The prices I am making on my sample shoes certainly are far below anything I have ever known in all of my 20 years of retailing shoes in Los Angeles. These shoes represent the perfect work and leather of the best shoe factories in the world. Sample shoes are never made in old styles, so you are sure that your footwear, when you buy here, is always up-to-date.

Think of it, men's and women's shoes $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 and up to $2.50, many of them made to sell as high as $6.00.

This sale will last until I have made room enough to accommodate the fall sample shoes that are now on the way.

From last week's sales, I'd advise all my friends and patrons to be here this week.

$1, $1.25, $1.50, $2 and $2.50

LIVELY VALLEY POLITICS.

Although but one candidate is to be elected at the fall elections in Imperial Valley, deep interest is manifested in all the towns, and an active contest is on between Franklin J. Cole, incumbant of the office of Imperial County Superior Judge, and R. D. McPherrin, an attorney of Imperial. Judge Cole scored a big point in the Republican caucuses held last Saturday.

ADJUDGED INSANE.

John Monahan was adjudged insane yesterday by Judge Cole of the Superior Court, and was committed to the State Hospital at Patton. Monahan was one of the best known prospectors on the desert, having spent years along the Colorado River and through the Imperial Valley, as well as the mountains back of San Bernardino. When taken into custody over at Potholes, on the Colorado River, last week, by Sheriff Mobley Meadows, Monahan had numerous cartridges filled with gold dust he had taken from sources unknown to other prospectors. While he has been considered an eccentric character for years, it is only within the past few months he has been considered dangerous.

WANTS CARNEGIE'S HELP.

This new passenger station was moved into this week, and is the pride of El Centro citizens.

VISITORS ARE COMING.

Within the past week travel on the valley branch of the Southern Pacific has increased fully 50 per cent. Hundreds of valleyites are returning from their summer outings at Los Angeles and beach points, and a considerable number of strangers who are seeking new locations are arriving. Several parties of land-seekers from the Middle Western States are due in the valley during this month. One of these will be men from Holdridge, Neb. Another party of considerable size is to come from Crescent City, Iowa.

RIVERSIDE, Sept. 12.—Rigid restrictions have been placed by the Council upon the rebuilding of the Standard Oil Company's local plant, the explosion of which caused a stampede in the elephants of the Sells-Floto show last spring, resulting in the killing of Miss Ella Gibbs. The reason of our great success is due to the uniform high grade work done by us.

Flexible Rubber Plates

Have many advantages over the old thick, cumbersome, ordinary rubber plates and even over gold plates, being much lighter and thinner. These plates are flexible, only a trifle thicker than heavy writing paper, fit closer and adhere better to the roof of the mouth. Particles of food and small seeds cannot get under them. They will last longer, are stronger than any others and will not break, as they will give first, being flexible. Dr. Schiffman's own process and made only by us.

I have always heretofore shared with most people the dread of a dentist's chair. But now am sure I shall not dread the ordeal again, for at your office I can truthfully say, "I was not hurt at all." Even the bridgework which I had dreaded was painless and most satisfactory.
MRS. EARL ROGERS.

It gives me great pleasure to state that Dr. Schiffman extracted an impacted wisdom tooth for me, which had been giving me great annoyance for years. It was extracted absolutely without a particle of pain to me. It was easily worth 100 times the amount paid.
ROBERT MARSH,
Of Robert Marsh & Co., H. W. Hellman Bldg.

Dr. Schiffman placed bridgework in my mouth which has proven, after five years' use, to be a perfect piece of work and durable. Is now quite as serviceable as original teeth. A very difficult tooth was pulled before this bridgework was put in, and "it didn't hurt a bit."

Dr. Schiffman extracted twenty teeth for me, and did it absolutely without pain. I have had a great deal of experience with other dentists, and can truthfully say that Dr. Schiffman's method is best of all. I highly recommend him to everyone.

SENSATION.

TAKES POISON INTENTIONALLY?

FRIENDS SAY SWALLOWED OVERDOSE BY MISTAKE.

Sudden Death of Erskine Richardson in San Francisco While Wife Is Visiting Mother in Santa Barbara Sets Tongues Wagging—Relatives Scout Suicide Theory.

SANTA BARBARA, Sept. 12.—Did Erskine Richardson commit suicide or did he take by mistake an overdose of cyanide of potassium? News of his sudden death at the St. Xavier apartment-house, Pacific avenue, San Francisco, some time last night or early this morning, created a sensation here when it became known this evening. This was increased when rumors were heard that there had been domestic dissension, and that Richardson's mental faculties had decreased of late. Members of the family here strongly deny the suicide story, the reports of domestic trouble and that Richardson had shown signs of mental aberration. They say he was accustomed to taking cyanide of potassium for a weak heart and that he took an overdose in error.

ROMANTIC MARRIAGE.

Richardson was married here about eighteen months ago to Miss Gladys Tostley, the belle of the season. What added to their romance was the fact that society generally accredited the bride with having previously been enamored of a man with less worldly possessions than Richardson, who had a one-third interest in the Ralston Iron Works, San Francisco.

The man's sudden death came at a time when his wife was visiting here at the home of her mother, Mrs. H. M. A. Tostley. She came here several days ago, and immediately the report got out that she did so in anticipation of filing a suit for divorce. When spoken to on that subject tonight members of the family classed the idea as preposterous and reiterated that there was no domestic trouble. Richardson was 31 years old.

USES DEADLY DRUG.

Dispatches from San Francisco bear out the suggestion that the poison was taken with suicidal intent. There were several cans of the deadly drug in his room, Richardson having been accustomed to use it in photographic experiments.

Richardson had been missing from his office for two days, and as his signature was necessary to pay checks today, officers of the company went to his room to find out what had become of him. The door was locked and they were compelled to force their way in, when they found Richardson's body stretched on the bed, life having been extinct, it is thought, since some time yesterday.

President Ralston says there is no possibility of a shortage in the dead man's accounts having led to the tragedy, as he was comparatively wealthy and interested in the business to a considerable extent. He said tonight that Richardson had attempted to secure additional life insurance some days ago and had been rejected by the doctors owing to weakness of the heart. This seemed to prey on his mind considerably, according to Mr. Ralston, who thinks it might have had something to do with Richardson's determination to end his life.

WIFE HIS ACCUSER.

Santa Ana Husband Arrested for Failure to Provide—Also Sued for Divorce.

SANTA ANA, Sept. 12.—Charles Whitney, a rancher who lives west of this city, was arrested at noon, today, on a warrant charging him with failure to provide for his wife and two children. Mrs. Whitney began a suit for divorce yesterday.

Herman Dasque, proprietor of a local restaurant, was brought here from San Juan Hot Springs, today, bound hand and foot. Several weeks ago he went insane at Newport Beach. Relatives cared for him until yesterday, when he was taken to the springs. There he became violent.

C. Howe, a tamale man, was arrested, last night, by Constable Smithwick on a charge of getting goods under false pretenses. He came here from San Diego.

SEQUEL TO HORSE TRADE.

Judgment was given in the Superior Court, yesterday in favor of H. L. Walcham. James F. Conley was one of several local men who signed notes for the purchase of a stallion, and he did not meet his note. Judgment was for $746.95.

Wanted

Twenty-five Dairymen at San Jacinto

As our dairy business has grown to such an extent in the last few years we cannot supply one-fourth the demand for our product, and our creameries are paying 4c per pound above the Los Angeles Board of Trade prices for butter fat. We want the dairymen of Southern California to know San Jacinto has a most favorable section for this industry. Land, where it is not necessary to buy a water right at promoter's prices, can be obtained at from $50 to $100 per acre, and water can be obtained at a minimum of 4 cents per inch and maximum of 8 cents per miners' inch for 24 hours run.

As we have no large land companies or no large water companies to promote and advertise our section, you can still get land and water at farmers' prices.

For dairying, poultry or alfalfa raising, San Jacinto will stand investigation. For further information address,

BREVITIES.

Hardwood Floors. Most of us spend one-third of our lives in bed. From a hygienic standpoint hardwood flooring in bedrooms is very necessary. If we breathe pure air while sleeping, it is conducive to good health and longevity. Stuffy, dust-ridden atmosphere (which is to be found in rooms where the floors are covered with carpet) is more injurious than most people imagine. We have a fine lot of white maple flooring in stock which is very appropriate for bed chambers. The low price will surprise you. This flooring can be laid equally well in new or old houses. If your carpets are worn out let us quote you net estimates on our "Crown Maple Flooring." Our renovating department is a special feature with us. We clean and polish floors at reasonable rates; old floors made like new. We have for sale wax, cleaner, furniture rests, rubber tips, felt brooms, etc. John A. Smith Floor Co., 619 S. Olive st. ADJUST ORIENTAL RATES.

Increase of Tariffs Will Mean Probable Decrease in Volume of Trade.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) Sept. 12.—After two days of hard work the representatives of all steamship lines on the Pacific Coast have finished their work of readjusting the rates to the Orient to go into effect November 1, when the ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission, requiring the publication of through railroad rates to the Orient becomes effective.

The conference is the most important in years, and affects not only local shipping, but all the lines of business in the east doing business with the Orient. The steamship companies represented were the Pacific Mail, Portland & Asiatic, Canadian Pacific, Waterhouse & Company, Dodwell Company, Nippon Yusen Kaisha and Great Northern.

There is an increase of from 15 to 50 cents on nearly all oriental imports. The export rates have also been increased with the exception of raw cotton. There has been little export business with the far east for many months and local shipping men believe the increased through rates will make conditions even worse that at present.

Rudolf Friml
The Bohemian Pianist and Composer praises the Steinway

Rudolph Friml, the noted Bohemian pianist and composer, who is at present sojourning in Los Angeles, considers the Steinway Piano essential for the player and the composer who would reach the heights of musical fame.

Mr. Friml's Tribute to the Steinway

Geo. J. Birkel Co.,
Los Angeles, Cal.

Gentlemen. I love to play Chopin. I love his moods, his exquisite art. But in order to interpret Chopin I must have a Steinway Piano. Only when I use a Steinway do I experience that supreme touch—that wonderful singing quality of tone—that soul of music so essential to intelligent and sympathetic interpretation of Chopin. And again—the Steinway, with its wonderfully subtle and sonorous tone, inspires me to greater efforts when composing. I have used Pianos from every country, when composing, and only when I use the Steinway am I inspired to produce the very best work.

HOBNOBS WITH SERIS ON TIBURON ISLAND.

Explorer Returns from Cannibal Land of Mystery, Where He Smokes the Pipe of Peace With Chief and Photographs His Tribesmen.

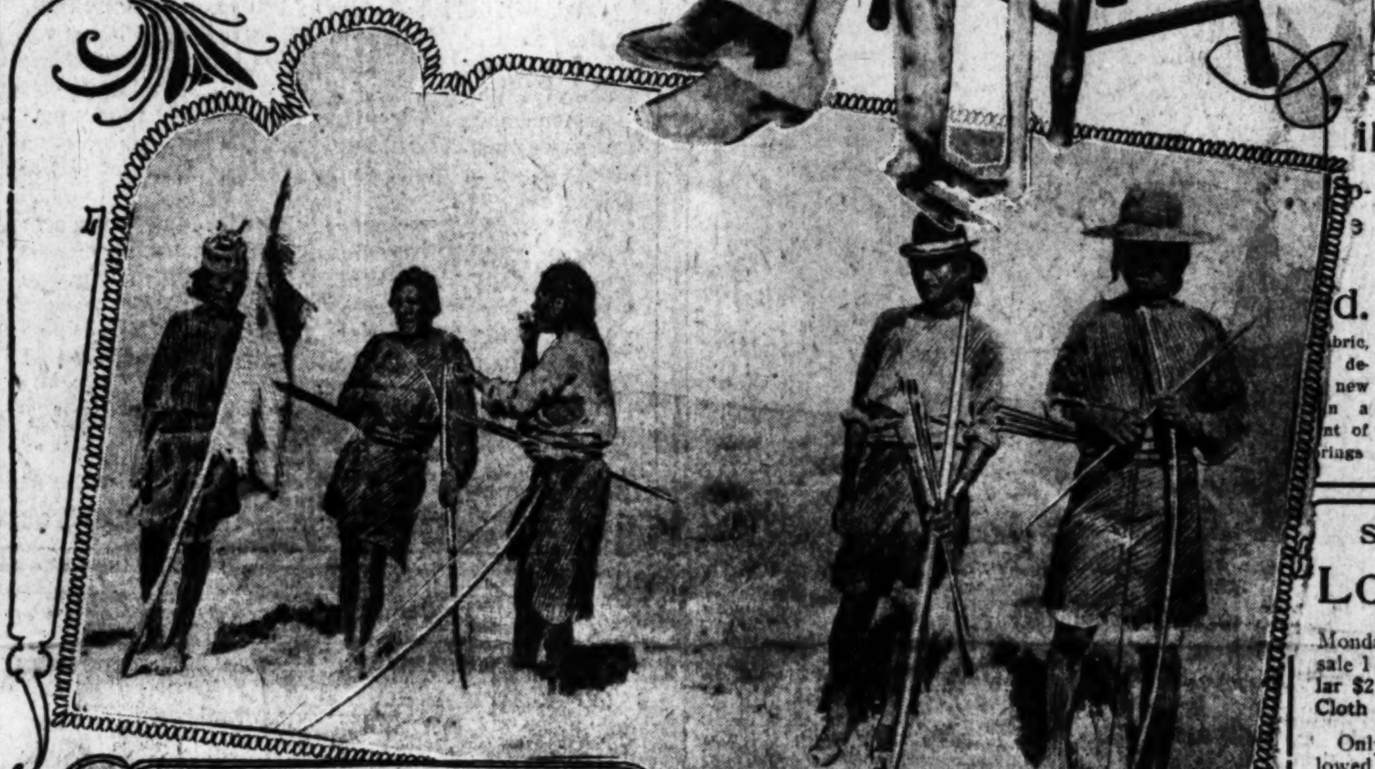
FROM Tiburon Island has been lifted at last a corner of the veil of mystery which has shrouded the painted mountains and Indians of this curious and dreaded land, where the degenerate last of the cannibal Aztecs still feebly, but fiercely, lingers.

Capt. F. E. Thompson has returned to his home in Los Angeles after exploring a great part of the island, where he made friends with the chief of the dreaded Seris, with the later's son and others.

Photographs of the peoples were made by the explorer. He shared turtle dinners with them, exchanged presents and smoked the pipe of peace. Altogether Capt. Thompson made five separate landings on Tiburon and never was molested by the natives.

The story of his experiences on the island and his hobnobbing with the Seris, makes Capt. Thompson's narrative of deep interest, though contradicting, as it does, many of the traditional ideas as to the fierceness of the savages who dwell there.

Capt. F.E. Thompson with gifts from Chief Francisco.



Los Angeles Man Finds Tiburon Islanders Frie

Capt. Thompson, who made five landings, spent a month in the reputed cannibals, and reports the Seris, with whom he excha hospitable. He photographed the chief, Francisco, who spoke Spanish. The large picture shows a typical group of Seris, receive presents of tobacco and matches. At the extreme chief, with his wooden crown and flag of truce. His son stan side.

Yaquis gathering phosphates, Patos Island.

Lightering phosphates through surf to schooner.

Capt. F. E. Thompson of the schooner Estrell has just returned from a nine months' cruise in the Gulf of California. He made five landings on the mysterious Island of Tiburon, met Chief Francisco, head of the Seris, at Freshwater Bay, also the chief's son, Ponchita, and fifteen members of the tribe, at Pearl Point, set down in Dewey's chart as "The Inferno." Capt. Thompson had with him eight Yaquis, who were listed as sailormen.

The sensational feature of Capt. Thompson's story is that he found the Seris the very opposite of what they have been customarily painted. Instead of meeting cannibals and desperate characters, Capt. Thompson was welcomed to the island under a flag of truce, spent some time in the company of Chief Francisco, and was invited by the chief back into the island two leagues, to visit grazing land on which are the chief's herds of burros; but this invitation was declined.

He found the dreaded Seris hospitable, well-meaning and kind-hearted, willing to do him any favor within their power. In return for gifts of beans, tobacco, matches and sugar, Chief Francisco gave Capt. Thompson a handsome bow and arrow, and Ponchita made a peace offering of a queer wooden crown, stained with red and blue berry juices.

This friendly visit to Indians, conventionally written about as head hunters, whose island has long been as jealously guarded from the encroachments of the white man as has been the Sacred City of L'Hassa, opens a new and startling chapter in the story of Tiburon, says the captain. He is the first white man who has brought back a friendly report from this wonder island in the Gulf of Southern California.

"My object in going to the Gulf of California," said Capt. Thompson, "was to find phosphates for the Union Fertilizer Company of Los Angeles, of which N. H. oDty is general manager and under whose direction I worked. Our company has Mexican concessions in bird fertilizer, and on this trip we secured a large amount of phosphates. Two trading schooners will arrive at San Pedro harbor within a few days with 8000 bags of the stuff, each bag averaging 125 pounds.

"I went by rail to Guaymas, and outfitted the Estrell there to make the nine months' cruise on the gulf. I took eight Yaquis as a crew, and never had the slightest trouble with them. They are very hard-working men, and have prodigious strength as packers. They think nothing of wading through the surf with 125-pound bags of phosphates on their backs, buffeted by waves that would make an ordinary man lose his footing.

"We went to Tiburon for wood and water, and in all made five separate landings. I expected trouble, of course, but when I came within hailing distance of Chief Francisco and his men at Freshwater Bay, I ran up a flag of truce—a shirt on an oar—and he replied by doing the same.

"The chief's signal was handled by his son Ponchito, who dipped his rag twice, meaning that two of my men should come ashore for a talk. I went with one of my Yaquis.

AN INDIAN PEACE.

"The chief spoke to me in doggerel Spanish, asking for cigarettes, tobacco and matches, and I gave him some Mexican cigarettes, also some corn, beans and sugar, and he was certainly much pleased. His son spoke in the

KERN IS ANNEXED TO LOS ANGE

Splendid County Being Colonizea Los Angeles Efforts—Trade Com This Way Instead of Going No Bakersfield Rejoices.

BY ARTHUR R. HINTON.

[STAFF CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 12.—Kern county and the entire Southern San Joaquin Valley are being annexed commercially to Los Angeles. Bakersfield is today a Los Angeles town, and is becoming more and more so every day.

For years this was distinctively San Francisco territory, although 300 miles from that city and only 170 from Los Angeles. The people knew little or nothing of the southern city, many were proud of their ignorance, and spoke of the growing metropolis with contempt. To San Francisco they looked for everything.

CHANGE OF SENTIMENT.

Today there is a revolution in public sentiment. Whereas five years ago "the city" was a term used invariably to mean San Francisco, it is now frequently applied to Los Angeles. Hotel registers show two or three times as many names daily from Los Angeles, Pasadena, Riverside and other southern cities a from San Francisco, Oakland and the bay. Five years ago it was just the reverse. Formerly the oil operators all had headquarters in San Francisco; today the greater part are south of the Tehachepi. Once, promoters went to San Francisco and Oakland to float properties; now they head for Los Angeles, Pasadena, Hollywood, Riverside, Redlands or Long Beach. Los Angeles money, or rather Southern California money, is making this country great.

Though the fare is $9 to San Francisco and only $6 to Los Angeles, the average citizen used to visit the north three times where he came to Los Angeles once. Now this is all changed and the population of Bakersfield fairly flew to the southern beaches to avoid the heat this summer.

The earthquake and fire did much to shift the business center south, but it was going on before and regardless of that. It is not only in oil that southern capital is helping this country. For twenty years or more Kern county strove in vain to get colonies of agricultural settlers. F Francisco and its orga appealed to the results nil. Through the efforts of Southern California men settlers have been brought from every part of the United States, placed on good tracts and established in homes. Never did Rufus P. Jennings accomplish this, and he has been told very plainly that he is not wanted here.

The Wasco colony is a pump irrigation proposition. Its story has been told in The Times before. The Mountain View colony came into existence only last March when seventeen families were located on seven sections under the Stein canal which has the preference over all ditches except the Kern Island and is as sure of water

Arrangements for the saengerfest have been made by the Fidelia Society with the assistance of the Eintrecht Mannerchor of Pasadena and Prof. Julius Albert Jahn, director of the Fidelia Society, will direct all of the chorus numbers during the fest.

Prof. Jahn is one of the well-known directors, pianists and composers of the Pacific Coast and before coming to Los Angeles was at the head of the Wisconsin College of Music at Milwaukee. Since he has been in this city he has directed the oratorios of the Los Angeles Choral Society, and during the past three months has schooled the Fidelia and Eintrecht societies. The results of this work is a highly drilled chorus, which promises a remarkably fine programme of German and English folk songs.

Prof. Jahn has also composed music to the poem, "Being's Mystery," from "California Where Sets the Sun," by the late Mrs. Eliza A. Otis, and will be sung for the first time during the Simpson Auditorium concert, Saturday night, by Harry Clifford Lott. ...mery, other soloists will be Margaret ...wraps, mezzo contralto; Bruce Gordon ...he latley, organist, and Oskar B. STRIKE A BOOMERANG.

San Francisco Unions Are Weakening and Unable to Keep up Boycott on Los Angeles Contractor.

In a desperate fight conducted for years by the San Francisco labor unions to control building contracts and the trade generally, the unionites have resorted to violence, intimidation and treachery to accomplish their ends, but now that a Los Angeles firm, the F. O. Engstrum Company, has invaded that district and secured the $600,000 contract for the building of the State Hospital for the Insane at Agnew, between San Francisco and San José, the unions are weakening.

The Engstrum company is an independent one and attends to its business in its own way and lets the unionites gnash their teeth to their hearts' content. It was this way at Agnew. The Union Council at San Francisco issued orders to boycott the Agnew job and called off all the men who were foolish enough to throw up a steady job.

Altogether about 400 men are employed on the work, which is under the personal supervision of Mr. Engstrum. Yesterday his son, who is vice-president of the company, received word that when his father advertised for fifty carpenters to take the places of those who had quit work, over 300 men applied for jobs, and that he now has all the men he is at this time able to employ.

A feature of the strike and attempted boycott of the Engstrum company by the San Francisco unions is that the men who answered the advertisement for work are, for the most part, mechanics affiliated with these same San Francisco unions, which are trying to delay the work on the State buildings.

Would Place Restrictions on the Afflicted.

California, particularly Southern California, is interested, probably more than any other State in the Union, in sessions of the International Congress on Tuberculosis, which will meet Washington the 21st inst., and continue until October 12. The supreme interest of Southern California is because in its climatic conditions there hope for the afflicted. Long since curative idea of residence in the salubrious climate has been dissipated and it is now only a vantage point for those who, observing proper hygienic conditions, combat the disease in its

Hence he will not attend.

THREE WEEKS' CONGRESS.

The congress is to last three weeks, and will include lectures and demonstrations by Europe's most eminent doctors. The formal symposium will be the second week, the first and last weeks being devoted to the lectures, demonstrations and quizzes. It is estimated that 5000 persons interested in the battle with the white plague will attend and that the stimulus for united action throughout the country will be great. Having found that the disease may be prevented and, in its earlier stages, cured, united action is regarded as the only means of eradicating it.

Texas is leading in legislation that requires all afflicted persons to register their intention to enter the State so that the health department can surround the patient with surveillance intended to assist him and to intercept the extension of the disease. New Mexico and Arizona are contemplating such laws, and there is a probability that the California Legislature will be asked to enact laws of similar import.

The International Congress will include the most eminent of the world's students of the white plague and its eradication. But there are many men of many minds, and the topics announced for discussion in the seven sections of the congress disclose that the soldiers in the line of battle are following leaders in different directions because of the disputes as to the proper tactics to observe.

The generals are not agreeing on the lines of attack, and hence the congress is expected to be a clearing-house of world ideas, out of which may come unification upon a certain plan of campaign.

California is sending nearly 100 delegates to this congress. Not all will attend, but the number will be reached by the addition of those students of the white plague, who expect superior education from the sessions. Twenty-five will go from Southern California, and of this representation a dozen will be from Los Angeles and vicinity.

Two Los Angeles physicians, known for their school in tubercular cases, are on the stated programme of the congress. They are Dr. Norman Bridge of Pasadena and Dr. F. M. Pottenger of Monrovia. Both are practitioners in Los Angeles, and their subjects are closely related. Dr. Bridge is the protagonist of the rest system of treating tubercular lungs. The old idea of deep inhalations, physical exercise and strenuous treatment is disputed by Dr. Bridge, who believes rest, under treatment, is more beneficial. Dr. Pottenger is not on the other side of this dispute, which engages large numbers of eminent students of the disease on either side, but rather advocates both rest and exercise. He believes, and will advocate with abundant argument, that rest or exercise are matters that the individualism of the patient alone must determine.

FIGHTING FOR SQUARE DEAL.

Los Angeles Merchants Are Seeking Justice.

Honest Freight Rate Means More Prosperity.

Lower San Joaquin Tributary to This City.

If the efforts of the commercial and civic bodies of this city count for anything, the entire lower San Joaquin Valley will soon be entirely tributary to Los Angeles. Both the Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association have long striven to obtain an equalization of freight rates. When this is accomplished, the local jobbers will have as tributary all the rich valley north of the Tehachepi, as far as Visalia and beyond to Fresno.

"Sure, the San Joaquin Valley belongs to us," said Frank Wiggins, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, in his optimistic way. "I don't mean that we want to absorb all that section, but we want to claim relationship. From many personal visits through the valley, I know its residents are favorably disposed. At the present time we purchase far more from Fresno than does San Francisco.

"With a fair freight rate, we can compete on equal terms with the northern metropolis and both cities can have their share of patronage. It is Los Angeles capital that is opening much of the territory. It has bought large tracts of grain land and has cut them up into small holdings suitable for the farmer. We are always ready to invest in worthy enterprises and we are not wedded to local improvement alone. Our progress amazes me sometimes. And as our beautiful city increases in wealth and population, its merchants will reach out for more and more outside business."

TAKING ITS PLACE.

Secretary Wiggins says that this city is entitled to its just proportion of outside business, which is determined largely by social inclinations—that is, the sentiment in a given community towards this city.

For instance, he says that the residents of Bakersfield are undergoing a great change in their attitude towards Los Angeles. Formerly "the city" meant San Francisco. Now Angelenos are flocking in there on various business trips and hundreds of Bakersfield residents come here during the heated summer months.

The local Chamber of Commerce will always stand back of any move for the legitimate extension of trade relations, its secretary affirms, and he asserts his readiness to engage in any campaign started for the expansion of this city's wholesale business.

"The Merchants and Manufacturers' Association took up the matter of freight rates ten years ago," stated F. J. Zeehandelaar, secretary of the association. "We have always maintained that we are entitled to the same rate per mile as San Francisco merchants pay. It stands to reason that the rate per mile north ought to be the same as the rate per mile south from San Francisco.

"The railroads have maintained that this was impossible on account of the haul over the Tehachepi, but they have given San Francisco rates south over the Tehachepi to points in Arizona and New Mexico that are the same as from this city to the identical points, although we are 500 miles nearer."

DISCRIMINATED AGAINST.

Fred P. Gregson, traffic manager of the Associated Jobbers, is working to secure an equalization of rates. When this is accomplished, he believes the way will be made clear for closer trade relations with points in the San Joaquin Valley.

"On a basis of rate percentage—not actual rates—San Francisco has an advantage of from 30 to 60 per cent. over us," said Gregson. "We have not yet determined upon the best course to pursue. Our jobbers are now doing business in the San Joaquin Valley at a great handicap. The organization of salesman now maintained in the valley, means a great cost to them. We are striving for an equalization of rates. As all the shippers know, there is great discrimination now in effect. Los Angeles is the proper distributing point for at least one-half of the valley.

"Of course the cry of the railroads has always been that the haul over the Tehachepi made the difference in rates between this city and San Francisco. I have pointed out more than once that a large portion of the freight destined for San Francisco passes through Los Angeles, over the Tehachepi and on to Oakland. If it does not travel over the mountain route, it goes by the Coast line which has a hard haul over the Santa Marguerita range.

"The real trouble is that San Francisco merchants have always controlled the valley trade by virtue of established custom. They resent this city's stepping in to claim her share of trade. They forget that this is no longer a little adobe town, inhabited by Mexicans and pioneers. This is a metropolis. It is destined to be the largest city west of Chicago. It has always obtained what it went after, and I have great faith in the future of our jobbing interests.

NO NATURAL BARRIER.

"We do not recognize any trade rights by virtue of past custom. We contend that we are entitled to the same rate per ton per mile as is granted to our norhtern competitors. There is no natural barrier that keeps us from reaching out into the San Joaquin Valley.

"Los Angeles money has been poured in there to establish colonies, build up towns, promote beet sugar factories and subdivide big tracts. In the oil districts adjacent to Bakersfield, it is local capital that started the boom. Los Angeles men are pressing to the front in the peaceful conquest of this splendid territory and only a discriminating railroad rate prevents us from claiming our own."

Traffic Manager Gregson firmly believes in the future of the San Joaquin Valley. He believes that its residents are naturally favorable to Los Angeles and he thinks it is only a matter of time when all that territory will be tributary to this city's rapidly-increasing jobbing interests.

Not only will the wholesalers benefit by closer trade relations with the valley just to the north of Los Angeles county, but the retail merchants will in time gain trade from the valley.

Another improvement that the commercial bodies will work for is to secure better train connections. At present, the daylight train to Bakersfield greatly aids local traffic, but the connections to other points is still bad. An attempt will be made to induce the Southern Pacific officials to remedy this defect and thus materially increase its passenger traffic between Los Angeles

Talks on Teeth

BY THE REX DENTAL CO.
(Incorporated.)

New Teeth
New Life

The ALVEOLAR METHOD of supplying missing teeth without the aid of plates or bridgework, so-called, is a life preserver. It is a well known fact that people with missing teeth, or with teeth set on an insecure bridge or badly fitting partial plate, are unable to properly masticate their food, and food not properly masticated passes into the stomach unground and thus makes the stomach do double duty. It is only a short step to dyspepsia and from that to acute dyspepsia, stomach trouble, untold misery, and final death. Since the discovery of this marvelous invention known as the ALVEOLAR METHOD, this Company has been the means of saving countless lives. We are in receipt of expressions of approval on this remarkable work from all over this Pacific Coast. The following letter is a fair sample of what we are receiving daily from patients who have had the work done.

From a Prominent Contractor In So. Pasadena

S. Pasadena, Cal., April 7, 1908.
The Rex Dental Co., Los Angeles, Cal.:

Gentlemen—Some time ago you put in my mouth a full Alveolar upper set lacking three teeth and a full lower with the exception of five of my own.

I was very skeptical from the first, but as I progressed with the work my nerve returned, and with confidence restored and the work finished and in use it pleased me so much that I want to express my gratitude for what your Method has been able to accomplish. Very truly yours,

B. D. FURLOW,

Contracting Business.

Unfortunately, dentistry cannot be done by mail nor at long range. The patient must come to one of our offices for an examination of his teeth, but we believe that no sacrifice of time or money is too great to stand in the way of having this examination made, if one needs it.

Regarding the expense, we would say that we charge no more than any first-class dentist would ask for first-class work, so the cost is not prohibitive. An ordinary piece of work takes from two to four days to complete. There is no surgical work connected with the operation—no boring into the gums or cutting—nothing about it to be dreaded. It is practically a painless operation. All that we require is that there are two or more teeth left in either gum for us to work from. As a general rule, it makes no matter whether the teeth are loose or tight, we will restore them to a sound, healthy condition. The tightening of the loose teeth, which have become diseased through pyorrhea, is one of the secrets of this process and one which adds greatly to its value.

If you live too far away to call at once at one of our offices, send for our free booklet, entitled "ALVEOLAR DENTISTRY." This is one of the most valuable books ever written on the subject of the teeth and their care, and after you have read it you will be more than ever determined to put yourself at once under the care of one of our trained teeth specialists.

There is no time like the present. Why not attend to this matter today?

BACK FROM HUNTING TRIP.

Dist.-Atty. Fredericks returned yesterday from a two-week hunting trip at the head of the American River, where he went with a party of half a dozen. "We had a fine time and brought back one 500-pound black bear and five deer," he said. "The hunting was fine, and the country is splendid. Unfortunately, we were obliged to spend our first week fighting a forest fire, which broke out near the camp of a Nevada party which entered the woods ahead of us. The fire was finally extinguished by rain, after it had forced the Nevada people to move out."

CHAPTER XXIV—(Concluded.)

"I may as well tell you, doctor," answered Dashmore, "that your patient has spent the last two years entirely in dissipation. He is a victim of too much wealth, and he has tried to spend it. That yacht in the harbor would be raided by the police in any civilized port. That is the sort of patient you have."

"Then he is doomed," said the doctor, with conviction. "And yet, if you had not told me what you have I should have judged Mr. Vandraken to be a young man who had taken the greatest care of his health."

Five days afterwards Vandraken recovered consciousness. The first thing he said was, "Will you shake hands with me now, Slap Dash?"

And Dashmore, checking a weepy feeling, wrung Vandraken's hand as hard as he dared.

"You upset all calculations," he said. "You are going to recover, in spite of the doctor."

"I say, Slap Dash," asked the young man, eagerly, "has Lady Kitty asked about me? Does she seem to take any interest in my recovery?"

"Does she? Why, man, she can't be shooed away from your bedside. I tell you, you battle-axed your way to that girl's heart all right. I don't know what terms you were on before, but if she ever thought she had anything to forgive, she has more than forgiven it. Wonderful how a return to barbaric methods goes to a woman's heart! Florence Sidcombe can't see any black wool in my fleece, nowadays, and considers that I must have been grossly maligned. The glad hand is constantly outstretched. However, what's the good? I couldn't keep a wife in hairpins. So to the devil with pipe dreams. But it's different with you. There's only one thing between you and marrying Lady Kitty, and that's the "'hoochee-coochee' menagerie out there in the harbor, on board the Barbaric. So far, I have managed to keep that dark, but sooner or later, you know——"

Vandraken turned his face to the wall.

"I've got no chance, anyway, Slap Dash. I don't know why, but I used to think I could make the game to suit myself. I have a feeling now that I am going to be made to pay for my hurrah times in some other coin than money. I haven't been as unconscious as you think. I could feel Lady Kitty's presence about me all these days, and—— Oh, well, I can't explain, but it has made me see my life through her eyes, and it looks pretty bad. I had an idea that if you had money enough you could plan your life to suit yourself, and defy consequences. But I've had bad dreams, Slap Dash, since I got knocked on the head. The clouds of consequence are beginning to gather. A man may postpone them, but that's all. Sooner or later, they catch up with him."

"Look here, old chap," said Dashmore, "you are worrying about that woman chipping in and spoiling the game. You give me a free hand, and I'll get rid of her and all those gay dipsomaniacs on board the Barbaric."

Vandraken shook his head. "You don't know Veeda. She is too clever and subtle to be got rid of till it suits her. She is wonderful!—wonderful! I felt all that, too," he murmured, dreamily, "while I was in that trance-like unconsciousness. Lady Kitty and the Cobra battling for my soul—good and evil fighting over me—and the Cobra won!"

Dashmore went over to a table and began writing. Then he returned to the bed. "You don't mind spending a bit of money over it, I suppose?"

"Money! Why, it's awful to think how my income must have caught up with me these last few days, with no one to sign checks. No, I don't care what it costs."

"And you trust me to do the best I can, and handle the money to suit myself?"

"Well, rather, Slap Dash!"

"Very well, then. Sign those two papers."

Vandraken signed, without looking. "I suppose you'll do something, Slap Dash—you are good at doing things—but all the king's horses and all the king's men can't put Humpty Dumpty together again. That's the way I feel. I wonder if there's any chance that Lady Kitty would come and see me?"

"Of course she will. By the way, I have naturally laid low in this business. It is recognized as your show entirely; so don't go and say anything to upset that idea. As a matter of fact, it was you who took the big risk, allowing yourself to be captured, and defending the women at the beginning of the fight; and you furnished the men and the money and the arms; so you are fairly entitled to the credit. The American papers are full of it. They are a sentimental lot over there, and they have forgiven you your surplus wealth and your method of spending it. I say this because Lady Kitty is liable to say very nice things to you about saving her from our friend, Muley, and not much about me. Now I am going to send the doctor in to feel your pulse, and your man to 'slick' you up—then Lady Kitty for a heart-to-heart talk."

CHAPTER XXV.

Woman is accused of being inconsistent. She may appear so on the surface, and in the little things of the little parish, but in her relations to the universe she is absolutely consistent. Blindly, undeviatingly, she pursues her high mission of herding the human race toward perfection. Selecting and creating, she moves forward to that goal as fast as a multitude of obstacles will allow, dragging man behind her, as a nurse drags a recalcitrant child by the hand.

Her difficulties are enormous, because not only has she to so guide her choice that the highest material forms shall result, but she has also to seek her spiritual affinity; and so there is the apparent conflict of the human being seeking her physical mate, and her soul-self, on her star, trying to influence its material form to mate physically with the being with whose soul it has already made astral union. What wonder people do not always know their own minds, and that two people whose souls have been slowly dragging them toward one another across the world, sometimes marry elsewhere on the journey, and, when they do meet, have to decide whether they shall sin against the law of the universe by obeying the law of the parish, or against the law of the parish by obeying the law of the universe?

According to Von Tarsenheim's theory, all material bodies whose spiritual bodies belong to the same star have more or less affinity; are in tune with one another to some extent; are even capable of telepathic communication, and yet are not necessarily capable of that perfect union which must naturally, on account of the difficulties in the way, be very rare, but yet toward which all womanhood moves, scrutinizing every face she meets, experimenting, making mistakes, but always moving toward the light, like a flower in a dark room.

It is because of this strong instinct toward perfection in woman that man feels his imperfections in her presence. In Vandraken's case, this was accentuated because his imprisoned soul was groping toward him through Lady Kitty's, since they were spiritual affinities, to the extent of belonging to the same star. Their physical affinity they had felt the first time they met. Now it was tremendously accentuated in Lady Kitty by the primitive emotions which Vandraken's spectacular fight had aroused in her, appealing as it did to her instinct toward physical perfection.

Except in her presence, Vandraken did not exactly feel remorse for the way he had spent the last two years. True, they had not yielded him all the pleasure he had anticipated, and he had no objection to circumstances arising to curtail them, or to pass on to the other items he had planned in his life, before schedule time. He felt regret that men like Dashmore should censure his mode of life, and he was aware that if Lady Kitty found out about him she might be prejudiced against him.

But when they were alone together the young man felt the sway of new impulses. The worship instinct awoke in him dim perceptions of a higher life which made his past seem inadequate. He looked at himself with dissatisfaction, as a growing girl looks at her red hands and her obtrusive feet.

On the whole, however, it was not his past he quarreled with, but with his present. He had been shaken in his allegiance to a material life, and felt the growing-pains of the spiritual.

He was able to sit in a chair now, under the gaily-striped awnings of the balcony. It was three days since he had recovered consciousness, and he had made wonderful strides toward convalescence. Lady Kitty shared the balcony. She had quite recovered her pale bloom, and more than her usual share of vivacity. Yet, since Fabian Dare had come back into her life she had changed—as a garden changes when a cloud drifts across it. She took life more seriously.

"Do you know, Mr. Vandraken, every time Miss Sidcombe and I look out across the harbor and see the Barbaric, we long to row out to her and see what she is like inside. We asked Mr. Dashmore to take us, and he said he would."

"What!" exclaimed Vandraken, excitedly.

"Really, now, is there anything astonishing in wanting to see the biggest yacht in the world?"

"No, no—of course not. But I don't think Mr. Dashmore ought to take you until—well, until I am well enough to go along."

"That's what Mr. Dashmore says."

"Good old Slap Dash!—I mean it would be much better to wait till then. No hurry. Yacht can't run away, you know."

"Mother was saying today how nice it would be if you gave us a lift back to Ireland on the yacht. There must be heaps and heaps of room, and we could look after you. Donoyle would do you lots of good, and the people about must be dying to see the hero who saved our lives."

"It would be ripping!" answered the young man. "But the doctor thinks a sailing yacht, you know, and a longer voyage, would be best. The Barbaric is too fast. And I would like the trip to take a long time, so that I could be with you ever so long."

Then one of those eloquent silences fell between them which ever fall between a man and a woman who are drawing near to one another, and marks the stage when they have not dared to speak words of love and will not put up with the commonplaces of conversation.

The girl acquiesced happily in the silence, for she understood it. The man tried to think of something to say. The girl understood that, too, and remained a dainty statue in light blue chiffon, looking out to sea, chin on hand, waiting to know what it would be.

"Did you mind my sending those flowers?" he jerked out at last.

"It was an unconventional thing to do; but then I like unconventional things—so I liked the flowers, and the mystery of the red rose, which, now that you are here, you might as well make clear."

Vandraken looked troubled. "The impulse to put that red rose among the white lilies came from outside myself. I can't quite explain it—the meaning is, so to speak, on the tip of my thoughts, but I can't get it into form or color. You know what I mean?"

"Yes. It is like a bar of music you know, and love, and can sing in your mind, but can't even hum to yourself. All the same, you might have dropped me a line now and then. I thought we were going to be such good friends, and then, like the Snark, you 'swiftly and silently vanished away.'"

"'For the Snark was a Boojum, you see,'" ended Vandraken. "Yes, I was certainly a Boojum," he muttered. "If I told you why I vanished away, you probably wouldn't believe me; or, if you believed me, you mightn't care to have any more to do with me."

Lady Kitty had been proposed to before, and was not unfamiliar with the expurgated confessional which sometimes forms the preface.

"I think," she said, "I would rather you told me a few plausible untruths that shocked me. But mind—they must be plausible!"

"I went away from you, Lady Kitty, as the sinner sneaks out of the Gospel tent, when he feels he may become converted if he stays." Vandraken realized he was putting it lamely, but it expressed the way he felt.

"What an unpleasant thing to say, Mr. Vandraken! Surely, I never preached at you! During the last day or two we have discussed transcendental subjects in a mild way, but I have not tried to upset your belief. I thought you seemed interested in what I told you about Mr. Dare's theories."

"Lady Kitty," answered the young man, impulsively, "you are the last person in the world who would preach, but the effect of your personality on me disturbs the equanimity of my—well, I suppose you would call it my materialism. I don't believe in anything beyond this earth, and I don't want to. Why should I? Here my position is assured; if there is anything worth having, I can get it; and there are lots of things worth having. But if there is another world, I would probably be as badly off there as I am well off here. So, naturally, I don't want to believe in it any more than I want to believe I shall be a beggar next year, and have to work like those niggers down below there in the street."

"Well, you don't have to. I am not trying to convert you."

"But, Kitty—I mean Lady Kitty—you make me feel that I may be all wrong. When I am with you I feel linked up with remote regions, where all that I am, and have, count for nothing, except as they count against me. You make me understand why people build churches and cathedrals, and go there to worship. You give a meaning to music, you——"

"If you please, sir!" It was the valet who interrupted. He looked much flustered.

"What is it, Jenkins?" asked Vandraken, abruptly, much annoyed at the interruption.

Jenkins put his hand to his mouth, and cleared his throat, in that mincing fashion servants have when they are both amused and nervous. Then he looked meaningly at Lady Kitty.

"It's something very important, sir, and—er—private, sir. It's, as you might say, a message from the yacht. I think you'd best see about it, Mr. Vandraken, sir."

It is useless to longer deny that the people are with Bryan. They have already contributed $27 to his campaign fund.

Now that the public is paying money to hear such plays as "The Thief" and "The Devil," is it not surprising that little attention is being paid to the politicians.

Although Gov. Hughes would likely pull through, anyway, still it will stimulate the betting to know that Andrew Carnegie is taking an interest in the campaign fund.

There will be lots of people in balloons pretty soon who will be looking for soft places on which to drop when the bloomin' things start in to cut the figure "8."

It is said that Gov. Hughes of New York is ignorant of politics. All he seems to know is to go plugging along attending to his business as a servant of the people.

The affectionate intimacy that appears to have sprung up between Mr. Taft and Senator Foraker indicates that the Brownsville affair will not figure as an issue in the present campaign.

A Texas man who swallowed a silver dollar had to pay a doctor fifty to get it out of him. And we suppose the doctor didn't even take out the man's vermiform appendix while he had the opening made.

Between the woman who spends her time inventing new wrinkles in the equal rights movement and the woman who lies awake thinking how to put a better flavor in the buckwheat cakes and the gingerbread, we have no hesitation in saying which one we would prefer to tie up to.

Notwithstanding that we are in the midst of a Presidential campaign, when the politicians are supposed to monopolize all the limelight, the news indicates that the most banqueted and most banzaied man in the country is a certain Mr. Harriman, who is said to be engaged in the railroad business.

THE VALUE OF SENTIMENT.

No observer can have failed to notice how valuable sentiment is to any country, or any part of any country, that is able to lay claim to whatever may appeal to sentiment. Why do Americans flock to Europe? Is it to see the factories, the shipbuilding plants, the mines and the mills that are scattered all over Germany, France, Great Britain and the other nations of the Old World? By no means. But it is, instead, that the traveler goes to look upon some ancient ruin—the leaning tower of Pisa, St. Mark's, the castles on the Rhine or St. Peter's in Rome.

In a recent interview with Frank Miller, who conducts the Glenwood Tavern at Riverside, he declared that the old missions and Helen Hunt Jackson's story of Ramona have done more for the tourist trade of California than any other agencies. To be sure, our climate is an attraction, but eastern people find it really handier and more pleasant to cross the Atlantic, to Italy and Southern France for mere climate than to undertake a railway journey across this continent. It is fortunate for us, indeed, as far as the tourist trade is concerned, that California has a sentimental as well as a climatic attraction for travelers.

From a purely commercial view, if from no other, the people of California cannot make too much of the fact that this is the land of romance as well as the Land of Heart's Desire. It was the fabled land of the dreamers' dreams long before Cabrillo sighted its golden shores from the prows of his adventuring ships. It is the land of the Conquistadores and the brown monks of St. Francis, of padre and neophyte, Allessandro, Ramona, of swashbuckler, wanderer, Argonaut and all. On every purpled hill there sits a god and in every bee-loud glade broods the glamour of dreams lulled by the music of the moon-drawn seas.

It is a great satisfaction to know that neither the King's Highway nor the missions that still remain along its sunny length are to be allowed to perish and to be forgotten. It is with delight that we learn that now, after eighteen years of work, the Franciscan successors of Fra Junipero Serra have completely restored the old mission of San Luis Rey to its pristine glory. All that was original in that venerable pile has been saved, even to the pepper tree that Father Peyri planted there in 1798. Other missions are to be restored, El Camino Real is to be rebuilt and many another historic landmark, both of the mission days and the days of '49, are receiving the care that is their due.

With all California's wealth of romance and historic association properly exploited, this State will become the greatest of the meccas of the tourist. And the tourist frequently means the resident of a future day. We shall build stately cities, and the gardens of wonder shall laugh in the sun; but in our material progress and enterprise we shall not destroy the glory of those far-away times when California was new to the wandering feet of conquest and exploration.

LOST BETWEEN NOWHERE AND OBLIVION—A BUNCH OF FADS.

A rescue party and posse committatus are abroad in the world looking for a lost bunch of fads. It is a clear case of lost, for the fads had not vitality enough to wander, and no one outside of an asylum for weak-minded children would steal them. But the place where they were last seen is so completely and eternally enveloped in thick fog, so lacking in landmarks, paths or sign boards, that the prospect of finding the lost notions is not good. They may have disappeared through Symes' hole in the sky, or gone to the limbo of things lost from earth.

It is a most significant fact that the agitators of the initiative, the recall and the referendum have not been able to get a State or national indorsement from either of the great political parties. An attempt was made to ingraft these revolutionary notions upon the Republican national platform—but nay, nay. The same thing happened at Sacramento. And the busybodies fared no better with the Democrats. They had counted on Bryan, but that wily politician, seeing certain handwriting on the wall, forsook them.

These fads have gotten no farther than the thick woods of Wisconsin, and Battle Bob La Follette may have them cachéd there until a "more convenient season" than the present comes around once more to show these pets of his. You see they have proved very dangerous, in fact poisonous reptiles. Whole communities have been bitten by them, whose recovery is in some cases despaired of. The discovery of the poison in the fangs of these pets of Battle Bob has aroused much animosity and they would be dealt with most summarily if they were brought to light. They may have been sent to Darkest Russia where their likes were never seen. The "Young Turks" may in their inexperience be toying with these pets of Battle Bob. Where they are is all a matter of conjecture. The people of Wisconsin, where they did much damage, are just recovering from the effects of the poison. Sanity is becoming the rule, not the exception, in the Badger State.

Oregon, Oklahoma, Democratic conventions, Mr. Bryan and T'dore Bell all seem to have lost sight of these reptiles for awhile, if not forever. Bryan is whispering the gentlest platitudes about other things, and Bell is trying to carry Mexico for the Democratic ticket. Not a word is heard from Tom Watson about the "In."-"Ref."-"Rec." trio of fads. Debs has forgotten the subject, and Preston is in jail.

But all these are side issues. The burning question is where are the fads gone, who has hidden them away while an era of sanity holds sway, and where are they being kept until the dog days become infectious again and madness rules the world? Only a squeak is heard here and there—especially where the City Council is to be coerced in its functions if the faddists can have their way.

Mr. Bryan is a past-master in the art of getting new fads and forgetting old ones. But surely it is not the silence of the national Democratic platform on these particular fads that closes the Bryan mouth upon them. Yet not a word do you hear where "rolls the Oregon," nor from Oklahoma, nor from Mr. Bryan, urging the beauties of initiative or the referendum on the attention of the rest of the country.

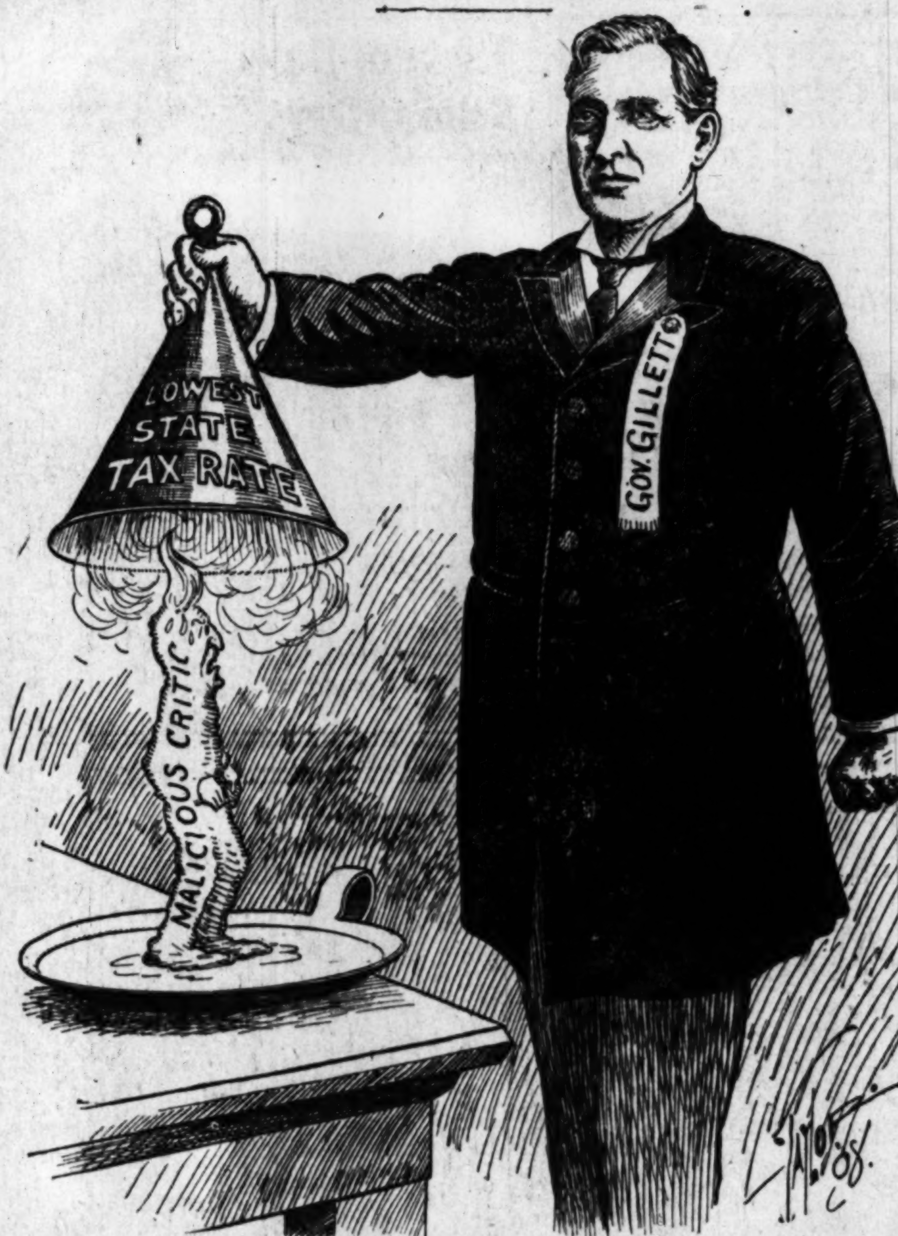
Why is this? Perhaps the explanation is that fads are as delicate as artificial flowers, as changeable as the fashion in women's hats. They never have vitality enough to persist long. They are usually seized upon by persons not of the strongest type of mind, and children and other weak-minded persons are proverbially fickle in their partiality to their playthings. The handsomest dolls are stuffed with sawdust, and rough handling "lets the stuffing out."

Yesterday it was the cross of gold that scared the world and the silver cartwheel that charmed us all. Then "Imperialism" was the scarecrow and free trade the doll. Again the "In."-"Ref."-"Rec." fad was the pleasure of all the weak-minded, and the Constitution of the United States was the scaramouch.

And now the dust that covers the free silver fad hides also the referendum. This season's doll is a tax on wise, honest bankers to make up for the sins of the unwise and dishonest ones, and the bogie-man is the courts.

The Republican platforms, State and national, absolutely repudiate all these fads, thank God! At Denver, none of the theorists bent on some sort of attack on the government as organized with the help of Jefferson, as upheld by Jackson, and on down to Cleveland, seemed to remember that these fads had ever been dear to their hearts. The Democratic national platform ignored them. They are deader than Adam's off ox, Julius Caesar's ghost, Cock Robin, and the man who struck Billy Patterson. Dr. Mary Walker, if still beneath the "glimpses of the moon," may have some recollection of them. Gen. Coxey and his lieutenant, Carl Browne, may be preaching them in this world or in the next. But these poor mangy curs, "In.," "Ref.," "Rec.," which once hunted votes with Billy Bryan and T'dore Bell are now consigned to the tender mercies of the dog catcher, to be starved or chloroformed, as he likes.

THE EXTINGUISHER.



"THE BEST PEOPLE."

The self-dubbed "best people" in the country have given a new demonstration of their superiority; of course, some of the old features were to the fore; for example, it was to celebrate a divorce. What would draw degenerate society together if it were not a severing of the bonds which tie a millionaire to one woman and cut out others only too willing to share his millions? A marriage is usually an occasion for joy only to the heart of the winner. A divorce opens up a game for all to play a hand.

Another usual feature was the fact that the Vanderbilts held the center of the stage. Then there was feasting, music and dancing. But "wine, women and song" are the trimmings to all such rejoicings.

And when this scion of Old Tar Vanderbilt (who navigated a ferry between the Battery and Staten Island) had been duly congratulated on his divorce, when the élite had chased the fleeting hours with flying feet, when the digestive organs were duly cumbered with comestibles and potables of all kinds, and the daylight was dawning to call sane people, those not in the "best society," from wholesome sleep to rational pursuits, the company seized the cotillion leader in his Tuxedo, shirt-front and pumps and ducked him in a swimming pool. The "best people" had previously drawn sides and pelted one another with lobster salad, custard pie, ice cream, butter and gravy, while there was a shot in the locker.

This settles the question forever. The plain people are in the rear ranks now for 100 years. Not in less than three generations shall they rise from the plane of ferrymen and blacksmiths, develop such nice taste, such perfect manners, such a sense of the savoir-faire, the comme il faut, the recherché, the spirituelle, as shown at this Vanderbilt divorce ball, with the battle of broken meats and the ducking in the horse pond.

MUST WE BECOME CAVE DWELLERS?

Gazing at Aviator Wright, cutting figure eights and sporting in the air like an amorous eagle, his namesake, the Secretary of War, made a few observations at Fort Myer last week. As it was practically the first public appearance, not only of the aëroplane, but of Taft's successor, a waiting world naturally hung onto the lips of the Cabinet Minister. Here was a chance for the possessor of the war portfolio to achieve fame. He was given the opportunity to rival the sentence none too correct historians forced on the tongue of the Duke of Wellington at Waterloo: "Up, guards, and at 'em." Or he could achieve something like the reputation which came to Nelson when his flags fluttered the message: "England expects every man to do his duty," a phrase which Togo brazenly plagiarized at the battle of the Sea of Japan. Honor for all ages came as near to Wright, the War Minister, as to Wright, the flying machine man, but it found the former without the goods. The most wonderful sight of the century he greeted with the one word: "Extraordinary!"

The heavier-than-air machine having buried Secretary Wright's reputation as a phrase-maker, we may well consider what it is going to do to us unfortunate people who possess neither portfolio nor aëroplanes. It is all very fascinating to read about one bold mariner of the air cavorting in the wind above the stately domes of the Capitol, but what is the great American public going to do when a few thousand of these contraptions skedaddle athwart the eternal blue, as the poet calls the sky? How are we going to escape when the fool who rocks the boat ascends heavenward and drops peanuts and things from a delirious height upon our unprotected cocoanuts? This is the problem of the age. Perhaps Rockefeller will establish a college for the sole purpose of considering this awful question and arriving at a solution.

"They build too low who build beneath the skies," once remarked the same pessimistic gentleman who gave us the familiar quotation about tired nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep. He lived in a day when any one who suggested that man could conquer the air with a ship or a plane or any old thing would have been ducked in a pond, if indeed he escaped being hanged, drawn and quartered. Certainly when airships cover the heavenly right of way people will find out the truth of his remark. But as buildings above the skies are not to be had for the asking, particularly by the rich, and as in any case to have a habitation up there would render one indifferent to worldly affairs, we must turn our thoughts to dwellers beneath the top soil.

It seems that we may be compelled to become cave-dwellers. If fortune has treated us well we can have a splendid subterranean palace like the Duke of Portland constructed beneath Welbeck Abbey. But fortune turns to most of us a shoulder beautiful but cold; therefore, for the majority it must be caves, not mansions, if down we have to go for cover.

A GOOD RECORD.

The Times heartily congratulates the congregation of the First Christian Church of this city on the pastorate of Rev. A. C. Smither, who has filled this pulpit for eighteen years.

This pastor came to this congregation, if we may be pardoned for the language, a young man green from the seminary. He began his work at the deepest foundation stone of the society and has worked with faithfulness and wisdom all these years, going step by step from one measure of success to another, until he has today one of the great churches of the city.

Rev. Mr. Smither has done this great work by hard and persistent effort. He has kept a clean record, has so steered his spiritual craft among the breakers that he has never had any church scandal. His time has been given entirely to his own work, almost entirely to his own society. He has kept out of the limelight, and has been guilty of no grand-stand play so far as we recall.

We congratulate the city on the presence here of every earnest, devoted, wise prophet of the Lord who directs his spiritual charge with so much of the spirit of true religion as Mr. Smither has displayed. And the city is blessed with a number of such.

LIFE.

[From "California: Where Sets the Sun."]

Life hath such little worth if life is all
But life of earth; if with the pall
Of death covering our senseless clay
Our being passes into nothingness away.

ELIZA A. OTIS.

The Supreme Court of Michigan on Direct Legislation.

"The power of enacting general laws cannot be delegated—not even to the people. There is nothing in the Constitution which authorizes or contemplates it; nothing in the nature of the power which requires it; nothing in the usages of our American government which sanctions it; no single adjudication of a court of last resort, in any State, which affirms it; and such delegation would be contrary to the intent manifested by the very structure of the legislative department of the government.

"While the power and the responsibility of legislation remain where the Constitution has placed them, before any proposed measure can become a law, it must first struggle for ascendency at the ballot box, amid the numerous issues involved in all political contests. It must pass through the ordeal of public and deliberate discussion in the Legislature. It must receive the sanction of the concurrent vote of a majority, or, having been returned with the Governor's veto, of two-thirds of the members of the two houses of which the Legislature is composed—votes cast by men who are not the mere deputies of their immediate constituents, but the representatives of the whole people, and bound to act for the general good; who are responsible to the people for their action, and may be held to that responsibility. Public opinion will prevail, and pass into public law; but it will be enlightened, deliberate, permanent and organically expressed public opinion. It is this opinion alone which the Constitution designed should govern. Such a government secures deliberation and responsibility in legislation, and affords protection against the despotism of official rulers on the one hand, and of irresponsible, numerical majorities on the other. It has been appropriately termed, 'the flower of modern civilization.'

"But if the Legislature may transfer this power and this responsibility to the people, where are the checks which the Constitution intended to provide against hasty inconsiderate legislation? Where are the securities against arbitrary and irresponsible power? We may be subjected to
of the popular majority of the hour whose opinion must be formed without

THE LANCER.

AFTER all why should we envy the rich luxurists of society. We may not be able to do all that they can; but in our simpler, humbler way, we, I suppose, can get filthy drunk with a lot of blackguards in evening dress and sling food at one another. We cannot all throw pate de fois gras; but bologna makes a much better weapon.

Auble's Death.

Capt. Auble died a man's death—fighting. Some of his "friends" who are now sobbing over his end, had other plans for him. Every one knows that Walter Auble was the object of a most contemptible conspiracy planned by crooked little ward politicians.

They were rounding in on him and were about to depose him;—"send him to the goats" as the police slang is. Auble was too decent and honest a man to do the dirty work that was cut out for him at one time.

I had known Auble well, for many years. He was a tender-hearted brave man. I should have been sorry to have gone to his funeral and seen some of the sniveling hypocrites who went there shedding tears.

Sutherland killed his enemy quick with a gun; did not strive to break his heart with intrigue.

Making Criminals.

One day last week we sent 600 man hunters out to capture a boy who shot a policeman. One man and one word at the right time would have been better.

The time to have "captured" the murderer of Capt. Auble was several years ago when, as a child of twelve, he was starting out into the world and headed the wrong way.

If the brains that are used up on "penology" were turned into heading off boys from crime, we could get along without policemen except such as are necessary to escort befoozled young men out of the way of street cars at night.

Instead of making any real effort in this direction, we have built up the best crime factories the world has ever known. At no time was the finished product ever turned out with such celerity as now.

We begin with the moving pictures that show how crimes are committed; we advertise the trade well with bill posters of cheap melodramas.

We build up a perfectly ridiculous system of criminal laws which seem to have been devised with the help of an idiot asylum. We complicate it with a police system whereby our most delicate social ailments are placed in the hands of a most ignorant class of men. When a sore is found in our social anatomy, we don't call in a skilled doctor; we call in a blacksmith.

A boy going wrong is a social sore; he needs a doctor; it avails nothing to tie him up in a jail.

Lastly, having neglected the case as stupidly and brutally as we know how, we send the boy to State's prison where Despair and Hatred enter his heart and he learns everything vile and shameless and dangerous there is to know.

Then when he comes out, we make it our business to see that he sticks strictly to that trade and is allowed no other.

The finished product is a dangerous enemy of society.

kish Sentimentality.

The last nibble that he took was out of the Lincoln-Roosevelt League—which was certainly very much to the cheese, as slangy people say.

He really had no business venturing into any strife so rude and rough. His mission in life was asking people to please advertise in the paper; then going round with the bill and the paper to show them how nice the ad. looked in print.

year; this makes it easier to pay the bill. Chapin got so used to apologizing for the little paper for which he begged advertising that it has come to be a settled habit.

Providence, who has her dippy moments, made him editor of the Pasadena News, which he edits in the same way he used to collect for the advertising.

If there should be a great disaster in Pasadena, the first thing Editor Chapin would do would be to rush to the books and find out how many advertisers were killed. But I see that I do him an injustice. He would not be obliged to rush to the books to find out the names of his advertisers; he knows the names of both of them.

He edits the paper with one eye on the ledger and his heart palpitating. One of the sterling rules of his office is that nothing unpleasant is allowed to officially happen to any one who takes the paper.

It is a well known but lamentable fact that many people make it their steady job to write to newspapers finding fault with everything. When any one does that to Editor Chapin it almost gives him fits. He rushes wildly out and flops the paper over on the other side, or runs down a hole—whichever course seems best adapted to the circumstances.

Chapin has large callouses on both sides from continual flopping and continually scraping down very small holes.

The funny part is that he ever cherishes the delusion that he is about to make such a hit that every one will rise up with a yell and pronounce him a Deliverer. He gets up a little squeak about something which he fancies will sound like a tremendous roar. Then he slips into the back room and tries on halos—preparatory to the triumph.

Of course somebody always makes a howl of wrath and Chapin's knees give way beneath him. He fairly blubbers for sympathy.

He grabs up a copy of an offending paper and rushes timidly down the Pasadena streets. With an expression of grief and anguish, he stops all the passers and shows them the paper and says, with a pathetic abused air, "Now what do you think of that?" If they don't sympathize with him, he hurries skittishly on to the next man and repeats his plaint with tears in his voice.

It is a pitiful thing to behold how many rocks he has struck on his little breathless progress down the stream of journalism.

Sometimes it just didn't seem that anybody loved him. And he tries so hard to be so nice. He always went around and wept at the funerals and marched in the parades and politely hurrahed when Pasadena was doing anything.

But still they found fault.

Lon would stand gazing through his tears at his pesky paper, wondering why people couldn't love the little mushy thing.

Finally, after many hard knocks, Lon devised a scheme that was a wonder. He discarded all his other opinions and just chirped joyously about Virtue. When he got this inspiration it thrilled him.

"How could any advertiser," he asked himself, "object to my wrestling with the Demon Vice?"

At first he was little scary, but he grew bolder and bolder. At last he got so he would lash into Vice with ferocity—Los Angeles vice, never Pasadena vice. Of course there wasn't any Vice in Pasadena to lash into, but that made it all the safer. He was always careful to define some Vice without a Pasadena address.

He just had all kinds of a frenzy with his imaginary monster. The way he would deal with the supposititious case of any young man who would burn down a church in order to get a light for his pipe was enough to send shudders down the spines of all of his readers.

There being no saloons in Pasadena, he could just play the Dickens with the saloon, the enemy of the home.

Little Lon was happy at last; he had found something that nobody could possibly object to. He had nothing to do but cut down expenses.

"Here," thought Lon, "what's the use of paying for telegraph when there's a street car?" So he installed a boy to leap on the Pasadena car the minute the Los Angeles papers appeared and bring 'em to Pasadena, where Lon cribbed the news from them and piously printed them as "dispatches" to the News.

Oh, Lon was getting along finely and the goose was hanging high; but another catastrophe happened.

One of the reforms that he started was about docking horses' tails. Careless Lon. Before railing about the moral principle involved in sawing off a horse's tail, he neglected to hunt around Pasadena to find out if there were any stub-tailed horses.

Merciful horrors! Lon was caught with an opinion on his person. The Southern California Horse Show Association, which had an advertisement running in his paper, had some dock tailed horses. They wrote him a letter.

It broke in upon Lon's peace like a woman's past being brought up to confront her in her happy home. He was just downright discouraged. Of course he said right away that, on second thought, he just liked horses with tails so short they had to be filed off. But it was a long time before he ventured on any reform. He even shied at anything as comparatively safe as the child marriages in India or the evils of the New York sweat shops. Lon resolved to himself never, never, never again to take any chances and never to have any opinions about anything.

But of course, he did.

Lon simply couldn't get over that dear pipe dream in which he saw all the people of Pasadena and vicinity advancing on the News office with a large loving cup to be presented with happy tears of emotion by the Mayor, "to the bold and daring editor who has guarded our liberty while we slept."

When the Lincoln-Roosevelt League started, Lon couldn't hold himself in. You know you forget how much it hurt when the last tooth came out.

The little old reformer was on the job again. There wasn't anything to reform, of course, but that is the very best kind of reforming that Lon does. He got in every evening and gave little spitting noises and little squeaks and after each squeak, would lie back with a soulful expression and say to himself, "Oh, I ain't just scattering vice, though."

At first Lon was pretty nervous. He would write a little squeaklet about "machines" and then make a dive for the list of advertisers and subscribers to see if any were missing.

He went to the Lincoln-Roosevelt meetings which were like all other Lincoln-Roosevelt meetings. They patted each other on the back and told each other how virtuous they were and how bold and wicked the rest of the world. Lon was very very happy indeed, but ever in the happiest moments, always in the midst of his finest raptures, he would be seized with that sinking sensation, and rush back to see if any of the subscribers were gone.

Suddenly the whole works went down with a crash. Poor little Lon. Have you ever seen a little rabbit so frightened by a snake that it sits down in the middle of the road trembling with wild dilated eyes?

The Lincoln-Roosevelt has gone and Lon's the rabbit. He has fled to the little mouse hole which has sheltered him so often before and at last accounts he was sitting there shuddering.

Once in awhile he makes a curious little rush out to count up the subscribers and when it is broad daylight, he ventures timidly out on the street with a copy of some "organization" paper and shows it pleadingly to the passers-by, saying, in an injured tearful tone, "Now what do you think of that?"

If ever Lon gets out of this—never, never again. This is positively his last opinion.

He will go on sending his ambassadors to buy the first copies of the Los Angeles evening papers so he can steal the telegraph; he will go on weeping at the neighborhood funerals and praising the "socials" at the M. E. Church, and chortling happily over the Pasadena parties—and advertisers' names published at the head of all social lists.

But no more opinions—even reforms aren't safe.

In Good Luck.

"About two years ago my father came here from Mason City, Iowa, on a vist," says O. L. Scott, Duffield, Mich. "While here he was taken sick with diarrhoea and cramps. I gave him several doses of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and it cured him." This remedy always cures.—[Adv.

FORMAL EXHIBITION AND OPENING SALE of New Fall Garments, Millinery and Dress Accessories

The leadership of this store was never more clearly apparent--more forcefully demonstrated--than it will be by tomorrow's Formal Exhibition and Opening Sale. That "The New York" occupies first place among the retail establishments of this city is an axiom--a self-evident truth. It is not the largest, but it is the best store; the most exclusive; the most helpful in anticipating its patrons' needs. You are invited to visit the store this week--to see the new styles--to find out at first hand "what's what" in the world of fashion--and to get posted on advantages of early selection.

Tailored Suits

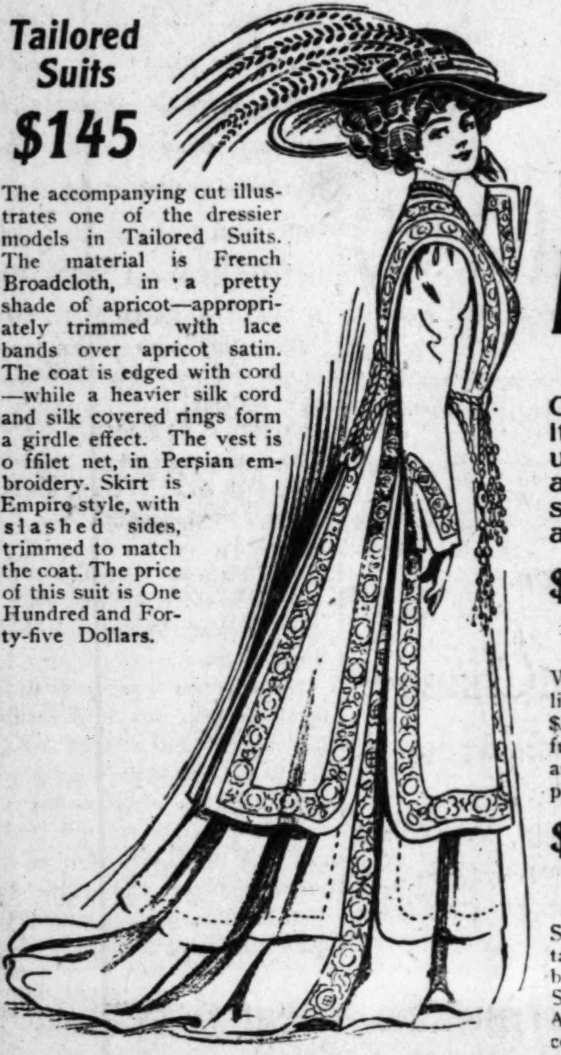
The accompanying cut illustrates one of the dressier models in Tailored Suits. The material is French Broadcloth, in a pretty shade of apricot—appropriately trimmed with lace bands over apricot satin. The coat is edged with cord—while a heavier silk cord and silk covered rings form a girdle effect. The vest is o ffilet net, in Persian embroidery. Skirt is Empire style, with slashed sides, trimmed to match the coat. The price of this suit is One Hundred and Forty-five Dollars.



Suit Hat

Herewith is shown one of the very late styles in Tailored Suit Hats; black satin shape, faced with golden brown corded silk, trimmed with black jet buckle and Paradise wings. The price of this hat is sixteen-fifty.

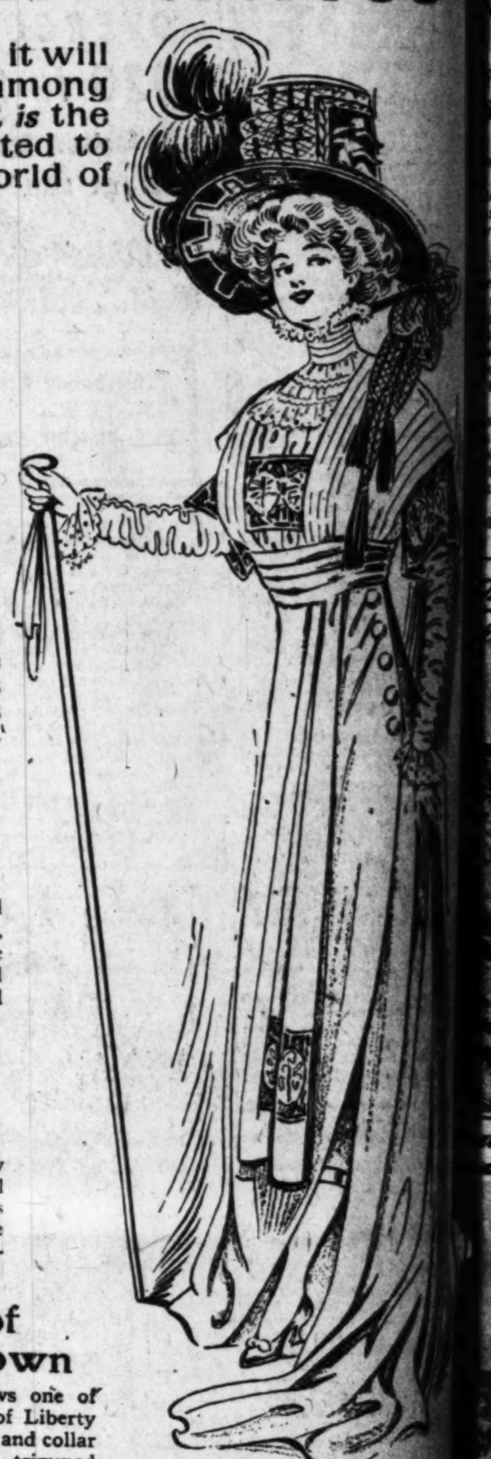

Exhibition of Autumn Styles

This is reception week for the exhibition of Autumn Styles—the Tailored Suits, Coats, Skirts and Waists that are to "set the fashion" for Los Angeles women. And it is to be a season of radical changes; no sameness—every garment bears the unmistakable imprint of a new season. Come in tomorrow—while assortments are at the best. There is much to enthuse over—in the way of prices as well as style. The authoritative position the New York Store occupies in women's wearables makes it imperative that you at least look here before buying.

Every suit strictly new.

Plain and fancy serges and broadcloth, in semi-fitting and tight fitting models. The coats are three-quarter length, effectively trimmed with silk tailor braid and buttons. Some have the new tapestry vests. Skirts are in gored and plaited styles—also sheath effects. These suits are exceptional value at the $35 price.

Tailored Suits In This Sale at $47.50

Exclusive styles in fine chiffon broadcloth suits; new shades, including donkey gray, dregs of wine, apricot, seal brown, electric blue, tan and plum. Description of Directoire Gown

The above illustration shows one of the new Directoire Gowns, of Liberty Satin, in pale amethyst, yoke and collar of Point Gaze Lace, waist trimmed with richly embroidered Persian bands. This is the original Directoire mod a magnificent production. The price is $87.50. Other Directoire Gowns—in fawn, apricot, old rose, light blue and tok $65 up to $95 each.

Late Style Skirts

Including Sheath Models

Sheath skirts are gaining favor, and it is our prediction that they will be very generally worn before the close of the present season.

We are showing latest styles in pleated, gored and sheath skirts—of voile, broadcloth, panama, taffeta and satin—some modified in cut, others in original models, from $11.50 up to $29.50.

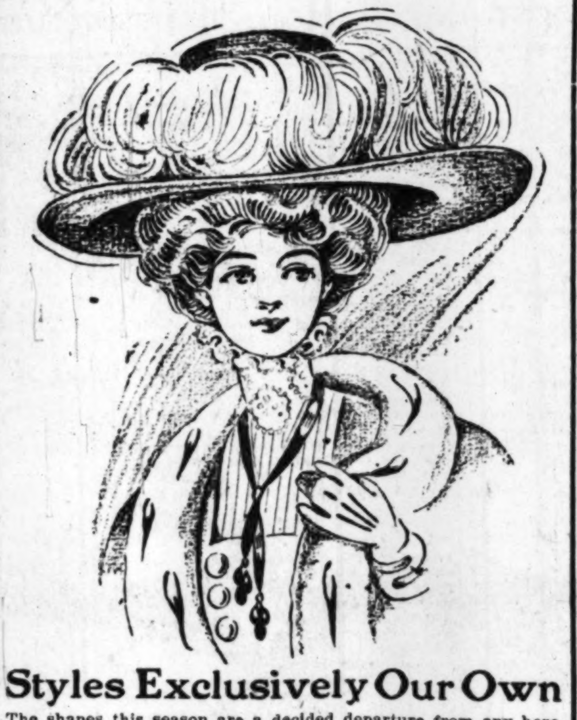
Fashionable Wraps For Street and Opera

Long tight-fitting tailored coats for street wear have the call this season. Smart styles, of selected cloths and French broadcloth, from $19.50 to $39.99.

The new evening wraps are shown in cape and stole effects; some have the flowing cape sleeves. Made of chiffon, broadcloth, silk or satin. The former trimmed with gilt buttons, in military effect. From $17.50 to $150.

New Fall Millinery From Foremost Designers

Exclusive Paris and New York styles—Georgette, Susanne, Virot, Lichtenstein and Joseph & Water's models—many of them confined, in Los Angeles, exclusively to the New York Store.



Styles Exclusively Our Own

The shapes this season are a decided departure from any heretofore shown—refreshingly original. While the hats, almost without exception, are large—quite large—the heights of crown vary greatly. Some are very low, while others are strikingly high.

Materials most in demand are French felts and satins, with a wide choice of trimmings. Prevailing shades are wisteria blue, paon, taupe, and mahogany. Black and white effects are very popular.

Whatever is new is here—and the price is right; in keeping with this store's standard of quality. You simply must see "The New York's" millinery exhibit before buying your fall hat. Not to do so would be a serious mistake—an oversight that you would surely regret.

The department is in charge of Miss Myra Miller, who was for many years with Howland's of Denver—and who has just returned from an extended stay in Eastern Style Centers.

all in place, and the work is developing its own power for the power lines. Speaking of the problem of desert and elevated transportation, Mr. Mulholland said:

"The solution of the problem of desert transportation and branch roads at a distance from railroads seems, so far, to have been successful with the caterpillar traction engine. This machine, essentially differing from all other traction engines, is particularly successful on the soft sandy roads and in surmounting grades prohibitive to teams and old style engines.

GREAT ENGINE WORK.

"To illustrate: The rise in grade from siding No. 5 to Sugar Loaf camp, Jawbone section, is over 1000 feet in six miles over a very sandy road. The last mile has a grade of 12 per cent. and the last quarter mile a grade of 14 per cent. Notwithstanding these grades the caterpillar is daily hauling 18,000 feet of green lumber over it with ease. This is equivalent to thirty-one and a half tons.

"To give an idea of the effectiveness of this the best that can be done with teams is a load of about 600 pounds to the animal, with extremely slow progress. It is expected that this engine will do proportionally well on the level stretches hauling cement, sand and broken rock. It is representing about 10 cents a ton mile cost as against 30 cents for teams."

Mr. Mulholland expects to receive a gasoline caterpillar engine soon to test its efficiency. The one now in use is a fifty-horse-power oil steamer. He believes that the work will require a dozen when the work gets in full blast.

With the attack on the resisting hills and valleys under way at forty places, as it promises to be within sixty days, Mr. Mulholland expects the progress to be represented, in the concrete, will equal twenty feet to the place or 800 feet daily. Perparations for the Saugus division, the extreme southern one, are about complete, and the attack on the open work there will soon be begun. This is immediately north of San Fernando.

Big Profits in Dairying

Dairying is a money maker on our Corcoran Farms. No better alfalfa land in all California. Water in abundance. Surface water at a depth of from 8 to 12 feet—we guarantee it. Each rancher controls his own water supply, pumping as much as he needs from his own wells.
A creamery right at the town of Corcoran gives the dairyman an immediate market. Hogs raised on the ranch can be fed on the skim milk left from creamery products, and on alfalfa.
Our Corcoran Farms grow six cuttings of alfalfa a year, producing 1½ tons to a cutting, if the place is properly cared for. A man can realize from $40 to $75 an acre from alfalfa itself—and make more if he works this crop in connection with dairying and hogs.
Other profitable crops are Sugar Beets—which can be sold at the Million-Dollar Beet Sugar Factory at Corcoran—Potatoes, Onions, Beans—and many kinds of fruit and berries.
Pay us one-third cash on your place, then pay nothing, except the interest on the balance, for the next two years. This will give you time to get your holdings on a paying basis. Then during the following two years pay us the balance. Did you ever hear of such favorable terms? Come in and talk with us.

PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The City Council has learned that there is no appropriation for the expense of 215 street lights distributed through the city ordered by the Council recently and one will be sought.

Attorney Stephen Sullivan, who pleaded guilty to issuing a fictitious check, was placed on two years' probation by Judge Bordwell yesterday.

Henry J. Dufty, who chopped off the head of his son, Fred, with an ax on August 13, entered a plea of not guilty to a charge of murder in the Superior Court, yesterday.

STREET LIGHTS WITHOUT FUNDS.

COUNCILMANIC LEMON THAT LOOKED LIKE PEACH.

Pruning Knife of Economy Reduces Appropriation for Public Lighting and the "Highly Satisfactory" Distribution Through the Wards Turns to a Joke.

Some Councilmen who were pleased with the annual distribution of street lights by wards about six weeks ago are revising their opinions. For instance, Councilman Clampitt got thirty-two lights for the Second Ward while Councilman Healey got only eight. (The Eighth didn't need many.) Others fared in the same proportion until the total number, 215, was distributed through the nine wards. Such a satisfactory distribution had not been made for a long time and the Councilmen were happy.

However there is gloom now. The pruning knife of economy in the hands of the Finance Committee did not spare the light appropriation. Councilmen are finding that the appropriation for lights was cut $11,000 and hence the apportioned new lights will not be available this year. The Councilmen feel they have been handed a lemon.

Yesterday Councilmen Clampitt, Healey and Lyon put their heads together and decided that the Council must provide the money necessary to install the lights. They were given to understand that the appropriation had been reduced because the electric light company could not put the lights up this year, but the trio decided to get the appropriation and then apply the whip to the light company.

"The Finance Committee figured probably," said Councilman Clampitt, "that the lights would not be installed before next July and for that reason no appropriation was necessary."

"But we must have light," said Councilman Lyon. "The public safety is concerned and we have provided for the dark places and we must provide the money for the lights."

The light question will probably come up at the session of the Council Monday.

Merrifield a Candidate.

Capt. J. A. Merrifield, deputy in the City Assessor's office, tendered his resignation yesterday to the Civil Service Commission as an eligible under the rules, and left the assessor's office. This step was taken because Capt. Merrifield is a candidate for the nomination for City Assessor subject to the decision of the next Republican convention. He is the first announced candidate for municipal office and will devote his time between now and convention time to his candidacy. The convention will not be held for a year. Capt. Merrifield is a veteran of the Civil War, having served on the staffs of Gens. Crawford and Baxter, and retired because wounds received in battle compelled him to. He is a Knight Templar, a Shriner, and a member of the Stanton Post, G.A.R. He has served as Deputy County Clerk and deputy tax collector.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

"LIFE IS NAKED HERE IN JAIL."

DISGRACED ATTORNEY STRIPPED OF ALL ILLUSIONS.

Pathetic Appeal for One More Chance to Redeem Himself and Support Family—Takes Highest Honors at College, but Succumbs to Drink—On Probation.

As the result of a pathetic appeal from Attorney Stephen L. Sullivan that he be given a chance to redeem himself, coupled with a solemn promise to abstain from liquor in future, Judge Bordwell, yesterday put him on two years' probation. He passed a worthless $7 check on the Del Rey Restaurant on July 29, while intoxicated.

Sullivan acknowledged his crime at the time of his arrest. The Humane Society caused his wife, Mrs. Mary Sullivan and their three small children to be brought before Judge Wilbur, as Hollywood neighbors testified that the couple were victims of drink and that their children were suffering from neglect. The children were placed in the Ransome Home, where they now are, with Mrs. Sullivan, who was allowed to accompany them.

After reading the lawyer's petition for clemency, Judge Bordwell said: "It appears that if you drink liquor, you will be doing as dangerous a thing as to carry a lighted match into a powder magazine. I will give you the chance you ask to make a good record."

In applying for probation, Attorney Sullivan narrated the history of his life. He stated that he is 35 years of age, and that his parents are both dead. He received the Bachelor of Arts degree from St. Mary's College, Oakland, in 1890 with highest honors—the gold medal for both Christian philosophy and the classics. In 1896, he graduated from Hastings Law College, San Francisco, and the same year received the degree of Master of Arts from St. Mary's College. He practiced law in San Francisco, but came here with his family after the earthquake and become connected with Hunsaker and Britt.

"Sometime afterward," he said, in part, "I began to drink, a little at first, gradually more and more. Despite neglect of my business and leniency shown by my employers, I was not satisfied with the amount I consumed downtown, but I took liquor home with me. A criminal carelessness was my supreme folly.

"Life is naked here in jail, each man, is, as it were, a disembodied spirit. There are no illusions. Every soul is stripped. Looking at life from a new viewpoint, I have in this terrible school been taught forever the utter folly of sin. I want to face the situation like a man. I desire one chance to begin anew, to do right. I want to live and work for my children whom I love. I will shun saloons, work hard, attend church, and reëstablish myself in that spiritual life which I have loved long since, but lost awhile.

"Criminal carelessness, fathered and emphasized by drink, is the cause of all my trouble. I want above all to save my family. To this end I respectfully petition you in the hope that there may be some legal and honorable way of restoring me to my family, who right now are so sadly in need of my help."

ABSENT MATES.

THREE DIVORCES GRANTED.

A woman who would not live in California, a man who would not live with an older wife, and a man who preferred another woman to his wife were divorced by their deserted partners in Judge James's court yesterday.

"My wife disliked California from the first day we came here from Pennsylvania, in 1906," said Otho S. Furlong. "We settled at Modesto, and she would neither make friends with our neighbors, nor attend church, nor take part in social functions. Finally she packed up and returned to her people in Pennsylvania, in spite of my protests, and when I saw her in Pennsylvania at my mother's funeral, some months ago, she refused positively to return here."

"My husband, Joseph O. Kaets, is ten years younger than I, and I had the money when I married him," said Mrs. Johanna B. Kaets. "We did not get along well together, and two years ago he went north to Washington. I wrote him, asking him to return, and he has not replied. I own a large ranch, and we worked together on it, but he was always awful rough. He has his property and I have mine, and he don't care anything for me any more."

"John A. Colter left me four years ago, and after he had gone, I learned that there was another woman in the case," said Mrs. Mary E. Colter. "I have met him several times since and asked him to return, but he has always refused."

GREWSOME MEMORY.

SHAKING, DENIES GUILT.

Wearing a heavy bandage about his throat, unkempt, and shaking like a leaf, Henry J. Dufty, in the Superior Court, yesterday entered a plea of not guilty to a charge of murdering his son, Fred Dufty, on August 13. Attorney A. A. Sturgis appeared as his counsel, and ask that the setting of the date for his trial be continued one week, that an affidavit may be filed to show that he is insane. The motion was granted.

Although Dufty has partially recovered from his attempt to cut his throat with a butched knife, after he chopped off the heads of his son and his daughter. Mrs. Zaida Le Com, he is still in a very feeble condition. He entered his plea in an uncertain voice, his hands twitched constantly, and he walked into and out of the courtroom as if he did not realize what he was doing.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

BATTERY CHARGE. Mrs. Dora Rappaport yesterday filed in the Superior Court a suit against August Daniels for $10,100 damages, for an assault alleged to have been committed on North Beaudry avenue on August 25. She states that she formerly occupied Daniels's house on Bellevue avenue, that she paid her rent until the first of September, and that while she was moving to her North Beaudry avenue home, in August, she refused to surrender the keys to Daniels's house on his demand. She says that he struck her twice on the head with a can, kicked her, dragged her along the street, and inflicted injuries that, in her delicate condition, imperiled her health.

CAR ACCIDENT. Mrs. Conception A. Parra yesterday filed in the Superior Court a suit against the Pacific Electric Railroad for $15,000 damages. She says that as she was crossing St. Louis street on September 12, she was run down by a car and sustained fractures of ribs, an arm, and a leg, permanently crippling her.

MISSIONS REMEMBERED. Julius A. Brown, executor under the will of Mrs. Amy E. Brown, who died in Los Angeles on September 7, leaving an estate in excess of $10,000, yesterday filed the will in the Superior Court for probate. The estate is left to relatives, with bequests to the Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

CRUELTY. Frank J. Smith paid $50 fine in Justice Selph's court, yesterday, for custody to animals at Glendale.

DISMISSED. Justice Selph yesterday dismissed a charge of embezzling $700, lodged against Dr. J. Byran Sloan by the American National Bank.

LOSES BABY. Judge Rives yesterday denied the petition of J. F. Cory to be allowed to adopt a nine-months-old baby girl, placed in his home by the Children's Home Society in December, and later removed. The mother of the child, a Mrs. Kurth, testified that she wishes her to remain in the custody of the society, as she intends later to provide for her herself.

HABEAS CORPUS. Judge James yesterday dismissed a writ of habeas-corpus taken out on behalf of George and Josephine Wagner, held in the County Jail on request of the Peoria, Ill., authorities on a charge of conspiracy. The court was informed by the defendants that they desire to return to Illinois, as they left that State because they had been informed that they could lawfully do so.

INCORPORATIONS. Articles of incorporation were filed with the County Clerk, yesterday, by the Comet Mines Company, capital stock, $100,000; the Merchants Bank and Trust Company, capital stock, $300,000; the Call Engineering Company, capital stock, $150,000, and the Fireproof Roof Tiling and Veneering Company, capital stock, $50,000.

LICENSE CASE. E. Pickering, owner of a Chutes Park concession, was arraigned before Justice Selph, yesterday, on a charge of failing to pay his city license. He will be tried next week.

FORGERY. E. P. Walton was examined yesterday on his application for parole. Judge Bordwell continued the hearing until Tuesday. Walton forged G. P. Taylor's name to a $25 check on the First National Bank on May 25. He said that he did it while drunk, and produced witnesses to show that his previous record has been good. He formerly conducted a detective agency but met with reverses last fall, he said.

HOBNOBS WITH SERIS.

lingo of the Seris. I did not understand a word he said, but we managed to get acquainted somehow, and after a little while the chief lighted a pipe of peace. I took a whiff and he grunted in frontier Spanish that we would be good friends. Of course, I was a bit suspicious, for an Indian may be a good friend today and an enemy tomorrow—but I let it go at that.

"The chief showed us where to get water and sent some of his men to help us cut wood. He told me I was the first white man he had seen in several years, and he was very friendly. We ate a supper of sea turtle, stayed there that day, and then went on to other points, where we saw other Seri Indians, but none of them molested us. In all, we made five separate landings, covering the whole of the island. In the course of the month we went clear around it.

"At Pearl Point I found a long sand bar that is literally paved with the famous pearl oysters, and I have no doubt that there is a vast fortune awaiting somebody who is willing to make the expedition.

"The chief's present of a bow and arrow was a pleasant incident. In turn I asked him what of our stores, naming them over, would strike his fancy. He speaks a sort of doggerel frontier Spanish, and I made out, after some reflection, that he thought he would like my shirt. I immediately handed out the present, in fact, I made it two, but he refused the second one, saying, after long thought, 'I can wear only one shirt at a time.' This shows his simple mind. I am sure he will never wash that shirt, but will wear it till it drops off or is torn to rags in the brush.

GETS WOODEN CROWN.

"The son took a fancy to my hat, and, of course, I at once took it off and gave it to him, and in turn he presented me with a wooden crown, rather ingeniously made of strips of wood, coming together and fastened with a detachable pin, with a knob at the end. It is ornamented with red and blue stripes. I gravely put on the crown and Ponchito seemed greatly pleased.

"We had a hard time getting the snapshot of the chief and his bodyguard. They would not pose before the camera, because they are terribly superstitious. Do you know why? They believe that everything that belongs to them must go with them, at death, and if anything that is part of them gets away, there will be terrible trouble in the spirit world. In order to get the chief and the men near him before the camera I pretended to line them up to distribute cigarettes, and while my man was about to pass along with the cigarettes I snapped the shutter. They got the tobacco also, and never knew, of course, that I 'got their ghost.'

"I do not know what would have happened to me if I had been discovered in the act of taking this picture. It is the first photograph of this celebrated chief. He is usually reported a cannibal, but my presence here today is sufficient proof to the contrary. In stature he is six feet four inches, but he does not show it in the snapshot, on account of the lay of the land and the angle at which I took him.

"I saw many deer heads in the chief's camp and a large pair of mountain goat horns. I would have taken the goat's horns, but they looked too old and rusty. The arrows presented by the chief are beautiful pieces of native workmanship. The heads are of iron, carefully sharpened with pumice stone. I sa wthem doing the work, and it is an endless job, I can tell you. The head is held in place with pelican sinews, tightly wraped. The upper part of the arrow is of willow and the lower part of bamboo, bound with pelican sinews. There are small ornamental bands on the arrow and one of them looks as though it were put on with pitch.

"The Seri Indians live largely on sea food, such as turtle, fish and sea lions. They have prodigious skill with spears and venture out on rough seas in dugouts, that are handled with extraordinary skill. The Seris swim like fish, and their eyesight, in fishing and hunting, is so keen that they can see almost as well, it struck me, as a white man can with a marine glass. Let me illustrate. As we neared the island, at our first landing, I raised my glass and leveled it this way and that, and finally saw, at a great distance, an Indian boy sitting on the rock. I had barely focused on him when he leaped into the sea. He had seen the queer-looking object pointing at him.

"On the beach I counted eighty sea turtles' shells on my first landing, and afterward saw many others. I brought back with me some of their pottery, and it is excellent for stuff made by barbarians. They make jugs and pans.

"The waters around there are alive with sharks, but the Indians do not molest them. There are also immense numbers of all sorts of fish, from minnows to black whales.

"The temperature of the island is about 110 to 120 in the sun, but the nights are cold. The east channel, according to Dewey's chart, is called 'Inferno,' and it is certainly well named. There are parts of the eastern channel, cutting off the island from the mainland, that at low tide is only half a mile wide, I should say; and it varies from that distance to three miles wide.

"During our five landings we went about on Tiburon, but did not visit the high interior mountains, as our time was too short and we were on a business trip, anyway. The island is what may be called semi-barren. There is a lovely valley about five miles long and three miles wide, on the north, but there does not seem to be any water. In fact, there is not much water on the whole island, and streams are hard to locate. The water is usually a small spring. We saw many deer tracks and a few coyote.

"The south end of the island is largely of granite formation, the upper end porphyry and diorite. The high range extends through, except at the extreme northern end. There is plenty of mesquite on the island, also some ironwood.

"A terrible pest there, making life unendurable, is what I called the 'sea-skeeter,' like a big, black gnat. It stings in the day, but not at night. Its bite is very painful.

NEVER MOLESTED.

"During the month that we visited on and off, exploring for phosphates, we tramped around Tiburon a great deal, but were never molested. In all I think we saw about fifty of these supposedly cannibal Indians, but they were all friendly to us. In numbers the Seris are a mere handful. To me they seem a dying race.

"I would have no hesitation in going back there at any time and going all over the island, if necessary, for in my opinion the bloodthirsty character of the inhabitants has been grossly exaggerated."

The report brought back from Tiburon Island by Capt. Thompson is at variance with the traditional returns made by explorers and leaders of expeditions seeking gold or adventure. Thousands of readers of The Times will find themselves perplexed to reconcile what the captain says with many other printed statements. In the past the Seris have always been pictured as cannibals, ruled by a race of Amazons.

Tiburon has been classed as one of the world's greatest geographical mysteries; and the race inhabiting this unknown island has been unclassified by scientists. Some authorities have regarded the Indians there as "renegade Apaches;" other equally high authorities have regarded them as the "last of the Aztecs." This name is commonly ascribed today to the Seri Indians of Tiburon.

Local interest is added to the story by the fact that the island of man-eating Seri savages is the property of Mrs. Guadalupe Andrade-Blinn of Los Angeles, whose first husband, Gen. Guillermo Andrade, was for ten years Mexican Consul in this city. He received the island and 250,000 acres just south of the United States border line in return for diplomatic services. He stipulated in his will that should his wife remarry she would forfeit her inheritance. On her second marriage, a sensational legal battle followed to break the will, and resulted in confirming to Gen. Andrade's former widow the property.

In his lifetime, Gen. Andrade with 200 men gathered in the slums of San Francisco, once attempted to gain possession of Tiburon, but the man-eating savages put up such a desperate fight that Gen. Andrade's troops refused to go on with the battle, and returned to their boats. At various other times parties of miners, prospecting on Tiburon, have been reported meeting cannibalistic deaths. The stories following the visit of "Arizona Charlie" Meadows—a survivor of the famous Walker expedition—added to the sensational character of the Tiburon man-eaters.

LETTERS TO THE TIMES

[The Times freely publishes the views of correspondents without holding itself responsible for writers' opinions. Be brief, write plainly, state clearly. The space of 250 words, on the average, is sufficient for the point. Well-written letters are liable to be declined merely on account of their length.]

The Law's Delays.

LONG BEACH, Sept. 10.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I have read Gen. Jones's letter in today's Times, and your footnote thereto. I am of your opinion, as there stated. Jones is on the wrong track; to talk of deficiency in the punishment in our laws—our laws punish most severely. Question if not too much so, in some cases.

This is not the trouble; it is the delays and nonsense the laws allow in the enforcement of the criminal laws, from the moment of the arrest, to the "rope" or San Quentin, as the case may be.

Had this scoundrel Sutherland been caught alive, he had every chance that his finality would not have been reached for a couple of years, and if an error had been committed in his trial, then, plus another year. During this time some people doubtless would have discovered in him some points of heroism and some silly women would have kept his prison cell fragrant with flowers.

What, if anything, can be suggested as some remedy for the existence of so much criminality in California?

I take it that humanity is the same inherently here as, as say, in Great Britain, France, Germany, Canada.

It certainly will be admitted that crime, is, per capita, much greater here than in any of those countries. And it seems to me that there is no reason for this state of facts. If we accept the statement I have made that inherently humanity is the same in each of these countries, then I think that the trouble comes from the dilatory and absurd processes in the enforcement of the criminal law; I am safe in making the statement that under Anglo Saxon criminal law such a practice as we have here does not exist, and would not be permitted by that people.

Take the man who killed Mrs. Canfield, and this wretch Sutherland. In an Anglo Saxon country the man would be under the ground by six months, and Ruef and the other San Franciscans would be behind the penitentiary walls or free men by now.

What a burlesque the trials of these San Franciscans has been! The months it has taken to clear out the "brush" in these cases and the weeks to select a jury—these cases have brought out clearly the laws which have allowed such work to be done. Let the next Legislature prune out these laws; will it do it? It is safe to answer, no. The politician and shyster lawyer will not agree to it, and there is no one responsible to see that it is done. Let me say right here, this is our trouble, no one responsible to see to it.

Judges, witnesses, and Ruef, et al. will be either in Paradise or Hades before Ruef et al. pay their penalty to the people. Let us have the law, that when an indictment is found it stands, and the defendant must be placed on his trial within sixty days before a jury, and that a jury must be chosen in forty-eight hours; the law so ordered, that the defendant may know his "state," in so far as his trial goes; that it can be begun and ended without delay. It is the quickness of the blow—if guilty—that deters. It is the knowledge the criminal has of the chances of his getting off, if caught, that encourages many to take the evil course.

as farmers are whether under irrigation or depending upon rainfall. In the six months they have been on the land the colonists have erected neat little frame cottages and planted large tracts in alfalfa, corn and gardens of vegetables. There is a well one on section. Nearly all the land is spoken of by farmers as being susceptible of cultivation and the vast majority as being classed as "good." There are streaks of bad, according to those asked, but they do not affect the worth of the whole. Having no personal knowledge of farming the writer expresses no opinion whatever, only giving the general views expressed by persons interviewed. Prof. D. T. Fowler of the State University is here under arrangements with the Board of Trade to give farmers' institutes and to aid colonists and other ranchers. He speaks well of the colonies' prospects, of the land and of the people. The settlers get their ten, fifteen, twenty or forty-acre tracts at $25 to $60 an acre, on easy terms.

The new settlement is three miles south of Panama, a little hamlet consisting of a store, a postoffice, a typical rural school-house, a church and a few houses.

Kern county has thousands of acres capable of supporting a large population. Ownership by the Kern County Land Company and Miller & Lux of thousands of the best acres is believed by many to be responsible for keeping out settlers but the land company has always professed a willingness to sell its lands upon terms and to aid colonists. Along the Kern Island road and for some distance on either side are scores of farms, which one must pass en route to Mountain View, that were sold years ago by the big corporation. It sold the lands for the late colonies planted by Los Angeles capital.

LOS ANGELES MARKET.

But it is not only in the matters of bringing settlers, or of getting money to invest in oil that Kern county is bound to Los Angeles and has been for years. The southern city is Kern county's market. Ninety per cent. of farm products shipped go south, mostly to Los Angeles and immediate vicinity, although lots of alfalfa is sent by commission men in the southern city to Arizona points. Scarcely any goes north. Dairy products are collected by commission men daily through a regular system of wagon routes over the principal parts of the county, so that butter, eggs, etc., consumed on Los Angeles tables come

"We find the claims set forth by Barker Bros. to be founded upon absolute facts;—that they are in reality the largest, foremost, most progressive, most up-to-date furniture house in all the west;—that they are the only house on the Pacific Coast catering to and satisfactorily meeting the demands of all classes of trade;—that they constantly carry a larger stock than any other firm and show at all times more new goods and later, more attractive styles;—that they sell at lower prices, on the most liberal plan (spot cash or convenient payments--just according to the customers needs and desires);—that every patron is treated with utmost courtesy;—and that on every purchase the buyer is assured of an invariable

New, Artistic Mission Furniture

Our showing of new Mission Furniture is really noteworthy—for in this splendid gathering of late styles and newest products from the famous L. & J. G. Stickley shops, are to be seen what is undoubtedly the finest examples of Mission Furniture yet exhibited on the Coast. In the quality, designing and finish, the products of this particular one of the several Stickley shops are recognized at once as the best of them all. In the clean-cut, true Mission lines, careful selection of material and perfect finish of every piece, there is "superiority" in every detail. Davenports, tables, desks, etc., and chairs and rockers in which genuine comfort may be had without sacrifice of artistic effect.

New Chill-less Iron Beds

The latest, greatest improvemetn yet achieved in iron bed construction. Instead of the usual cast "chills," with which joints and connections are finished in the ordinary iron bed, these new beds are made perfectly smooth, similar to bicycle frame construction; heavy steel tubing is used, all connections being brazed. The absence of ornamentation, plain, artistic lines, and rich Vernis Martin or white enameled finish, places these beds in a class by themselves. Prices very attractive. We have a fine line now on our floors. Make a point to see them.

fewer deeds of evil in Los Angeles than for years past.

The Los Angeles gang is added to from time to time by eastern criminals. Most of them live in respectable lodging-houses in the quiet residence districts. Many of them work at times. Arrest one for vagrancy, and he immediately refers to the last place he worked to show his inclination to make an "honest" living.

OPIUM SMOKING DISCOURAGED.

Until recently these men were opium smokers. The crusade of the police in the Chinese quarter was the beginning of a long campaign for the extermination of criminals. More than threescore Chinese made a living by taking opium from the dives to customers of the criminal type, who smoked in some out of the way place. Unfortunately, some of the druggists of Los Angeles are only too willing to make big profits by the sale of cocaine, morphine and chloral to these degenerates.

A "dope fiend" is robbed of discretion and strength. He knows that his physical condition will not permit of his handling a man with his hands, so he is driven to make use of a revolver.

Crime waves are generally started by eastern crooks, who come here and begin depredations. The local desperadoes, quick to grasp an opportunity, wait until some one has been caught and identified as a member of an eastern gang, and then they rob right and left, the while living apparently respectable lives. Prior to starting in on such a campaign, they invariably secure work of some kind to ward off suspicion.

The members of this gang have "codes of honor," observed in the division of property and in the protection of their kind.

Every criminal has his followers, who warn [illegible] impending danger. Business often figures prominently in dealings with the desperadoes. A man who attends church on Sunday may consider it a shrewd stroke of business if he is able on Monday to warn a criminal that he is being watched, knowing that the latter can control a certain amount of trade from the Tenderloin. And no matter what else the Tenderloin is, it does not seek cheapness. Its inhabitants do not barter, but buy the most expensive things without question. They are ideal customers, from the tradesman's viewpoint. Their money comes easily and goes easily.

A warning may come like a whisper from the wind as a crook stops a moment to look into a show window. He does not turn to see who has given it. His face does not change, but he is on his guard. A friend may stroll up as he stands lighting a cigar. "You ought to try the cigars they sell at Tucson; they taste good and are less dangerous to your health," the friend will remark. It is safe to say that Tucson will have a visitor who will stay there until the "tip" comes from Los Angeles that he can safely return.

Members of the gang, as a rule, work in pairs, or there may be three. They are entitled to the products of their individual efforts. Let one get in jail and bail is not lacking for him. This is often secured by blackmailing an apparently respectable citizen who would probably not care to have his wife know that he is desperately in love with "Babe" or "Dollie" of the Tenderloin.

When the fleet was here a man was arrested in San Pedro for "nipping" a diamond and a roll of money from a man well known in Los Angeles. The thief was caught, but was released without even a preliminary examination. Why? Because the citizen who had been robbed found it to his good, for some reason or other, to absent himself from the city. The police postponed the thief's trial several times and then he was given his freedom.

BOND PUZZLE IS UNSOLVED.

ADVISORS APPOINT COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE.

Conference Held, but Those Taking Part Seek More Light Upon Private Sale by Supervisors of Good Roads Issue of Securities—Favor Competitive Bids.

The only positive outcome of the secret conference yesterday morning between the Advisory Committee to the Board of Supervisors and the latter on the private sale to J. H. Adams & Co. and the Los Angeles Trust Company, of the $3,500,000 good-roads bond issue, was the appointment of a subcommittee of three, consisting of P. J. Beveridge, Hollywood; Mayor Thomas Earley of Pasadena, and George H. Stewart of the Chamber of Commerce, to confer with the Supervisors Monday morning on the matter under consideration. This committee will report to the Advisory Committee at an adjourned meeting to be held at the Chamber of Commerce Wednesday morning at 9:30 o'clock.

No statement was given out of the proceedings at yesterday's meeting, but it is known that a strong sentiment manifested itself in favor of open competition in the sale of the bonds, while Supervisors Patterson, Wilson and Eldridge did not recede from their position that the private sale was expedient and for the best interest of the public. All the Supervisors were present at the conference except. Supervisor Alexander, and all the members of the Advisory Committee were present except J. C. Koepfli.

Chief Deputy District Attorney Hartley Shaw, Chairman Daggett on the Highway Commission, and A. E. Loder, engineer of the commission, were called in to give their opinions on various features of the work to be undertaken. It is reported that consideration was given to the question whether the bond buyers would not have ground for legal action against the county, should the award of the bond issue to them be rescinded, and that the committee was informed that the work on the highways will not require for some time the full payment of the proceeds of the bond issue.

No representatives of bond houses were admitted to the conference, nor were any propositions received from them. The legal aspects of the award at private sale were considered yesterday and will receive further consideration from the subcommittee, but until a further meeting or several more meetings, the Advisory Committee will not be prepared to make a public statement.

"I am not at liberty to tell what transpired," said F. W. Blanchard, secretary of the Advisory Committee. "As soon as the committee has the matter in shape, a full and careful report will be made public. But it was felt that public hearings at this stage would result in giving rise to many misunderstandings that would impede the work, and that the interests of the public would best be served by privacy for the deliberations of the committee."

This great mercantile house is pouring a stream of splendid furniture into houses of all classes, in every part of the city. Bankers and clerks, bu men and wage-earners are taking advantage of the greatest credit sale ever known.

Why is Brent's doing the furniture business of the city? Because the stock is so vast, the goods so reliable; the prices so 'way low, the cred commodations so generous. Everybody says, "I can do twice as well at Brent's."

Particular Notice—Some stores try to hold on to their trade by spreading malicious and false reports about Brent's goods and methods. Other stores try to make sales by claiming to be Brent's or of Brent's. Avoid these deceptions by getting into the right store. Look at the windows before you enter. If it isn't "Brent's," move on. Remember, there is only one Brent's, and it is located St. near Seventh; not on the corner, but a few doors south.

Its object is to convey reliable information of interest and value to the public, and it is not for the private benefit of any miner, collector, speculator or prospector. Correspondents are particularly cautioned to take careful note of the statements and injunctions contained in the paragraphs below.

(1) Specimens must be small and bear a tag giving name and address of sender, and the general—not exact—locality from whence the specimen was taken, also the name of it as nearly as the sender knows. Send, also, with the specimen a clearly-written letter briefly describing the find and what the finder wishes done with it. The letter must be properly dated and plainly signed.

Letter and specimen must be in one package, not in separate enclosures.

(2) No attention will be paid to anonymous letters or to letters signed merely with initials.

(3) No examination of samples or specimens will be made in cases where The Times deems or decides that the specimen and inquiry are not of public interest. This office does not undertake to perform the work of an assay office.

(4) Inquiries relative to matters of purely personal interests will not be answered.

(5) When no response to an inquiry made or specimens sent appears in these columns, the inquirer will understand that his inquiry does not come within the purview of this department.

(6) It is impossible to return specimens, as they must necessarily be destroyed or impaired in the process of analysis.

Address invariably, The Times.

Wolframium.

DENVER (Colo.) Aug. 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] We are everyday readers of The Times. Frequently we read in your "In the Earth" columns, references to the ores of tungsten. Our desire is that you publish a short paper showing and describing the commercial ores of tungsten; a description of the metal; how prepared and how to obtain commercial tungstic acid from wolframite. We desire to thank you for your appreciated help in the past, and trust our request will be replied to. Yours cordially, B. F. [illegible]

ANSWER. Glad to hear from you: Tungsten (Wolframium) is a metal and does not occur native. There are three valuable commercial minerals from which tungsten and its salts are usually obtained, these minerals are: Wolframite, known, also, as, tungstate of iron, 5 to 5.5 in hardness. Sp. gr., 7 to 7.5. Of submetallic luster. Dark gray to black-brown in color. Streak, black, red-brown or black. Some specimens are slightly magnetic. Before the blowpipe small chips of the mineral fuse to a globule, which globule possesses a crystalline surface and is magnetic. Among the many tests for ores of tungsten it is well to note the following: (1.) The minerals are heavy. The powdered minerals treated with aqua regia (a mixture of one part nitric acid and two or three parts of hydrochloric acid—both acids to be chemically pure) are decomposed with separation of tungsten trioxide (tungstic acid of commerce,) a canary-yellow colored powder when dry. It requires, at times, a boiling of the powder and acid to extract the entire percentage of tungstic acid. Tungstic acid is soluble in aqueous ammonia.

(2.) Hubnerite, when pure, resembles wolframite, but is more of a glassy brown in color; it is native tungstate of manganese. Its powder treated as that of wolframite or boiled in hydrochloric acid, a. p. yields tungstic acid, soluble in the same menstrium as stated under wolframite.

(3.) Scheelite (calcium tungstate or tungstate of lime) occurs in octahedral forms, massive, granular and "reniform with columner structures. Hardness 4.5 to 5. Sp. gr., 5.9 to 7. Of vitreous-adamantine luster. Colors, white, white-yellow, green, brown, red, orange-yellow or black. Streak, white when pure. Brittle of uneven fracture. Soluble in hydrochloric or nitric acid (the two best acids for mineral test) and from either of the acid solutions (after a slight boiling) tungstic acid separates out (often in powder form surrounding the tailings) as a yellow powder, which powder must be soluble in aqueous ammonia. Scheelite does not effervesce in acids like carbonate of lime.

Magnetic iron ore, some varieties of ilmenite, titaniferous iron, columbite, and spathic iron cubes are often submitted to the editor of this department of The Times as wolframite; and very often as hubnerite.

Heavy minerals of the mineral family are likewise (and often submitted as scheelite—including many varieties of calcite, baryte, "marble," the feldspars, pegmatite (graphic granite) and even [illegible]

Specular Iron.

[illegible] ANGELES, Aug. 20.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The samples inclosed was taken out of a claim in [illegible] district, Arizona. Would [illegible] name the composition of [illegible] especially the square tube [illegible]. We call it "Mahogany [illegible]" it carries some gold. F. H.

Nagyagite.

[illegible] (Colo.) Aug. 17.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I read your "In [illegible]. A few days ago [illegible] the department. In [illegible] you some ore from [illegible] with which I had a [illegible] I bought a lot of the samples and paid good money for them, and offered them to a Chicago mineralogist for purchase.

They were sent back with the statement that: "Samples are not sylvanite." We believe they are sylvanite, and every mining man in Boulder county says the same.

Please give us your determination of the mineral and oblige.

Yours faithfully, G. W. T.

ANSWER: Glad to hear from you. Samples submitted are not sylvanite.

Sylvanite is tin white in color, but very often samples are obtained at the mines near Sunshine, Gold Hill, Magnolia and Wall street, Boulder county, Colorado, that are of a light lead-gray color, resembling the color known as "London smoke." Sylvanite is 2 in hardness. Sp. gr., 8.20.

B. B., your samples and those of sylvanite give beads of metal on the matrix. Sylvanite roasts out in yellowish globules in the furnace, while nagyagite gives gold lead-colored globules, when roasted.

Sylvanite is known as "graphic tellurium." Your samples are also "graphic," i.e., in certain characters like pegmatite (graphic granite.)

Sylvanite is a gold-silver telluride. Nagyatite carries gold also, with lead, sulphur, antimony and tellurium.

Nagyagite is only 1.5 in hardness. Black lead-gray, and iron black in color, with sp. gr., slightly under 7.

Vanadates.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 21.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I understand this ore carries vanadium. Will you kindly publish in your "In the Earth" columns a chemical analysis of same. It was discovered in the New York Mountains.

Respectfully yours, W. J. N.

ANSWER: We would gladly comply by giving you a chemical analysis, but that is out of the question, for the reason that The Times columns would all be filled with analyses on vanadates received from Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Arizona, Nevada and elsewhere.

Your samples by qualitative analysis are very low grade vanadates, carrying manganese, iron and copper values, and of but little value commercially.

Many deposits of mineral carrying vanadic acid are of laboratory interest only, and do not justify the idle, mineralogical writings from dreamland, that so often is published in magazines on the subject. A novice on examining the vanadates of Utah and Colorado alone has been known to become ecstatic in the laboratory with specimens, which, on a commercial scale turn out to be auto suggestive, so to speak, and very difficult to save values.

Concentrating Material.

REDLANDS, Aug. 26.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I send you in small package a sample of local ore. Please tell me what it carries besides gold. There is a white metal that looks like silver. What is it? The ledge is about twelve miles east of Redlands. Please let me know through your "In the Earth" columns and oblige.

W. H.

ANSWER: Sample was not tested for gold. It is made up of microscopical crystals of pyrite, garnet and spathic iron cubes in a matrix of impure quartz. The whitish stuff holding back in the pan is titaniferous iron only.

A Mechanical Mixture.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I submit herewith placer sample taken about thirty miles north of Los Angeles.

In horning there is a whitish substance which stays even back of the gold. Will you kindly inform me if it is platinum, or anything of value?

Yours truly, S. S. W.

ANSWER: A sample of concentrates was received by The Times in a square glass container with aluminum screw top. No marks of identification appear thereon.

You may be an innocent trespasser. The material looks like it had been through a mill and escaped from a quicksilver trap below the tables. Mercury is present in the sample, as also, crystals of ilmenite, hematite, quartz and iron oxides. Two small grains of platinum are mechanically mixed with the miscroscopically selected crystals.

A fire assay for platinum is called for; at the same time this department of The Times is responsible only for the sample submitted.

Not Bromargyrite.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 26.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Inclosed you will find small sample which I believe to be bromargyrite; if not, will you please inform me what it is. It comes from the Sierra Madre Mountains, near Los Angeles.

Yours respectfully, H. N. C.

ANSWER: The sample is not "bromic silver." Silver is present to a very low per cent., probably as cerargyrite. It is a very poor specimen of siliceous matter and was not tested for gold.

Hanksite.

DAGGETT, Aug. 23.—[To the Editor of The Times:] An old prospector gave me three crystals obtained from the desert. I send you a sample and request that you name it in your "In the Earth."

Yours truly, J. J.

AHEAD OF TIME ON TUNNEL WORK.

HEADINGS OF UNITED VERDE HAVE BEEN MADE.

Large Production of Copper for Month of August—The Warrior Mine Becomes a Steady Producer. Copper Queen Putting in Electric Equipment on Each Level.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Sept. 11.—The great 7000-foot tunnel of the United Verde Company, below Jerome, is practictly complete, and connection between the two headings will be made within a couple of days. This completion will be much sooner than had been figured. The tunnel connects with a straight drift from the 1000-foot level of the great mine, which it will drain and ventilate. It is generally understood that it will eventually be made the main working entry, when the smelter will have been moved to its mouth, from the present location far up on a cañon side, above the town. Much of the smelter site is above the mine workings and occasional settling of the ground has demonstrated the danger of the location. Cheaper and more expeditious railroad transportation may be secured also if a projected Clark broad-gauge railroad be built from Flagstaff into the Verde Valley, possibly to the mouth of the long tunnel. The tunnel in size is 7x9 feet, with a water conduit at the bottom. It has been equipped with only a single track, which will be electrically equipped. August's production at the smelter was 3,250,000 pounds of converter copper. The July output was only 1,800,000 pounds, due to closing down for awhile for repairs. The company is paying monthly dividends of 75 cents a share on 300,000 shares, of which Senator Clark owns about 92 per cent.

The Warrior mine near Globe has gone into the ranks of steady producers and is shipping fifty tons of ore a day to the Old Dominion smelter. In the same vicinity, the Miami Company is sinking a four-compartment working shaft. The Keystone property is to be explored by means of churn drills.

The Old Dominion Company's production for August was about 3,500,000 pounds of blister copper. During the month the development work done was extraordinary, aggregating 2400 feet.

The Arizona Commercial Company has installed three Prescott pumps in its Eureka shaft, of 70 0gallons capacity.

At Bisbee 400 tons of ore are being hoisted daily by the new skip system lately installed at the Sacramento shaft of the Copper Queen Company. This is by no means the capacity of the equipment, but is merely designed to try out the machinery. Electric equipment for hauling is being put in on each of the successive levels, and will soon be completed on the main drifts through which the ore will be brought to the Sacramento shafts from the other properties of the company.

In the Lowell mine of the Copper Queen, a magnificent ore body has been explored for over 200 feet, nowhere running less than 10 per cent. copper. It is believed that the ore body on the fourteenth level of the Hoatson mine of the Superior and Pittsburgh Company is a continuation of the Lowell lens of ore.

The output of the Copper Queen and Calumet-Arizona smelters at Douglas for August was practically the same as that known for July.

The Calumet-Arizona Company has begun the construction of a new office building at Warren, below Bisbee, comprising two stories and a basement 90x60 feet in dimensions. The building, which is to be fireproof, has been designed by Hunt & Dieter of Los Angeles.

Large success seems to have attended the flotation of the Savanna Copper Company, a corporation organized by H. B. Hoval and Hoval A. Smith of Bisbee to take over the Copper Gulf and Comanche properties in the Burro Mountains, $2 stock being bid at $3.25.

A 2500-gallon pump is being changed from the 1000-foot station of the bridge shaft to the 1400-foot level of the junction shaft. An additional pump capacity is needed.

The directors of the New England and Clifton Company have recommended the consideration of a concentrator at the Copper Queen mine above Clifton. The company is now shipping ore to the smelters of Clifton.

A gold mill is to be built on the property of the New York-Arizona Company near Clifton.

The Shannon Company at Clifton, with two of its three furnaces running, produced 1,644,000 pounds of copper in August. The Imperial smelter at Silver Bell turned out about 700,000 pounds.

A bond issue of $250,000 at 6 per cent. is to be made by the National Mining Exploration Company, the proceeds to go toward sinking a new shaft on the company's Iron Cap mine at Globe and in the further development of the Fumarole mine, near Safford.

Active development work is to be renewed soon on the famous old Tip Top mine, in the Bradshaw Mountains, below Prescott. This property was an active seller on the San Francisco stock board as far back as 1875.

The property of the Oklahoma and Arizona Mining Company at Mineral Hill, Pinal county, has been attached by a lumber firm for a debt of $348.

The Engineers' lease, the leader in value of shipments at present, is maintaining its record for rich ore and has paid its three owners the sum of $360,000 in dividends in less than three months and has yielded ore of a net value in that period of over $500,000. Adjoining it the Baby Florence is shipping some good ore, while the Florence Jumbo, between the Engineers' and the old Reilly lease, has opened shipping ore and will soon begin sending its product to the samplers. To the north the Florence Wheeler lease, formerly the Florence M. & L., is going after the Reilly shoot at a depth of 500 feet and has exposed some seams of good value. East of this the Florence Consolidated lease is now making shipments from the vein which enters its ground from the Jumbo. To the south and adjoining the Engineers' the Zinn Florence has lately opened a fine body of ore at a little under the 150-foot level. The block farthest north on the Florence claim, adjoining the Combination Fraction and formerly known as the Argersinger lease, has been let to W. B. Stewart and associates and is considered a choice piece of ground.

A FAVORITE MINE.

Combination Fraction remains one of the favorites with the people of Goldfield and is keeping up a fair rate of production. George Wingfield is now president of the company, and although the managers have nothing to say regarding the payment of dividends the greatest confidence is felt in the conduct of the concern by Wingfield and General Manager Tom D. Murphy and the stockholders have no fear but their interests will be protected by these men, who now control the destinies of the property, and that in due course of time any dividends which may be justified will be paid promptly.

The announcement has been received here with universal satisfaction that extensive mining operations are to begin at once on the properties of the Goldfield Merger Mines Company, the consolidation which was formed to take in the St. Ives, Velvet, Gold Horn and Potlatch groups and which owns 136 acres of centrally-located ground, adjoining some of the best portions of the Consolidated, the Kewanas and Atlanta. Among the earliest discoveries in the camp were the finds of rich surface ore on the St. Ives and Velvet and one of the leases, the St. Ives, is now taking out some rich ore from fifty feet depth and has a 500-foot shaft.

The Combined Mining and Leasing Company's lease on the Velvet is sending a crosscut at 350 feet to the junction of the main St. Ives and Velvet leads, and in another month or two it will doubtless enter the list of shippers, as Manager Blanchard has already exposed some fair values in seams which were encountered in sinking the shaft when the Velvet vein was penetrated nearer the surface. This lease covers some of the choicest ground of the Merger company and will give a good account of itself with further development. Thomas G Lockhart of the Florence is a director and heavy owner in the Merger company, which has let a contract for a shaft to be sunk at once to the 500 level and probably to a depth of 1000 feet.

The main shaft is already down over 300 feet on the Gold Horn, having been sunk to that depth by a leaser, and will be enlarged and sent to depth while laterals will be sent out to thoroughly explore the country at intervals of 100 feet and the territory developed in a thoroughly miner-like manner. The company's treasury has been amply supplied with funds for the work in hand and the stock has been listed in Goldfield and San Francisco. Several leasers are already at work and applications for others are under consideration. President John Erikson has arrived from Seattle to supervise the inauguration of the work and great things are predicted for the property.

OTHER GOOD PROPERTIES.

Another of the leading properties in the Goldfield district from which but little has been heard for some time and which is to prosecute work on a large scale is the C.O.D. Consolidated, which embraces the C.O.D., Gold Bar and Victor. The Victor claim was secured from the Consolidated company in exchange for a block of the new company's stock and on the Victor a lease has opened shipping ore. The C.O.D. and Gold Bar, although heretofore separate corporations, were owned principally by the same people, Pittsburgh and New York capitalists, and for some time they have conducted exhaustive experiments with a view to determining the best methods for the treatment of their ores.

The companies, particularly the Gold Bar, have also performed an immense amount of development work and have blocked out a heavy tonnage of good milling ore from several gigantic ledges which traverse the properties, but as depth was attained and further development exposed the ore bodies, the character of the rock was shown to be of a nature which is not amenable to the treatment employed in other parts of the camp for the reason, chiefly, that a high percentage of copper was found in some of the deposits. Further experiments are now being carried on by the company's metallurgists under the direction of Manager Louis K. Koontz and the company will ultimately have its own reduction plant of a capacity sufficient to handle a large tonnage or will arrange with the Goldfield Consolidated company for the treatment of its ores at the big reduction plant now under course of construction on Columbia Mountain.

The Gold Bar, which has over a mile of underground workings in good order, has long been recognized as one of the leading mines of the Goldfield district and has shipped something over $25,000 worth of fairly high-grade ore, which was taken out in the course of development. At the main shaft the immense dump will pan free gold at almost any point, but the owners are wealthy men and have been in no hurry to ship the product until it can be handled in an economical manner. The veins in the Gold Bar differ materially in their mineral content, in some of them the copper values running 5 to 20 per cent., while silver occurs in some of the ore in considerable quantity and at other points the rock carries gold up to $100 per ton. Several leases are working on the C.O.D. with shafts down all the way from 200 to 500 feet. On both the Gold Bar and C.O.D. the company is about to resume extensive development work and the big Gold Bar shaft, which has one of the best hoisting and compressor plants in the district, is to be sunk to great depth and the territory thoroughly explored with a view to making this one of the great mines of Nevada.

NEVADA.

BULLION FROM GOLDFIELD.

REDUCTION PLANT OF FLORENCE NEARLY COMPLETED.

No Change of Ownership Is Contemplated—The Deep Shafts Have Proved Good Producers—Other Mining Properties That Are Favorites With People Who Know.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Sept. 10.—Unless unforeseen obstacles arise to further delay the completion of its reduction plant the Florence Goldfield Company will, within another sixty days, at most, be turning out a big revenue in bullion and the property will be further demonstrated as the peer of any mining territory under one ownership in the country with the possible exception of the Consolidated. Despite the delay incident to the construction of a plant of this size and character, the work has progressed in a satisfactory manner and the best assurance is now given that the mill will be a complete success in treating the ores of the great mine.

In an interview last night Mr. Thomas C. Lockhart, president and general manager of the Florence, gave the representative of The Times a most comprehensive outline of the conditions prevailing throughout the property and of the company's plans for future work. Mr. Lockhart and A. D. Parker of Denver, vice-president of the Colorado Southern Railroad, hold in equal proportions 630,000 shares of the capital stock of the Florence Company, the entire issue of stock being 1,050,000 shares of a capitalization of $1,250,000 and Mr. Lockhart authorized the statement that they have refused an offer of $10 per share for their holdings with absolutely no conditions attached to the deal.

"We have no intention of selling our interests in the mine under any circumstances," said Mr. Lockhart. "The offer of $10 a share remains in force at this time and we can get that price at any time, but we don't want the money and intend to continue to develop the mine and make it the equal of any in the country. As to the reports, emanating principally from San Francisco, to the effect that the mill is not a success and that many changes in its construction had been necessitated, you may say that the machinery now being installed is almost without an exception, identical with that which was decided upon over a year ago when the plans for the plant were drawn, and in all important details the mill machinery and appliances are practically the same as are being installed in the Consolidated Company's big plant.

"There is not the slightest occasion to fear that the mill will not prove a complete success. In starting the mill we had figured, as others were doing, upon shipping our concentrates to Denver or other smelting points, but since a new process has been perfected by means of which concentrates may be treated at a better profit here we have taken this matter into consideration and shall conduct experiments in order to determine upon the most economical course to be pursued, and if it is found advisable to construct an auxiliary plant for the separate treatment of concentrates we shall build such a plant without delay.

NO SPECIAL DIVIDEND.

"There is no probability of our declaring a special dividend for the present. We are now maintaining regular dividend payments on a basis of 28 per cent. and that amount should be sufficient for all purposes. Any excess of profits will simply be added to the company's treasury reserve. We certainly consider the property well worth the valuation of $10 a share, and it will be shown to be worth more than that figure. I should not care to make an estimate of the ore now in sight in the Florence, but am convinced that no appraisements made have exaggerated the amount. The Rogers-Syndicate lease people, upon the expiration of their lease, claimed that they had blocked out $5,000,000 worth of ore and while I am not in a position to deny or confirm this statement the amount of ore already blocked out in the different lease blocks is enormous.

"In drawing leases the Florence Company stipulates, under all circumstances, that the lessees shall remove no ore of value less than $30 per ton, and in the engineers' lease a heavy tonnage is blocked out, in good shape for extraction, which will average better than $35. On the dump at the company shaft we now have between 4000 and 5000 tons of good milling ore and there is a big tonnage already available in the company workings of both milling and high-grade ore, sufficient to keep the mill occupied until the connections are made between the company shaft and the workings of the expired lease. We are enlarging the main shaft to twice its former size, fourteen feet in the clear, and retimbering it throughout after which it will be sunk at once to the level of the deepest lease workings in order that all the ore, from every part of the mine, may be brought by tram to the main shaft and hoisted directly to the ore bins at the mill.

"When the big compressor is started and the machine drills begin cutting out the ore you will be ready to admit that the Florence is going some. We find that some changes will be necessary in our pipe line which carries the water from our springs to the reservoir on the Florence Hill. The pressure is so great that the cedar pipe, which is bound with spiral iron, expands in places and the end of the pipe near town will be replaced with iron pipe where the strain is greatest. This will be completed, however, before the mill starts. Although we know well that certain interests have been diligently endeavoring to bear Florence stock on the markets for a long time past, Mr. Parker and myself have taken no interest in the market phase of Florence and are devoting our energies entirely to the making of a great mine and the ultimate enrichment of the stockholders from the legitimate profits of mining. We have no intention of selling out at any price and shall continue to conduct the property in a businesslike manner and without any reference to stock manipulation or stock values."

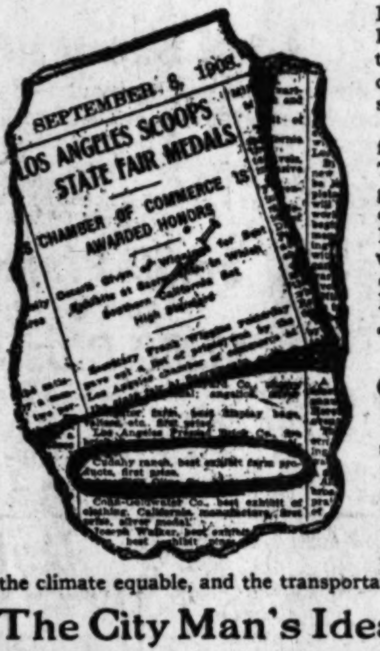
DEPTH OF SHAFTS.

The main company shaft of the Florence was originally sunk to a depth of something over 200 feet by Nixon, Wingfield and Hennessy and this work furnished the present heads of the Consolidated Company with their material profits in the mining industry, over three years ago, the lease yielding a net profit of nearly $600,000. It was the first shaft sunk on Florence ground and was later abandoned under the belief that the ore had pinched out with depth. This was before the finding of the rich shoots of sulphide ore in the district and was followed by the famous strike in the Reilly lease a short distance to the northwest.

The Florence Company first started the Reilly shaft and sent it to a depth of sixty feet, cross-cutting seventy-five feet each way and finding nothing of value. B. J. Reilly and associates secured a lease on the ground and in a short cross-cut, after sinking to 110 feet, exposed the top of a pocket of rich ore in which a winze was sunk to the north and one of the most phenomenally rich deposits of oxodized ore ever known was opened which yielded nearly $1,000,000 in a period of but little more than three months. Other leases were sought on all parts of the company's ground, the earliest, and one which has performed more work than any in that section being the Pollard lease on the Red King claim, south of the Florence Hill and adjoining the Rogers-Syndicate and Little Florence, both of which have produced large fortunes, but thus far the Pollard has been unable to locate shipping ore in commercial quantity, although it is now drifting in a ledge at the 500 level, which Mr. Lockhart and other mining men declare should make into an important ore shoot and comes from the Rogers-Syndicate ground.

Cudahy Ranch

Wins First Prize at the California State Fair for Its Exhibit of Farm Products



SEPTEMBER 8, 1908.

LOS ANGELES SCOOPS STATE FAIR MEDALS

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE IS AWARDED HONORS

Cudahy ranch, best exhibit farm products, first prize.

Buyers of farming and gardening land will be interested in learning that the Cudahy Ranch has won the first prize at the California State Fair at Sacramento for the best exhibit of farm products from any one ranch. This proves conclusively the character of the Cudahy Ranch soil.

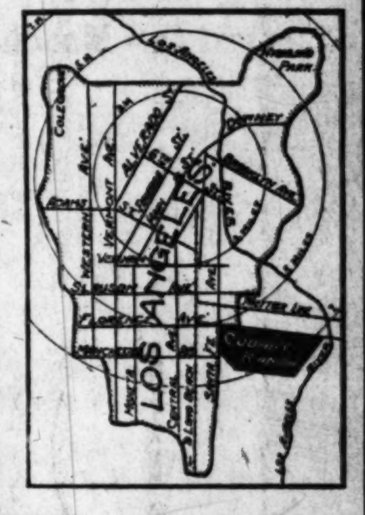
For years the Cudahy Ranch has been producing the finest Cauliflower and Cabbage in the State, and its Corn, Tomatoes, Beets, Onions, and Potatoes are equal to any grown anywhere. Walnuts on the Cudahy Ranch are conceded to be the best, both in size and quality of flavor; its Pears and Peaches are as fine as any grown in the Southwest. This year the Cudahy Ranch will market certain varieties of Apples which will excel in quality any grown in Northern California.

The Right Place for the Truck Gardener and Chicken Rancher

Although nearly $150,000 worth of property has been sold in six months, the very best land in this tract is still unsold—this is my own sincere opinion, backed up by the statements of many who have already purchased. The Truck Gardener, the Chicken Rancher, and the General Farmer will find ideal locations on the Cudahy Ranch—the soil is proven, the water supply abundant and inexpensive, the climate equable, and the transportation facilities to Los Angeles markets excellent.

The City Man's Ideal: "A Home in the Country"

People are reverting to first principles—"Back to the land" seems to be a contagious desire that is spreading over the entire country. It is the only natural way to live, it is the only real life, the only way to realize an ideal home. The Cudahy Ranch offers the city man a country home place that is within twenty minutes' ride of the city. An acre or two will give you room enough to build a house, raise your own vegetables and fruits, keep chickens and maybe a cow—thus bringing to your table milk, cream, butter, cheese and eggs of the finest quality. The Cudahy Ranch is a colony of small country homes, with a complete water system, good roads, and many modern conveniences.



$400 to $500 an Acre with water

Quarter Cash, Balance Long Time

When the Cudahy Ranch was put on the market last spring, it was the best buy in Southern California—it is a better buy than ever today, because of the many improvements which have gradually been put in. Cudahy Ranch acres are offered at from $400 to $500 an acre, quarter cash, balance long time.

The first three months the water system was in operation this cost was 45c per acre per month.

Took the Teacher's Word.

"The population of China," announced the school teacher, impressively, "is so vast that two Chinamen die at every breath we take."

The small boy was an imperialist, and his father had pronounced views on the question of alien immigration, so thah this piece of news impressed him hugely.

Shortly afterward he was observed to be turning purple in the face and puffing like an overburdened steam engine.

"What's the matter? What are you doing?" asked the inadequately-paid instructor of the youth, anxiously:

"Killin' Chinamen," grunted the patriot.—[Sporting Times.

TOPICS OF THE STAGE.

Different peoples, different sections of the same country, even, have differing standards of taste in dramatic matters, different choice in actors and actresses.

The other evening I lounged on a hotel settee with three men—one a Frenchman who is really not a Frenchman, but a citizen of the world; another who is a New Yorker, and the third, a Native Son.

All three have tastes, and the opportunity to exploit them.

The conversation fell upon a certain actress, not a great celebrity, yet assuredly not unknown to some contemporary renown. The westerner was her ardent champion.

"No character," said the Frenchman, dismissing her briefly, yet mentioning as her superior a French actress who will never get into heaven for her beauty.

"Pretty face, though," mused the New Yorker, puffing meditatively at a cigarette. "But then, I don't think much of her figure, and she's a deuced bad dresser."

"But," protested the Californian, "think of her dash and go! Why, she may not be much by your standards, but she's a whole ginger-box anywhere they place her!"

Is there any such thing, after all, as a true criterion of greatness?

Leaders of the regiment of ambitious, energetic and talented young Los Angeles girls who are now storming the bulwarks of professionalism at the stock theaters.

There are possibly a few actors in the world who would be accepted as peers of their profession the earth around—yet one can't name them, just at present.

The public at large accepts fame, or even notoriety, as its guide. The famous actor and the actress who is—well, not exactly famous—come from across the water, gather the shekels in bushels, and the theater-goers speak of them in hushed whispers or excited exclamations.

Yet, take in point the late Sir Henry Irving, who was a man of as much talent and as many peculiarities as the modern English stage has held. Had Sir Henry visited America, and especially New York, incognito—granting, for argument's sake, that he might have preserved that incognito—he might have had great difficulty in getting a hearing at all. Without doubt his worth would have become apparent at length, to a profitable degree, but there would have been many months of purveying to occasional comic reporters and numerous pale, thoughtful, spectacled old ladies of both sexes.

A man who has individuality and originality, or a woman either, is sure to encounter preliminary hostility. A player has to compel recognition, if he has worth. If he perseveres, unswervingly, he is recognized, and recognition is frequently followed by a popularity which becomes fashionable. Richard Mansfield, in his last days of opulence and fame, must have indulged in many sarcastic reflections upon that populace which rushed to see him—just because of his popularity, and his very fashionableness, but which, had he been ever so great but unknown, would have accorded him scant measure of attention until compelled to do so.

The American public is a great worshiper of personality. It loves the man behind the character, the calm and comfortable woman behind the tragedy Queen. And it is to this phase of the drama as it is that American managers cunningly cater. All art would be helpless without a material stay and support. Money—much money—makes the limbs upon the drama advances, money gives genius a tongue, money realizes for the poet dramatist his dreams of place and picture. So this following after personality is not to be frowned down upon, but rather nurtured, and cultivated, and guarded. It is something which is an outgrowth of our times, something which, as it cannot be done away with, should be made to bear permanent and worthy fruit.

In the days of the classic drama, the "palmy" days of the pathetic old actor, men went to see "Hamlet," enacted by So-and-So. Nowadays they go to see So-and-So, in "Hamlet." Yet the play's the thing, and will remain the thing until the reverberating fall of the last curtain. It is merely the actor who has risen into some personal recognition for his talents, and who shall begrudge him? In the olden days interpreters may have had tongues of silver, and the conceptions of inspired beings, yet, whatever their popularity, they lacked much of the stability of genuine art. It is only recently, speaking in comparative terms, that people in general have looked upon an actor as a human being—have universally accorded him the right to live, the right to bulwark a home against old age, the tender inspiration of a family and family life. In a word, it is largely the attitude of the American public in this very matter of personality which has given the actor a firm status as a citizen, a man of useful and honorable calling among other useful and honorable callings—made it possible for a man of energy and intellectual attainments to earn in this profession an amount commensurate to that he might make by employing his talents elsewhere.

All of which is not saying that the actor abroad is downtrodden. Far from it, for in many ways he has an advantage over his American brother.

We still look—speaking in generalization—upon the operatic actor, for instance, as a wonderful freak. He or she is an incarnate voice. It is generally accepted that operatic actors are liable at any moment to wander from the path of morality, and, when one does so—as do occasionally merchants, financiers, gilded youth and even clergymen—the slip is accepted as an anticipated matter.

The greatest part of "I Pagliacci" is its prologue, and the greatest speech of the prologue is Tonio's climatic appeal,

"Is not the actor a man with a heart like you?
'Tis the same broad heaven above us,
The same wide, lonely world before us!"

I think America is destined to raise the actor and the profession of acting to its true place in the exhibit of the world's work, and will maintain them there. I like the American attitude, for it alone bids fair to give the actor his broadest and roundest development in all affairs. And who should be broader and more widely sympathetic than the actor, who, in his time, plays many parts, and must be many men in one man?

The stock stage in Los Angeles, like ancient Gaul when seared by the sword of Caesar, is divided into three parts; but of these the general public knows but two.

It sees the actors—one division—and feels the stiff and ungrateful presence of the super horde—another. Yet between these two is a restless, struggling, fruitful little body who are half amateur and half professional—the actor and the actress not yet, but about-to-be.

There are far more young women in this most interesting division than young men, and it may be asserted with surety that no city in the West has such a large group of really promising talents.

Class and station are alike lost in this struggle for recognition, but if the fortunes behind several young misses with aspirations here were amalgamated, the total would be seven astonishing figures.

Some of these girls, indeed, have far more talent, and show far more in every performance, than many a reasoned and case-hardened actress of numerous engagements.

The Burbank Theater School of Acting, under the direction of Phosa McAllister Duffield, has just opened its third season of work. Past successes point to a very promising new year.

THE LOCAL WEEK.

Channing Pollock's dramatization of Frank Norris's story, "The Pit," will be presented at the Auditorium by Blackwood's company during the coming week. "The Pit" was done here by Wilton Lackaye, but is a new thing in stock. Mr. Stone will have the Lackaye role.

Mr. Stone, as Curtis Jadwin, and Miss Oakley as Laura Dearborn, should have opportunities for fine emotional work, for the play abounds in big scenes.

Ida Lewis, the "grand dame" of the company, who has not yet appeared, will have an important role.

The big scene of the play, representing the wheat pit of the Chicago Board of Trade, will enlist the services of more than 200 auxiliary players, and every effort will be made to make it unwontedly spectacular.

The first scene represents the foyer of the Chicago Auditorium on a grand opera night, and for this Manager Blackwood promises a musical surprise which will not be revealed until the opening performance.

Commencing tomorrow night, the Askin-Singer company will present, as the season's opening attraction at the Mason Operahouse, a comedy with music, entitled "The Time, the Place, and the Girl."

Briefly, the story is that of a pleasant young gambler, bearing the descriptive name of "Happy" Johnny Hicks. He and his pal, Tom Cunningham, son of a rich man, get into trouble through a fight which Cunningham has in a gambling-house, and are forced to flee to a sanitarium in the mountains to escape arrest. Here both meet fate—Hicks in the person of a pretty trained nurse, and Cunningham in the charming daughter of a thrifty farmer. All of these characters, with many others, are quarantined in the county hospital by the health authorities, and the complications are original and extraordinary. The production is staged by Ned Wayburn, which should insure its spice and zest.

At both the Burbank and Belasco theaters productions in preparation have been switched, and Ferenc Molnar's strange and absorbing play, "The Devil," with Messrs. Beasley and Glazier in the title role, will be continued.

The piece at the Belasco will be followed by "Strongheart," introducing the new leading man and woman of the company, A. H. Van Buren and Miss Lovell Taylor.

A spectacular revival of "Mizpah" will be put on at the Burbank, Blanche Hall playing the principal part.

The "Big City" Quartette, consisting of Fred G. Rover, Geoffrey O'Hara, Jack Hamilton and Gus Reed, will head the new bill at the Orpheum.

Charles H. Bradshaw, popular comedian, with a well-selected company, will present "Fix in a Fix."

Le Clair and Sampson, who are playing their first visit here, are English comedy acrobats, and offer "The Bogus Strong Man," declared to be very funny.

Raffin's Simian Performers is an aggregation of educated monkeys.

From last week's bill remain Franklyn Underwood and company, in a new skit; Dolesch and Zillbauer, Viennese street musicians; Bernard and Seeley, rag-time players and singers, and the Tennis trio, in a very dainty juggling act.

The Gayety Company, at the Grand Operahouse, will revive "The Typewriter Girl," for the week beginning today. Miss Marjorie English will appear in the leading role.

Miss May Nannary, a young actress who has played several successful engagements in Los Angeles, comes to the People's this week, where she will present Arthur C. Alston's Southern melodrama, "At the Old Cross-Roads."

Crimmins and Gore, presenting Paul Armstrong's playlet, "A Warm Match," comes to the Los Angeles Theater this week, leading the new bill.

Grant Gardner and Marie Stoddard will contribute an eccentric musical act, three Herbert Brothers are novelty acrobats who promise a number of new feats, Ed. Weluscot billed as a European conjurer, will offer performances after his kind.

Musical burlesque will again head the Unique bill during the coming week. "The Parisian Widow," by Director Fredericks, is the skit. Billy Onslow impersonates the widow, and will sing "Bridget McCue." George Rehn has a topical song, while Maude Beatty, Olga Stech, Millar Bacon and Walter Fredericks are provided with good numbers.

"Too Many Wives," by James P. Lee, is the comedy bill.

"Mr. Planet From Mars," a satirical farce by Matthew Ott, is the play at Fischer's next week. Ben T. Dillon will be the chief figure, with Frank Vack, Nellie Montgomery, Marguerite Favar, Laurel Atkins, Fred Lancaster and other Fischer favorites supporting.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

Few summer travelers spent time so profitably as far as our musical wanderers are concerned as did Archibald Sessions, organist of Christ Church, recently returned from Paris and London.

In Paris Mr. Sessions studied organ again with his old master Guilmant. He brought home a large number of new works for concert use this season and will play with the Symphony Orchestra the "Fantasie Dialogue" of Boellmann, which he studied in Paris with orchestra, under the direction of Rene Doire.

In London Mr. Sessions had the good fortune to be entertained by Bertram Shapleigh, one of the foremost composers now resident there. He studied with him "The Fir Tree and the Brook," which will be presented, about Christmas time, with sixteen solo voices. While in London Mr. Sessions also met Bruce Stearne and Charles Willeby, besides going up to Cambridge for a pleasant reunion with Dr. A. H. Mann, organist of King's College Chapel.

Both in France and England Mr. Sessions had the opportunity of playing and examining some of the most famous organs, notably the St. Sulpice of Paris, where Widor is organist, also the Notre Dame, presided over by Vierne, the Madeleine, La Trinite—where M. Duef has succeeded Guilmant, and—passing to London—the organ of St. Paul's, where Sir George Martin is organist; Westminster Abbey, where Bridge plays, and the Old Crusader's Church, Middle Temple.

He also played on the King's College Chapel organ of Cambridge and the Town Hall organ of Birmingham.

Mr. Sessions was invited by Emil Sjoren to play on the Johanneskircke organ, in Stockholm, but other engagements prevented his making the trip. Another invitation extended, but not accepted, much to the young traveler's regret, was an offer at the National Conservatory of Moscow.

On the homeward trip he played on the largest organs of New York, Cleveland and St. Louis.

His regular series of organ recitals here will begin at Christ Church on Wednesday evening, November 4. His programmes will include many new works.

The choral situation has not cleared, but at least two distinct efforts have made themselves apparent.

Leandro Campanari has secured trustworthy financial backing, and will proceed at once to organize a chorus along practical lines, and hopes as well to do orchestral work.

Bruce Gordon Kingsley is vigorously going after the operatic chorus proposition, and has had correspondence with the Metropolitan Operahouse along these lines.

Mr. Kingsley calls his society the "Philharmonic," and it held its first rehearsal last Friday night, and on the coming Friday evening, in Symphony Hall, Blanchard building, will take up regular work. The choruses from "Faust," "Carmen," "Il Trovatore," and "Tannhouser," will be studied and traditional renderings will be observed. Mr. Kingsley invites "joiners" and proposes to give himself earnestly to the work, with operatic possibilities in the future. His address is No. 1740 Hobart boulevard.

Mr. Campanari wishes a chorus of 100 voices, sixty women and forty men, very carefully selected, and proposes to do work in oratorio, operatic and orchestral fields. Applications may be sent to No. 2227 West Ninth street.

Harley Hamilton, it is said, will take charge of the Treble Clef Club during the coming year.

Charles Farwell Edson will give his first song recital at the Gamut Club on Thursday evening, September 24. His programme will comprise Italian, French and German classics, and a finely-selected group of English and American songs. The entire programme will be given in English.

The Woman's Orchestra, under the direction of Harley Hamilton, will commence rehearsals the first Tuesday in October.

Another addition to the musical societies of the city is the Olympus Club, a male chorus under the direction of LeRoy Jepson. The club will give two concerts this season. Its announced purpose is the study of general choral music.

Moore's band programme at Eastlake today will include Strauss's "Morning Journals" waltz, Macbeth's "Love in Idleness," Suppe's overture, "The Beautiful Galatea," and selections from "Il Trovatore" and "Robert the Devil."

Elizabeth Goodall, leading actress with "The Time, The Place, and the Girl," which will inaugurate the new season at the Mason Operahouse tomorrow night.

DE RESZKE ON AMERICANS.

Great Tenor Tells Charles Henry Meltzer of His Hopes and Plans for American Pupils.

"America unquestionably now produces more singers, and more singers with enduring voices, than any other country in the world. I think their vocal chords have more resisting power than those of Europeans. Possibly your climate has something to do with it."

Thus Jean de Reszke delivered his opinion of the natural vocal material of this country in a recent interview at Deauville, near Trouville, France, with Charles Henry Meltzer, published in the New York American.

"I have high hopes for the future of American singers," continued the illustrious tenor. "Most of my pupils are Americans. I have about eighty in my classes, a majority of them women. Of these eighty a good dozen will shortly make their débuts. All of them are talented. I find that I can accomplish many wonderful things with my American pupils which with others would be impossible.

"Much of my work as a teacher consists in repairing voices which have been injured—voices which have broken down owing to bad methods. In the cases of most Europeans these voices would, I feel sure, be irreparably ruined. But—thanks to their resisting quality—I restore many of these broken-down American voices."

Referring to the style of singing in vogue among the Germans, M. de Reszke remarked:

"The fault of most of them is in their method. They will be emphatic. They will always be noble, or, as they say, ritterlich, when they sing. The right way and the only way to sing is the natural way. One should sing as one speaks—simply, without straining."

He expressed his approval of the cuts Felix Weingartner has made in Wagner's music dramas at the Vienna Court Opera.

"Even Mme. Wagner admits that cuts are necessary, except at Bayreuth, where they are trained and fed in a peculiar way which prepares one to take Wagner whole and to enjoy him. For my part, much as I love the master, I confess it bores me to hear the same narrative repeated and repeated in his music dramas. We have too much Wotan. Too much Brunnhilde. It is right to cut Wagner.

"The future of opera? Sometimes I have thought it possible that declamation, or merely dumb acting, with an eloquent orchestral accompaniment, might be substituted for the existing form of lyric drama. With a little imagination an audience can supply many things more vividly than they can be expressed materially or literally. Think of the 'Damnation of Faust.' Is it not infinitely easier to realize the 'Ride to Hell' with one's own fancy than with stage scenery?"

Then, reverting to the subject uppermost on his mind—his pupils—he said:

"Mr. Higgins has engaged four of them for Covent Garden—Mme. Stevens, Mme. Green, Mme. de Lis and Mme. Edvina, who in society is Mrs. Edwardes. All these are American except Mme. Edvina, who is a Canadian. Lucille Marcel, an American, is to sing next season at La Scala. You will soon hear, too, of another American—Miss Burton.

"Men? Oh, yes. Several have already distinguished themselves in opera. For example, Mr. Hughes, the basso. Mr. Seagle, one of my baritones, will make his mark, and I have another baritone, a young Frenchman, who will maybe astonish you some day as Hamlet and Rigoletto.

"Forty-five of my pupils sang the 'Flower Maiden' music from 'Parsifal' not long ago on the boards of my own little theater. Felix Mottl, the eminent conductor, was present at one of their performances. He was so delighted that he picked up a baton and insisted on conducting. Most of the singers were Americans.

"But my Americans have their faults. And they have deficiencies. None of them has the deep, tragic note, though many are dramatic. They are all intelligent and industrious and quick of perception. They insist on doing their exercises regularly and thoroughly, but they will chatter to me in English, instead of sticking, as they should, to French while they are in France.

"Before I admit pupils to my classes I make them pledge themselves not to appear in public without my consent for three years. That is not too long. Formerly singers used to study for six years.

"Yes, teaching is hard work. Often it wears me out. I begin at 9:30 a.m. and go on until evening. Many of my pupils I teach gratuitously.

"The mothers are trying at times. Before I have had a chance of deciding whether their daughters are contraltos or sopranos—before I have placed their tongues, much less their voices—they want to know how soon they will make their débuts.

"I have to be cruel to many of the girls who come to me. I accept no one who has not talent. To the others I say only this:

"'My dear, get married.'"

Before the Rain.

We knew it would rain, for all the morn
A spirit of slender ropes of mist
Was lowering its golden buckets down
Into the vapory amethyst

Of marshes and swamps and dismal fens—
Scooping the dew that lay in the flowers,
Dipping the jewels out of the sea,
To scatter them over the land in showers.

We knew it would rain, for the poplars showed
The white of their leaves, the amber grain
Shrunk in the wind—and the lightning now
Is tangled in tremulous skeins of rain.

Indian Studies by Mr. Burbank.

Elbridge A. Burbank, the famous portrait painter of the red man, has just been spending three months among the Hopi Indians of Northern Arizona. He returned to Los Angeles only the other day, bringing with him the results of his three months of hard work—fourteen studies in oil, some of them of considerable size.

These pictures are not portraits, as most of his former work has been. They are close and sympathetic studies of Indian life, painted by a master draughtsman who is at the same time a delightful colorist. In absolute fidelity to detail Mr. Burbank ranks with Garard Dow, that consummate master of the infinitely small. Like Dow, Mr. Burbank is not concerned with little things for their own sake. He makes them significant. They keep their place, and always help toward the beauty and completeness of the picture.

Beginning on Wednesday these fourteen studies will be shown at the Kanst gallery, on South Spring street. Collectively, they will give the observer an excellent idea of the life lived today by the Hopi Indians in their pueblos in Arizona and New Mexico—differing very little from the life they lived there a century ago, or even five centuries ago. Which explains, perhaps, why they are a vanishing race.

Mr. Burbank has made for us hundreds upon hundreds of priceless records of our country's Indian tribes. On this last trip his main purpose was to paint the snake dance of the Hopi Indians, which had never been done with absolute fidelity to truth. Too often the men who have essayed this task have been hampered by lack of knowledge, too often they have permitted their own vivid and perfervid imaginations to run away with the facts.

In this work his fine training as a painter, as well as his long-standing friendship for the Indians, stood him in good stead. They were more than willing to pose for him, one at a time, for his proposed picture, and they were eager and anxious to help him in every possible way. They entered completely into the spirit of the thing—and your true Indian is a most finished actor, every muscle of his body, from his forehead to his heels, being under absolute control.

When the picture was nearing completion, ruin was threatened by an old Indian woman, who insisted on sprinkling sacred meal upon it—so like the real thing did it appear to her. It was the Snake Dance to the life, and it is the immemorial custom to fling the sacred meal at those partaking in the dance. Her daughter was one of the maidens who had posed as a carrier of meal in the picture, and she wished to bring luck and blessings upon her. Others wanted to do the same, till the perplexed and flattered painter hardly dared to leave the painting out of his sight.

Mr. Burbank has wisely left out all spectators, which generally throng the pueblo walls, from the picture. He wished it to be a correct representation of the dance itself, with no distracting elements. He wanted every detail of costume and gesture to be faithfully rendered. So it became, as he intended it, a correct ethnological and historical study, a decoration for the walls of a museum. Yet this is not saying that it has not much artistic beauty, and worth as well, for its painter is an artist much more than he is a collector of facts.

Two other large pictures will be shown in this exhibition, perhaps the best work Mr. Burbank has yet done. Both are studies of Indians squatted in a circle and absorbed in a game of gambling. One is a firelight effect, suggesting Rembrandt in its lighting, Rubens in its splendid vividness of color. The other shows us a group gathered in the white, direct light of a hogan or Hopi mud-plastered dwelling. I will speak further of these strong pictures, and some others, in next week's Art and Artists.

At the Kanst Gallery.

Beginning next Wednesday and continuing for two weeks, Emile Adet, a landscape painter from San José, will show about twelve pictures at the Kanst gallery, in the room adjoining that in which Mr. Burbank's Indian pictures will be shown.

A number of Mr. Adet's canvases are studies of the Yosemite. Others are pictures painted in the vicinity of Los Angeles.

The Whistler House.

The house at Lowell, Mass., in which James McNeill Whistler was born has recently been acquired by the Lowell Art Association, whose purpose is to make the house an art center and a memorial worthy of the distinguished artist. The house is to be used as the home of the association, where meetings and exhibitions may be held, lectures and nstruction given, and arts and crafts encouraged.

Ten thousand dollars is still needed to make the plans complete. Contributions and communications relative to the memorial may be sent to the president of the association, Joseph A. Nesmith, No. 229 Andover street, Lowell, Mass., or other officers.

International Studio.

The International Studio for September has several notable features. Among these are: "Modern Miniature Painting," by A. Lys Baldry, with a number of exquisite illustrations from miniatures that are a triumph of color printing. Two American artists are represented, Martha S. Baker and Laura C. Hills. Another richly illustrated article is that which treats of the decorations of Edwin Howland Blashfield, by Homer Saint-Gaudens.

Other timely articles are: "Architectural Gardening;" "Hungarian Art at the Earl's Court Exhibition;" "The Munich Exhibition, 1908;" "Enamels and Pottery at the Paris Salon;" "The Hessian National Exhibition at Darmstadt;" "The Modern Use of the Architecture of the Classic Revival," etc.

New Fall Suits for Misses & Women

Exclusive "Picadilly" Models

OUR FALL style exhibit of Misses' and Women's Wear is now ready. Unquestionably it is an assembling of the smartest garments ever shown hereabouts.

While the season's prevailing fashions are embodied in every garment, our selections have a certain exclusive smartness—the "something different"—which will appeal to women who appreciate genuine individuality in dress.

This is characteristic of the "Piccadilly" models — individuality and charm. Excellence in workmanship, novelty in fabric and coloring are other points which differentiate "Piccadilly" Suits from ordinary ready-to-wear.

Our range of sizes is wider this season than formerly. We can fit Misses and Women up to size forty inches bust measure. You are invited to visit our Women's Section. Take elevator to second floor.

Man-Tailored Suits $20 to $40. Our Mail Order Service makes buying from a distance both easy and practical.

MESSAGE No. 1. "CAUSE AND EFFECT"

"BACK-RESTING" FOR MEDIUM AND SLENDER FIGURES

Nemo

"SELF-REDUCING" FOR EVERY TYPE OF STOUT WOMEN

The NEMO CORSET is the Only Corset That is More Than a Corset

Every Nemo Corset does something for you that no other corset can do.

Every Nemo is hygienically perfect—brings improved health, absolute comfort and up-to-date style.

There is no substitute for the Nemo. Imitations only prove that it is impossible to produce Nemo effects in other makes without infringing Nemo patents.

For every Nemo effect there is an exclusive Nemo cause. For example:

CAUSE No. 1—Nemo Self-Reducing Straps, firmly affixed to hooks on front steels. EFFECT—positive reduction of abdomen, permanent lines of grace.

CAUSE No. 2—Nemo Relief Straps, perfectly support the abdomen. EFFECT—a delightful sense of ease and comfort.

CAUSE No. 3—Nemo Double Garters, acting on Self-Reducing Straps. EFFECT—flesh cannot bulge out below the corset.

CAUSE No. 4—Nemo Flatning-Back, ingeniously designed on hygienic principles. EFFECT—utmost slenderness for every figure; perfect comfort whether standing or seated.

CAUSE No. 5—Nemo Back-Resting Straps (in Model 351 only.) EFFECT—"It rests your back;" backache vanishes; steels cannot turn; the slender "new figure."

No other corset has any of these invaluable features nor even a good imitation of them.

No. 351 $4.00

No. 318 $3.50

There's a HYGIENIC NEMO for Every Figure

The world-wide success of the famous Nemo "Self-Reducing" Corset, for stout women, is being duplicated by the new and wonderful "Back-Resting" Corset, for women of slender and medium build. Every figure can be now fitted in a Nemo. Every woman who wears a Nemo will secure health, comfort and style. Be sure to see the newest Fall models in these two leading Nemo Corset Specialties:

NEMO BACK-RESTING CORSET "IT RESTS YOUR BACK" No. 351. A beautiful model, for slender and medium figures. Long, sloping, clinging back, flat hip effect. The back steels cannot turn and dig into your flesh. In sizes 18 to 36 . . . . $4.00

NEMO SELF-REDUCING CORSET "MAKE STOUT WOMEN SLENDER" The only corset ever made that positively reduces the abdomen with increased comfort and absolute hygienic safety. The new Flatning-Back models reduce both abdomen and hips, and make Princesse effects possible to stout figures:

Model No. 312, for tall stout women; No. 320, same model, with Flatning-Back
Model No. 314, for short stout women; No. 318, same model, with Flatning-Back } $3.50

No. 516, mercerized brocade; tall stout; No. 518, same material; short stout
No. 517, French coutil; tall, Flatning-Back; No. 515, French coutil, bust supporters } $5.00

No. 1000—of finest imported French coutil, new triple reducing straps over hip—$10.00

THE INSURANCE WORLD.

Three or four members of Lloyds are reported financially embarassed, but it is announced that this will have no effect upon any of the insurance carried. There are in all eighteen underwriting members in the same syndicate, and the balance of the members will take care of the policies underwritten. At the present time there are 708 underwriting members of Lloyds, and the security provided by them and held by the committee of Lloyds amounts, for marine risks, to close upon £4,000,000, while the additional security provided for fire and other non-marine risks amounts to over £2,000,000. This of course does not take into account the private means of members, which probably amount to considerably more than the security provided.

Insurance Commissioner Hardison of Massachusetts in his annual report calls attention to the general soundness of the insurance situation. The agitation in the life insurance companies that resulted from the New York investigations, followed by the San Francisco fire, shook out the weak companies, and the triumph of all classes of insurance companies over these adverse circumstances, he says, is worthy of note, as it bears testimony that the great insurance interests upon which we have to place so much dependence in all business relations involving the various contingencies of loss, and so much reliance in affording protection to our families, are resting on firm foundations.

F. W. Fitzpatrick, consulting architect of the International Society of Building Commissioners, says the fire loss in the United States every year is $100,000,000 greater than the amount spent in new construction. In the estimate is included the money paid annually for insurance and the cost of fighting fire.

Consul-General John P. Bray of Melbourne reports that the government of the Australian State of Victoria is about to undertake the experiment of state insurance in connection with the houses of settlers, which the government has erected on a scheme by which repayments by the occupants are extended over long periods.

It is estimated that the settlers will have to pay to the government for the state insurance of the houses what is equal to an annual premium of not much more than one-fourth of 1 per cent. upon the value of the property, whereas if companies did the insuring the men would—according to departmental estimates—have to pay at the rate of between ½ and 1 per cent.

The St. Louis Association of Fire Insurance Agents is to make a move against "side line" insurance agents, and if necessary drop them from the association. Under the rules a sideliner is an agent who writes policies, but is not "engaged chiefly in the business of insurance." Real estate brokers are said to be the most numerous offenders against the rule. A lot of them have sub-agencies to handle insurance for their real estate clients. Some of the sideliners are butchers or barbers, and sometimes a bartender takes a whack at the business. He has no office expenses to pay and whatever commissions he gets is clear profit. For this reason, perhaps, he is prone to cut rates the big agents say, and cause demoralization.

A Logical School Boy.

It was afternoon, and thus spoke the teacher of the village school:

"Now, boys, the word 'stan' at the end of a word means 'place of.' Thus we have Afghanistan, the place of the Afghans; also Hindustan, the place of the Hindus. Now, can anyone give me another instance?"

"Yes, sir," said the smallest boy, proudly, "I can—umbrella-stan', the place for umbrellas."—[Newsbook.

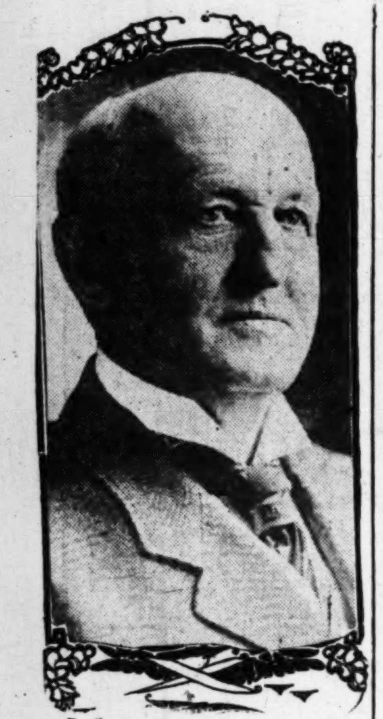
Charles Henry Treat, Guardian of Uncle Sam's Millions, Defends Our Currency System.

BY JAMES B. MORROW.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—The tongue of Capt. Henry Treat was pointed and barked like a fishhook. Men in Maine who know say that his wit and scorn were as ready, promiscuous, and savage as Thomas B. Reed's. He was a tall, heavy, and austere man and had fierce eyes and a black beard.

The treasurer of the United States, Charles Henry Treat, is Capt. Treat's son. The captain's title was nautical and had nothing to do with the militia. He and his brothers owned twenty-eight ships, in which they carried goods to the South, and in which they brought back salt from Turk Island and sugar from Cuba. The brothers Treat were engaged in that business for thirty years and amassed great fortunes.



U. S. Treasurer C. H. Treat.

The first American Treat, an English immigrant, was the royal deputy governor and governor of the colony of Connecticut for a generation. He is said to have had a hand in the legendary hiding of the charter in the famous oak tree at Hartford. After Robert, however, the Treats, as a family, were merchants.

Old Henry despised lawyers. All the professions, in his view, were parasitic and effeminate. He bought Charles Henry, now the treasurer, a yacht when he was 12 years old, that he might learn the alphabet of the ocean. The boy had begun to read the Bible at the age of 4. He liked books, and otherwise was developing traits which were reprehensibly uncommercial. The yacht, therefore, was also an antidote.

"After my return from the academy at Bucksport, Me.," Charles Henry Treat said during my interview with him, "I reminded my father that he had agreed to let me have my time when I reached the age of 18. 'And now,' I said, 'I want it.'

"'What for?' he asked, looking at me suspiciously, with his auger-like eyes.

"'I am going to Dartmouth College,' I replied.

"'But that'll take money,' he answered.

"'Yes,' I said, 'and I'll get it. I have never asked you for a dollar in my life.'

ALWAYS PAID HIS FATHER BACK

"And I told him the truth," Charles Henry Treat said to me. "He began to give me money when I was 8 years old and take my promissory notes. I would bargain and speculate and pay him back. I have my account book yet. Wood for the family was my leading specialty. I would contract to saw and split it at a certain price. Then I'd hire boys to do the work. Sometimes I'd have a party. Father observed more than once that the only persons who could keep their money were those who had been taught to make it.

"Matters drifted for several weeks. 'Your mother says you are getting ready to go away,' father remarked one day. She was only my stepmother, but she sympathized with me. I replied that I should leave by the end of the week.

"'Who,' he inquired, 'is to finance your expedition?' He wanted to be sarcastic

"'Friends of yours,' I answered, 'will take my personal note for all the money I need. There are men in this town,' and I gesticulated and tried to look important, 'who are interested in Henry Treat's own flesh and blood.'

"Father winced—I meant that he should—and I saw him wink his awful eyes. But he wasn't the man to relent and surrender. He was iron all the way through, and the wrought article at that.

"Well, I matriculated at Dartmouth with scarcely a cent. I had thought I might want to teach school. Got a book on pedagogy and absorbed it. Applied and got a school some fifty miles from the college. The trustees had heard me make a speech on Stephen A. Douglas and declined to examine me. Declared I knew more than they did. I didn't contradict them very violently. Thought perhaps, they might be right. Besides, I was to receive $50 a month.

"Had my own ideas about teaching. First I'd make study interesting and then practical. Arranged for considerable singing. That pleased both sexes. Taught the girls how to write letters. Got them to put down little incidents coming within their own experiences as an exercise in composition. Taught the boys to figure interest, draw promissory notes, and all about commercial paper. Sent them out of doors to measure cord wood and ice. The trustees raised my pay to $60 a month. I taught three years, and kept along with my classes at college. Also wrote to my father every week. Affectionate letters, you understand, filial and all that, but properly independent, because I had received nothing from home but the encouragement of my stepmother.

"Father spent eight months in the year at Cardenas, his principal office, buying sugar. Just before I became a senior at college he wrote me a beautiful letter. Said he was about to return to Cuba. Wanted me to quit teaching and live like other boys. Sent me an unlimited order on his bankers. 'Wear as good clothes,' he wrote, 'as any one else. Spend as much money as you desire. I know you will not be foolish or bring the name of Treat into disrepute.' Grand old man. Looked like Daniel Webster, only he had whiskers. Would have made a tremendous lawyer.

"After I was graduated, I went home with my books—$800 worth in solid bindings. 'Where did you get them?' father asked.

"'Bought them,' I answered, 'with your money. You told me to live as well as other boys whose fathers are rich. I have lived better, and at no greater cost. Those books represent the wine I did not drink, the cards I did not play, and the miscellaneous vices in which I did not indulge myself. Furthermore,' I said, trying to be jocular, 'I have charged you nothing for cartage, insurance, or commission.'

"Pleased hardly describes it. Father was actually delighted. Said I should go to Cardenas at once, and thereafter buy all the sugar. 'No,' I told him, 'I am to be a lawyer.' He stormed and sneered at the legal profession, and then he pleaded, declaring I would die in an attic. Finally, stern man that he was, he really wept. Well, I abandoned the law and changed the scheme of my life. It was a struggle, a hard battle with myself, but after I made up my mind I never looked back. Continued revolutions in Cuba, however, made our business unprofitable, and so we sold our ships and ceased to be Cuban, West Indian, and South American merchants."

It is no compliment to say that Charles Henry Treat, physically, resembles Chauncey M. Depew to a degree. But his nose is less like a hook and his face, as well as his manner, is more natural, kindly, and animated. No doubt he could have been a brilliant advocate before a jury, a popular preacher, or an eminent comedian. Bodily and intellectually he is nervous, decisive, and swift. He can take the snarled facts of a confused situation into his mind and arrange them into a brisk, orderly, and interesting narrative.

THE PANIC DID NOT DECEIVE MR. TREAT.

While other men are running in circles, helpless through excitement, unthinking and useless, he goes straight ahead in serenity and common sense to a reasonable conclusion. The panic of last October did not deceive him for a minute. There was plenty of money in the country, more than ever before—but the bankers had it.

Emotional financiers, in Congress and elsewhere, asserting that something was wrong, which was obvious, attributed it to the currency system, which was foolish, as Charles Henry Treat argued without success.

So I went to him for other matters than his unique personal history. He talked rapidly, bluntly, and always pleasantly. Practically, he is the custodian of $1,021,000,000 of government gold. He told me that the government and the people between them have $1,600,000,000 of gold, which is the largest accumulation of that metal in the history of mankind. Mr. Treat is also the custodian of 487,640,000 silver dollars, against which paper certificates have been issued and put into circulation. The government's stock of coined silver dollars would fill 478 railroad freight cars, loading thirty tons on each car.

"Does all the money received and spent by the government," I asked Mr. Treat, "pass through your office?"

"Yes," he replied. "The aggregate business of our office will reach $2,000,000,000 a year, and includes the receipts of public funds, the expenditures for the army, navy and civil establishment, the redemption of currency, and loans to national banks."

"What is a subtreasury?" I asked.

"It is a branch of the main Treasury in Washington and a depository for public funds. There are subtreasuries in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, New Orleans and San Francisco. Some of our public men have thought them to be unnecessary. As a matter of fact, they are one of the best safeguards we have against financial disasters. In 1904, for instance, there was a local panic in St. Louis. Depositors were drawing their money from certain banks. In the midst of the uproar, when things looked mighty dangerous, George W. Perkins of J. P. Morgan & Co. called James Stillman, president of the National City Bank, in New York, to the telephone.

"'We must do something for St. Louis at once,' Perkins said.

"In a little while $3,000,000 in currency was taken to the government subtreasury in Wall street. The assistant treasurer, Hamilton Fish, telegraphed to the assistant treasurer in St. Louis that the money had been deposited and the names of the banks for which it was intended. The banks got the money at once, mostly in gold, from the subtreasury in St. Louis, and piled it on their counters. There it could be seen by their customers. Persons who had been clamoring for their deposits became rational at once. The panic was over. Hereafter," Mr. Treat went on to say, "when you read in the newspapers that funds have been placed in the subtreasury of New York, or Boston, or Philadelphia, or Cincinnati, or St. Louis for certain banks elsewhere you will understand how it was done."

"What," I inquired, "is the Aldrich-Vreeland law recently enacted by Congress?"

"It is an emergency measure, and will be inoperative at the end of six years. In the future when there is need of more currency in the country officers of national banks may pledge such bonds and stocks as they own with the Secretary of the Treasury, and obtain new money for circulation. Or, the officers of ten national banks may come to Washington, and, organizing an association, thus making each bank responsible for all the others, get a supply of additional currency by depositing bonds, stocks, or commercial paper. If, for example, a certain bank has the promissory notes of business men, firms, or corporations, and wants currency issued against that sort of security, it must bring nine other banks into the transaction as guarantors, separately and collectively."

"What is being done under the law to meet a crisis if one should occur?"

"The amount of emergency currency is limited to $500,000,000. We have already printed $200,000,000, and stored it in our vaults. The balance will be printed at the rate of $18,000,000 a week."

"What country has an ideal currency system?"

"No country in the world thinks its system to be perfect," Mr. Treat replied. "Our own scheme is far from being ideal. However, it is the best so far devised by man for the peculiar needs and conditions of the American people. It has been successfully operative during forty-two years of tremendous and record-breaking material development, and has been sufficient for the largest separate business transactions in all history. Yet, whenever there is trouble we attribute it to our currency. We blamed our money, its inflexibility and scarcity, for the panic of last October. We blame everything to the system, including bad weather, lean crops, and stupid management.

"It is clearly understood now that the financial crisis of 1907 was brought on by the bankers themselves, who were afraid of one another. There was plenty of currency, but they kept it under lock and key. Furthermore, during October and November $89,000,000 of new notes were issued and added to the volume of money already in circulation. But the hysterical demand for more continued.

"The Comptroller of the Currency, to get at the facts, called for a statement. It was shown under the call that the national banks on the last day of the year 1907 had a larger amount of currency on hand than at any time since the foundation of the government. Meanwhile, the people had been far more courageous and sensible than the bankers. If the largest crop of wheat the country ever produced should be bought, ground into flour, baked into bread, and then practically denied the public by its frightened owners, I don't suppose any one would be foolish enough to say that our farms had become sterile, and that our farmers, through indolence or ignorance, had worked up a famine.

"After the panic there was a flood of suggestions. Some persons said that national banks ought to be made safer—that depositors, in short, should be guaranteed against the loss of their money. Very well. But trust companies and savings banks are organized under the laws of the States, and, of course, are outside the laws of Congress. Workingmen, school teachers, widows, and clerks ordinarily deposit their savings and their funds in State banks. If they want to be guaranteed, therefore, they must appeal to their own legislatures. The jurisdiction of Congress stops at national banks.

SHOULD NOT GUARANTEE.

"Now, who are the depositors of national banks? Business men and corporations almost exclusively. Here and there a national bank pays interest on time deposits. Generally, however, the business of a national bank is wholly commercial. A merchant borrows $10,000 of his bank, and has the money transferred to his credit, that he may check against it to pay debts that he owes to various persons. Should he be guaranteed against the loss of his deposit, which is technical rather than actual?

"Moreover, what is a deposit on which a bank pays interest? Nothing less than an actual investment. A man puts $1000 in a bank, instead of buying a house, a bond, or the shares of some corporation. He hires his money out to the bankers. That's plain, isn't it? Why guarantee him in such a transaction, and withdraw the guarantee when he purchases land or a stock of merchandise? If the government is to insure great manufacturing corporations against loss through deposits made in national banks, and if States are to insure individuals against loss through deposits made in savings banks and trust companies, why shouldn't the farmer be guaranteed in his field of corn or wheat, the merchant in his stock of goods, the drayman in his horse and wagon, and the landlord in his lodgers and boarders? Why create a special class of guarantees, of persons holding free insurance policies against the loss of their personal investments? It should be remembered in this connection that throughout the forty-two years of our present banking system the loss to depositors of national banks has not exceeded 1-26 of 1 per cent. per annum."

"Are not large sums of money?" I asked Mr. Treat, "frequently sent to New York from other cities and loaned to speculators for operations in Wall street to the inconvenience and injury of manufacturers and merchants who need the money for pay rolls, the purchase of new goods, and [illegible] of their business?"

Etiquette in Epigram.

DON'TS FOR BACHELORS AND OLD MAIDS. By Minna Thomas Antrim. Henry Altemus Company, Philadelphia. (Price 50 cents.)

Social solecisms corrected by sugar-coated advice is the method of Mrs. Antrim. Her little book is a partial manual of good manners and collection of smart sayings rolled into one. For instance, she says "It is in bad taste to 'call up' a man at his club. Men hate it, and good club servants are strangely uncommunicative." Mrs. Antrim does not say what to do when the poor man has no other home, however. Or again "It is not imperative to lie to a suspicious woman—always. The man who confesses to a few misdemeanors rarely loses the girl."

The sharp pen is not always in evidence—common-sense and some humor enliven Mrs. Antrim's attempts to clear up the little difficulties of social life.

Homely Verse.

JERSEY JINGLES. By Leonard H. Robbins. Publisher not named. (Price $1.)

"Just newspaper verse" is the way some people refer to the homely poems of everyday life which some man writes in the dust and noise of a busy office—but writes out of his heart just as much in the air laden with stale tobacco smoke and burdened with the staccato rattle of typewriter keys, as does the poet of imagination, who wanders on the hillside under the blue sky. But look through the scrap-books where old favorites are pasted, and the yellowing newspaper clippings will outnumber everything else.

The bits of verse here collected were written for the Newark Evening News, as part of a daily column. They are of the daily life, with no pretensions of literary polish. But they have the feeling which polish cannot supplant—for an example, there is nothing better than "When Dad Was Fired." The book is attractively printed and bound.

Aphorisms by the Hundred.

TRUTH. By John A. Joyce. Regan Printing and Publishing House, Chicago. (Price, $1.)

Starting with the simplest form of aphorism, which follows the formula "x is y," and progressing through one, two and three-line sayings which the author himself catalogues as "original proverbs, axioms, epigrams, aphorisms, religious, political and financial cuts, and lofty and eloquent paragraphs"—progressing through these to the final dignity of four-line remarks on every topic under the sun, Mr. Joyce has produced a book of nearly two hundred pages. A simple arithmetical calculation will show that there are 2730 of these "original proverbs, axioms," etc.

A slight acquaintance with Christy's work on proverbs will disprove the idea that all these 2730 are original, but Mr. Joyce has certainly been an observer of life in various phases and has set down the thoughts of a long experience.

NEWS AND NOTES OF FORTHCOMING BOOKS.

Another new book of rhymes and quaint pictures for the little folk will be Carolyn Wells's and Harrison Cady's "The Happychaps," funny fellows with as many madcap pranks as their Brownie cousins.

The children are soon to have a treat in the published translation of a half fairy tale by Paul de Musset, entitled "Mr. Wind and Madam Rain." The Harpers are bringing out the book in early September.

Moffatt, Yard & Co. announce the approaching publication of a book by Sir Oliver Lodge, which many will consider his greatest work. It is called "Science and Immortality," a very modern title for a book which sums up in a very modern way the status of science, faith and theology in their bearings, separately and collectively, upon religion and immortality.

There is to be a new "Queen Silverbell" fairy story by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, gay with colored pictures, in plenty of time for the Christmas stockings. It is the story of the dear little daughter of an English vicarage, and of the "Primrose World;" and Queen Silverbell, of course, puts her finger deep into the pie.

Dr. W. A. Newman Dorland has rewritten and added to his essay on "The Age of Mental Virility," which appeared in The Century, and the book will be published in the autumn. It is, of course, largely a reply to the famous remark of Dr. Osler as to the uselessness of men after 40. The book will have tables in which will be found the age and working years of most of the great thinkers and workers of the world.

Palmer Cox's Brownie books keep on selling and selling and selling, and now there is to be a new one—the first Brownie book to be printed in colors—"Brownie Clown of Brownietown," ninety-six pages of pictures and verse. Palmer Cox's home is at "Brownie Castle," Granby, Canada, near where he was born; but winters he lives and works at East Quogue, L. I., where he finds the winter sea inspiring and delightful.

G. W. Dillingham Company announces for immediate publication "The Devil," by Ferenc Molnar; "Strongheart," by Frederick R. Burton; "The Flame Dancer," by Frances Aymar Mathews; "The Wolf," by Eugene Walter; "The Girl Question," by John W. Harding; "The Four Flusher," by John Edward Hazzard, and in preparation a new novel by Arthur Hornblow.

Next week the Macmillan Company is to publish "Wroth," by Agnes and Egerton Castle, the first novel from these authors since "If Youth but Knew," nearly three years ago. "Wroth" is described as a story of the early part of the century, with the interest centered in the character of the hero—a wild, reckless fellow who is known as "Mad Wroth."

"The United States as a World-Power," by Prof. A. C. Coolidge of Harvard, is to appear next week. This is the outcome of the notable series of lectures which Prof. Coolidge delivered some months ago at the Sorbonne in Paris. Arrangements have been made for its simultaneous publication in America, England and (in translation) Germany and France.

One of the first of the fall novels to appear is "Cousin Cinderella," by Mrs. Everard Cotes, who is better known perhaps as Sara Jeannette Duncan. Mrs. Cotes's new book recalls that very witty story, "An American Girl in London." Again she has taken as her principal character a native of this continent who finds herself on English soil. This time, however, it is a Canadian girl whose experiences are chronicled, and not a citizen of the States.

Robert Hichens's forthcoming novel, announced by the Harpers for publication in September, is to be entitled "A Spirit in Prison." Neither one of Mr. Hichens's chosen settings will be repeated in the new novel—neither the gleaming desert made familiar by "The Garden of Allah" and "Barbary Sheep," nor the glowing Sicily of "The Call of the Blood." The present scene is a high little island on a rock near Naples, washed by the blue and silver waters of the bay.

PEOPLE AND THINGS OF LITERARY NOTE.

For the third consecutive month—that is, ever since the date of publication—"Mr. Crewe's Career" is recorded as the best selling book in America.

"The Living Age" for September 5 draws upon a new source, The Hindustan Review, for an article on the "Unrest in India." Written by a clergyman at Jubbulpore, it presents a more than ordinarily intimate view of the subject. Its point of view is indicated by the subtitle "The Adolescence of an Empire."

"Religion and Medicine" has started in England with much the same rush as it displayed in America. Kegan Paul, French, Trubner & Company, the British Publishers, announce a second edition already. The English edition carries a preface by Canon Pennefather, vicar of Kensington.

"The Barrier" and "Mr. Crewe's Career," have reversed places in the list of popular library books of the week in New York, "The Barrier" coming again to the top. Among plays in demand Charles Rann Kennedy's "The Servant in the House" still leads all others, the plays of Bernard Shaw being second.

Mr. Swinburne presents an uncommon literary figure when at seventy-two he is about to publish his most important work in prose. "The Age of Shakespeare," will come with fitting dignity and grace from a mind which for so many years has been the storehouse of those rich impressions which grow sharp or mellow under a ripening judgment. Mr. Swinburne is a hale old man, whose lively walks of three miles every morning to the edge of Thimbledon Common reveal his erect carriage and springy step to the passing crowd.

By one of those strange coincidences which sometimes occur in the publishing business "The Call of the City" was the title selected by two authors for two forthcoming books. One book had already been printed and the other was on the press before the duplication was discovered. Dr. Burrell of the Marble Collegiate Church, New York, one of the authors, has accordingly changed the title of his book to "The Lure of the City."

Joseph Conrad is a novelist for whom the subject of anarchy holds a peculiar fascination, to which those who read the "Secret Age" will bear witness. Now Mr. Conrad, having recently written two short stories, each with anarchy for a theme, includes in one of them a paragraph that might be a naive confession of the brooding delight he takes in this type of mind. "But, indeed," says the author, speaking through his man, "I don't understand anarchists. Does a man of that—of that—persuasion still remain an anarchist when alone, quite alone, and going to bed, for instance? Does he lay his head on the pillow, pull his bed clothes over him, and go to sleep with the necessity of the chambardemen général, as the French slang has it, of the general blowup always present to his mind? And if so, how can he?"

Ella W. Peattie, the writer of short stories, in reviewing a new Irish-American novel, "The Land of the Living," makes a pertinent point in regard to the different setting of the English and the American novel—namely, that the American writer seeking a background for a story must make his selection from many sectional groups, all "Americans," whereas the French or the English writer has merely to mention Paris or London, state the season of the year, suggest a class of society, and all the world knows what to expect. Without question, says the reviewer, the reason the English have so little enthusiasm for American novels is because they do not know what to expect. Rather curiously, Mrs. Peattie makes the Irish-American setting the exception, maintaining that all the world is familiar with this type of American.

Enough of Helen Keller's "The World I Live In" has appeared serially to make it certain that the book will take rank as one of the most remarkable of the century, a unique and rarely valuable autobiographical record and a piece of literature. The happily chosen chapter headings include "The Seeing Hand," "The Hand of the Race," "The Power of Touch," "Smell the Fallen Angel," "Imagination and the Senses," "Inward Visions," "Analogies in Sense Perception," "Before the Spiritual Awakening," "The Larger Sanctions," "Dreams," etc., etc. Miss Keller is giving all her time to writing and study now, living at Wrentham, Mass., with her teacher and faithful friend, Mrs. John Macy.

BITS OF VERSE.

Lulla.

The sunbeams are kissing each other good night;
Hush thee, my little one, hush.
The flowers are closing their peepers up tight;
Hush thee, my little one, hush.
Now draw close the shutters across thy blue eyes;
The loved Queen of Nodland awaits
her sweet prize,
And fairies stand ready to carry thee o'er
The meadows that stretch to the far, silent shore.
Hush thee, my little one, hush.

The golden head nestles on mother's warm breast;
Baby is almost asleep.
A wee little bird flutters home to its nest;
Baby is almost asleep.
How gently, how fast, fall the deep twilight shades
O'er sea and o'er land, o'er hills and o'er glades!
How softly the moon sheds its silvery beams
On Slumberland's walls and its cities of dreams!
Baby is fast, fast asleep.
—[Amy Churchill, in Lippincott's.

You.

My heart is full of song, my lips are scant of speech,
It is you, you, you, it is us, each to each!
It is happy winds of dawn that blow
the world awake,
It is sunlight, leaping sunlight on the ripple-crested lake!
Oh, the wave of love in me that sweeps me when I think!
Oh, the founts of memory where my glad spirits drink!
Night and star and ripened corn, harvest-burdened hill,
And the woods at twilight when the earth is still!
Oh, loveliness of years that floods my mind anew,
And back of all and in all just you,
you, you!
—[Metropolitan Magazine.

Tangled Threads.

One day wearied with my weaving,
heeding not if 'twere ill done,
Watched I other weavers working—saw their threads break one by one;
Knot and snarl, and tear and tangle—not one perfect fabric there—
And few did seem to know it, and none did seem to care.
And I sought perfection, purely,
thought not on the brittle thread;
And for flaws I idly sorrowed, till a voice within me said:
"Would it help their faulty weaving
if you grieved out all your years?
God sees it. Think ye His eyes, too, are dimmed with futile tears?
It is smoothing out the snarls that helps, not weeping over wrong.
So take from out Love's workbox now a skein of joy-thread strong;
And the ragged, raw, rough places you have wept for all this while You shall overcast with beauty and embroider with a smile.
Then return to your own shuttle, from these threads weave new brocade—
Threads of Joy that will not tangle, threads of Love that will not fade—
And with this fairer fabric and more perfected designs,
No weariness, fault-finding, nor tears will then be thine."
—[Lannie Haynes Martin, in the Nautilus.

Mr. Parrish's First Sea Story
THE LAST VOYAGE OF THE DONNA ISABEL

We believe that this is the best story they have yet brought out by Randall Parrish. It is no exaggeration to say that it is worthy of a place on the same shelf with the sea romances of Clark Russell and Stevenson—so absorbing is the plot and so vivd are the pictures of wild adventure on Antarctic seas.

The story concerns the search for a lost Spanish galleon which the hero believes to have been buried in the ice for over a century. There is plenty of mystery and excitement, and Mr. Parrish can be depended upon for a delightful love story.

NEW WASHINGTON LEADER.

DAUGHTER OF FAMED FIGHTER.

And Wife of Our Fighting Secretary of War.

Typical Southern Woman Is Mrs. Luke Wright.

Has Great Store of Wide Social Experience.

BY MARGARET B. DOWNING.
[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—The cabinet circle of hostesses has received a decided acquisition in the addition of Mrs. Luke Edward Wright, wife of Secretary Taft's successor in the War Department. Mrs. Wright has taken only a fleeting glance of her future scene of labors, but she has expressed herself delighted with the perspective. She spent a few days at the capital about the middle of August, en route to Jonathan Farm, in Westchester county, New York, where her eldest daughter, Mrs. John H. Watkins, has a fine estate. "I am fond of my kind," she said in talking over the winter and its long ordeal of duties for the Cabinet hostesses, "and so I am sure I shall enjoy every minute of the season. Nothing interests me so much as new people, new scenes, new manners and customs. But I like a big house where my friends can come in numbers and enjoy the novelty with me. The patriarchal way of doing things has always appealed to me. When the head of a family went abroad, he took the entire clan, even the domestic pets. In Manila. I had a habit of getting my Tennessee friends to visit me. Sometimes it looked as though Memphis had moved to the Orient. I hope that they will find Washington equally as accessible."

Mrs. Luke E. Wright.

A Cabinet hostess in the closing days of any administration is apt to find things rather tame and that the obligations outweigh the pleasures. For instance, there is the dreary round of calls. Entering on the official stage, the new Cabinet Minister's feminine belongings find themselves under deep obligations to the Senate for having confirmed the Presidential preference. Every Senator's wife expects an undue lot of kow-towing for a year at en at various times, in Manila, at Tokio, during visits to Washington and I should like to know them all. I also look forward to the weekly receptions least. Mrs. Wright views this part of the programme with complacency. "I have met many of the senatorial wom- when I shall see so many of the wives of the law makers. Of course, I agree with some critics of the present social code, that if the intercourse were more restricted one could get to know people more intimately and perhaps draw more pleasure and advantage, but I intend to accept things as I find them and not go in for reform."

Mrs. Wright has passed the best part of the last ten years in the Orient and her estimate of eastern people is worth hearing. It is interesting to know that she formed some lofty friendships in the Japanese royal circle and that some unusual honors were paid her. She and the Empress; that is, the real Empress (for it is whispered sub rosa that there are 15 comely dames called in court circles "Empresses,") became quite chummy, and Her Majesty sent Mrs. Wright a beautiful colored photograph of herself with her august signature beneath. She had already bestowed the gifts of bronze cabinets and embroidered gowns, laces and fine silks, but the autograph filled the court with awe. It is the first time since Commodore Perry forced the flowery kingdom to open the country for American diplomatic and consular officers that the wife of any American official has been so honored. Mrs. Wright was astonished to learn that the writing of royalty is so highly prized in Japan and that had the Empress conferred any of the orders of chivalry upon her or honorary degrees of any sort, it would have been common place beside that photograph adorned with the royal signature. It is quite a joke in the family that when Mrs. Wright, with her customary modesty, inquired why the Empress regarded her so highly, the reply came back because she talked so much.

Years ago the doughty commander of the Confederate squadron, Admiral Raphael Semnes, said of this daughter, then Kate Semnes, and a noted belle of Mobile, that she was the best talker in the family, and that it was a pity she was not a man so she could adopt law as a profession and convert her conversational powers into fame and sheckels. That his opinion so many years after has received the indorsement of the most august woman in Japan, is considered a noteworthy coincidence. Mrs. Wright has a chatty little way of telling things which makes the most commonplace occurrence seem thrilling. That she always talked with the Empress through an interpreter, a difficult process always, makes the gift still more acceptable. This photograph is in a gorgeous silver and gilt frame, will occupy the place of honor in the Wright drawing-room this winter and no doubt its history will furnish amusement for many a dinner company and the hordes of afternoon callers.

"There are some excellent things which the western homekeeper could learn with profit from her eastern sister," said Mrs. Wright, "and one concerns the exquisite judgment which they show in adorning their homes. Simplicity and elegance are the keynote of all the interiors, the crowding is all done in the gardens. The Japanese say that American homes

HEREABOUTS.

A. FAGET, chief constructing engineer of the Pacific Fruit Express, is staying at the Alexandria for a few days. He came here from San Francisco to visit the new pre-cooling plant under construction at Colton. "Work is progressing rapidly," declared Mr. Faget, "and in a few months Southern California will be equipped with the finest plant of its character in the world. The outlay will be more than $200,000, and it will be the first of a series of similar structures. The company is also building a pre-cooling plant at Roseville, in the northern part of the State, for the benefit of the deciduous fruit growers. At Las Vegas, Nev., and at Carlin, the same State, we are building large ice factories for the care of fruit en route, as well as to supply the adjacent territory with ice."

Crawford Hill, several times a millionaire, whose home is in Denver, is registered at the Van Nuys for a short time. He is alone, and came on business, as well as to visit friends. Mr. Hill is one of the leading citizens of Denver, has been the entertainer of several Presidents, and is one of the few Americans who has refused a place in the Cabinet when offered him by the Chief Executive of the United States. His wife is a chief figure in Colorado society circles, and is also well known in Washington, D. C., where Mr. Hill maintains an establishment.

C. K. Rieman, a manufacturer and city official of Ft. Wayne, Ind., is in the city visiting his mother, Mrs. J. A. Keil, No. 101 North Union avenue. Mr. Rieman is a former resident of Los Angeles, and has valuable realty holdings in and about the city.

J. M. Kroyer, president and principal owner of the Samson Iron Works, Stockton, with his bride, is sojourning at the Hollenbeck. They are on their wedding trip, and came in an automobile, driven by Mr. Kroyer. They intend to tour the southern part of the State for a month.

Col. George French of the Salvation Army has been spending several days at the Westminster. He came here to look after the interests of the local army, and reports conditions in a splendid way. "The army on the Coast has been making wonderful strides, and nowhere have these been greater than in Los Angeles," he said. "Our leaders in this city are responsible for the good work, and I can only hope that they continue in the same manner to improve the future as they have the past." Col. French will remain only a few days, and then proceed North.

H. A. Ohlmeyer, well known in local musical circles, is a guest at the Hayward. During the past summer he has been leader of the band at Coronado. The heavy season at the Hotel Coronado and Tent City being over, the organization has disbanded. "The past few months have been a revelation to me in the number of travelers during what was supposed to be 'hard times'" he declared. "The season at the southern resort has been one of the best ever, and even now there are many people remaining, and additional ones arriving right along." Mr. Ohlmeyer will probably remain in Los Angeles during the winter season.

Rear-Admiral F. L. Thompson, U.S. N. (retired,) whose home is in Boston, has been touring the West, and arrived at the Alexandria during the latter part of the week. While here he is the center of interest among numerous friends. His stay will be indefinite.

J. W. Young and T. A. Bergenfield of the United States Reclamation Service, who have been assisting in the building of the Yuma dam, are spending a vacation at the Hollenbeck. They have also been engaged in other irrigation projects, and report the development of the territory around Yuma on this account as very rapid.

D. R. Hills, a well-to-do mine operator of Oroville, is at the Hollenbeck, while transacting business here. He is owner of gold dredges on Feather River, the sands of which are rich. The system of dredging is the same as that which has come into extensive use in Alaska.

D. Clinton Davis, a wealthy business man of Nome, Alaska, who is also interested largely in mining, is a guest at the Hayward. With his wife, he has been touring the States, and is here to see the principal points of interest.

Fred L. Smith, secretary of the Lumbermen's Exchange of Portland, Or., is at the Hollenbeck. He reports a much better feeling in the lumber business of the North and a resumption of activities among the mills and in the shipping after the recent dull period.

H. A. Stroud, one of the pioneer settlers of Idaho, whose residence and business interests are located at Twin Falls, is occupying a suite at the Lankershim with his wife, while here on a pleasure trip.

Hon. Iquain Sepulveda, formerly of Los Angeles, will arrive here, accompanied by his family, tomorrow morning. They left Mexico City last week, and have been making the trip in a leisurely manner.

Mrs. R. Crouse, whose home is in New York, but who has been at Long Beach for the summer, is a guest at the Westminster. She will remain several days visiting friends.

H. L. Titus, manager of the Spreckles's interests at Coronado, is spending his vacation in Los Angeles. His home for the week will be the Van Nuys.

Eugene Sylvester, an extensive planter of Montgomery, Ala., is spending some time at the Angelus. He is accompanied by his wife on a pleasure trip.

J. B. Scholari, a merchant of Guaymas, Mex., who is also interested in mining properties of that vicinity, is registered at the Nadeau while visiting friends here.

W. W. Woolery, owner of several small steam vessels that ply out of Mazatlan, Mex., is at the Hollenbeck while looking after local business matters.

John Denair, founder of the town of Denair, and owner of the Orange Blossom mines, is a guest at the Hollenbeck.

F. L. Harrington, closely connected with the mining interests of Bisbee, Ariz., is enjoying a vacation at the Van Nuys.

Miss Josephine Mueller and Miss Louise Fink, who have been visiting relatives in California, are guests at the Westminster. The former resides in Minneapolis and the latter in Sumner, Iowa.

Barrett Eastman, a well-known Chicago clubman and his wife, are spending a few days at the Lankershim while here.

J. W. Burns, a Chicago attorney, is at the Nadeau. His wife accompanies him on the western tour.

Joseph J. Show and wife are guests at the Angelus. They register from Jerome, Ariz., where Mr. Show is identified with the mining interests.

W. G. Smith and T. K. Smith are guests at the Van Nuys. They register from Philadelphia and are here for the benefit of their health. Their stay will be indefinite.

L. J. Upham, an attorney of Clifton, Ariz., is spending his vacation at the Hollenbeck.

... P. Kitching and daughter, Miss A. P. Kitching and Miss K. A. Sanborn of Redlands, who have been spending the summer at Santa Monica, sailed from San Francisco Friday on the steamship Mariposa for Tahiti, to be gone a month.

STATESMEN, POLITICIANS.

SENATOR CURTIS of Kansas had the novel experience, a few days ago, of introducing two men to each other, and within a few minutes having to separate them from a bloody fight. The men were David W. Mulvane, national committeeman from Kansas, and M. F. Amrine, editor of the Council Grove (Kan.) Guard. The Guard had recently published a hot article against Mulvane and as soon as the men were introduced Mulvane called Amrine a liar, and a sharp fist fight immediately followed. Mulvane drew first and only blood before the fight was stopped by Senator Curtis.

CENTENARIANS.

MRS. SARAH SCALF of Chattanooga, Tenn, though having attained the age of 109 years has only succeeded in coming about four feet tall. Among her experiences is one different from the ordinary. When a child of nine years she, with a party of other children, went sang digging on Pulaski Mountain. A storm came up, and she became separated from the others, and was lost in the wild recesses of the mountain for six months. At night she made a bed of leaves under the trees, and cuddling down in them, slept as sound as if safe at home, tucked in her trundle bed. During the day she gathered berries for food, and was living a wild life, when her father, at the head of a hunting party, ran across her, and then ensued a lively chase before she was captured. Every stitch of clothing was gone, and when caught she scratched and clawed at her rescuers like a savage. She has never forgotten the freedom of those months, and ever since she has felt an almost irresistible desire to live that life again.

Although he had reached the age of 106 years, Rabbi Barnet Wolinsky of Brownsville, N. Y., has just taken to himself his third wife, who is herself 71 years old. The rabbi has children, grandchildren, great grandchildren, great-great grandchildren, and great-great-great grandchildren living, there being all together about 175 living descendants in Russia, and the United States. Some of them are talking about a reunion on his 110th birthday.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hunt of Brooklyn, N. Y., celebrated her 108th birthday last week. For a hundred years she says she took a cold bath each morning, and has always slept with her window open no matter how cold the weather might be. To these habits and a temperate life she attributes her long life.

ARMY AND NAVY MEN.

COMMANDER CLELAND DAVIS has invented a double-action torpedo gun which was recently given a successful trial in Boston Harbor. The torpedo is a combination gun and projectile in itself, and is effective at least 5000 feet, having its own motive power. The projectile is in two parts. When the nose of the projectile comes in contact with any obstacle which stops its progress—preferably the enemy's ship the concussion, no matter how slight, sets off that forty pounds of explosive. The explosion drives the projectile through the object struck and at the same time starts a time fuse that causes the torpedo proper to explode a few seconds later. It is this double action that gives the Davis projectile its great value.

Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood, commander of the American military forces in the Philippines, has been specially invited by the Kaiser to inspect the German army maneuvers in Alsace-Lorraine this month. Gen. He will also attend the international balloon races in Berlin, October 11. At the head of the Signal Corps, Gen. Allen has taken the lead in the movement to have the United States government provide an aëronautical department for the army, and expects to get a large appropriation from Congress for that purpose at the coming session.

He has petitioned the State authorities for leave to resuscitate any criminal "killed" in the chair as proof of his faith and to demonstrate that hundreds of lives are now sacrificed in the accidental shocks received from the electric current.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

SAMUEL BRACKET of Trenton, N. J., is probably the oldest office boy in the country, being 89 years old. He is employed in the office of the Anvil Works in that city, owned by Mrs. Clark Fisher, and he is known as an "heirloom" of the family, having been in its employ the last sixty-nine years. He now occupies the same position he did when he first went to work. During the intervening years he worked in the shops until the firm wanted to pension him, upon which he announced his preference to continue at work and was put into the office.

Abraham Harris of Chicago is understood to be negotiating for the buildings and equipment of the Franco-British Exposition in London when the exposition is ended. He bought the $30,000,000 World's Fair at Chicago, the $10,000,000 exposition at Omaha, the $12,000,000 exposition at Buffalo, and the $50,000,000 World's Fair at St. Louis. From the St. Louis Exposition he shipped 500 carloads of machinery, merchandise, furniture and other materials, and 65,000,000 feet of lumber to his yards in Chicago, where he has the largest building under one roof in the city. His concern, the Chicago House Wrecking Company, has accumulated in deals like this nearly every item of commerce known to man, from pins to locomotives, and from Oriental rugs to dynamos. Along toward the close of expositions anywhere on the globe, Mr. Harris is sure to turn up and startle the officials by offering to take all that remains of the show for a lump sum.

THAT WHEEL CHAIR.

ress in Providing It for the Sick Who so Much Needs and Deserves It.

Contributions for the purchase of wheel chair for one of our sick girls have been coming in during the week, $5 already having been raised. The chair, of course, will cost considerably more than this, and so we are constrained to ask our girls to swell this amount yet a little more. A letter has been dispatched to our sick girl to ask just how much the chair will cost, and we shall keep on quite busily, so that our amount raised will not fall short of the purchase price required. We want to purchase the chair outright and as soon as possible. girls of the Each and All Society, and girls who are not active members of the society, but who approve of the beautiful pledge of our society, not wait, but send on your little contribution as soon as possible.

It must be understood that no word of complaint has escaped the lips of our sick girl, neither has she asked for the help she so sorely needs, but it is sufficient for us to know that our help is needed—and how happy we are to be of the means of lifting the burden the least possible bit. She has asked for work. She is unable to walk, and the wheel chair means everything to her, for then she may help herself about a little, and be not entirely a burden to those at home, who are helping her, with her three little ones. Our sick girl makes beautiful embroidery work, collars, etc., and this is the only help she has asked from the Each and All girls—that they help to secure her orders for embroidery. If any should know of some one needing this beautiful handwork, let us know, at this office, and the address of our sick girl will be gladly given. Our sick girl is very cheerful, for she will not always be a sick girl; she will be well and strong again, but it is our duty to help her over this rough spot, until she is quite well again. Her illness is the result of an operation, and she may have to undergo another painful one before she is quite well again; but good health will come to her, please God, and she will cheerfully take her place in the ranks of the Each and All Girls and lend a hand to other girls over the rough spots, that somehow we all find our path, sooner or later.

BY-LAWS ADOPTED.

Report of the Special Meeting of the General Society—The New Rules Adopted.

The meeting of Wednesday, September 9, was attended by a goodly number of representative women of Each and All; called to order by the president and the business of the society was entered into without preliminaries. The festival as first proposed was discussed "pro and con," and it was unanimously agreed that as first planned we could not be ready for some time. It was decided, however, to have a series of smaller entertainments each programme to be furnished by the combination of two chapters, and that to these an admittance fee will be charged.

The fancy-workers and the would-be authors will unite to give the first of this series, at the home of one of our members. The date of this entertainment and a cordial invitation to all will be given in next Sunday's paper.

Persons who have promised fancy work and other articles are requested to have such things ready by November 1, as a sale will be made of all these. The particulars will be announced later.

This important matter being brought to a final agreeable settlement, the draft of by-laws was put before the society by the chairman of the Executive Board. These rules were then individually discussed and voted upon after which the meeting adjourned until Wednesday, September 16.

The rules follow:

THE ALL-ABSORBING QUESTION.

Continuation of the Discussion as to Whether Business Women Make Good Wives.

Our very interesting writer, Mrs. K. S. F. of San Francisco, has added her say to the very general discussion "Do Business Girls Make Good Wives?" and as it is all very good but quite lengthy we shall offer it to our readers in two parts.

The first part is herewith given:

Various sidelights have recently been cast upon the women of today and their relation to matrimony, such as: "Why American Marriages Fail;" "Why American Mothers Fail," by Anna A. Rogers in the Atlantic Monthly. President Eliot of Harvard has led the discussion on "Woman and College Education," while sundry writers in books and magazines have taken up the refrain and handled it from several viewpoints.

A few years ago a Frenchman visited this country and criticised married life as he observed it, in a book entitled "Business and Love." Now comes Mary O'Connor Newell in Appleton's Magazine, wherein she declares:

"Woman has failed to 'make good' as a leader and thinker in the professions and in business. While many succeed in earning a very comfortable living for themselves, few rise to the top in any of the many lines of activity which they have invaded in recent years. Very few are among physicians or lawyers of note. Few rise to be executive heads of colleges, editors, or directors of big business enterprises. They have had control of fortunes; they have had sway in kitchens; they have always taught; they have always acted; yet men are the great financiers, cooks, teachers, managers of theaters. In no profession are they equal to any of the leading men who stand at the head of various occupations and whose names are familiar to the public."

She quotes with approval the statement of a well-known man that there are three kinds of women in business—the kind that marry, the discontented kind, and the desexed kind—and that only the latter are successful.

The confession is made that even the women who seem to be most successful in professional occupations usually regard themselves as failures, whether they will admit it or not. By the time they have reached the point where they are able to accomplish important results they feel keenly the lack of family ties and home surroundings, and the more womanly they are the more strongly does this lack make itself felt. This is the explanation given of why so many young business women for whom brilliant careers are predicted abandon their chosen occupation for marriage.

This is not the place to give further conclusions of this writer nor the others mentioned, nor can the views of those who have disagreed with these writers in public print, be stated. This preamble suffices to show the trend of thought on this subject at this time, the phases that have so far been considered, and how appropriately it is left for our progressive Each and All Society to propound this leading question of the hour to those of us who are qualified to answer it.

By virtue of my position as my father's assistant in his business from my seventeenth to my twentieth year, inclusive, and marriage immediately following that period, I believe I am eligible to the ranks of those replying to this timely query: "Do business girls make good wives?" "They certainly try to," I frankly rejoin; and that many succeed and some fail, there is no doubt. The exact proportion only statistics can tell, and it is rather early to procure these from reliable sources, since not all of the last two or three generations of women can furnish the necessary data.

Those who contribute to this symposium will be supplying a part of the material from which later deductions can be drawn, as a guide to seekers after sociological facts and their bearing upon modes of life.

"What is the influence of the business woman on the home life of America?" writes Anne Steese Richardson. "If commercial success becomes the aim of the intelligent woman in this country, where will wifehood and motherhood rank in the scale of social economy?

"A nerve specialist, who has counted among his patients scores of overworked business women, remarked, in closing a discussion of the woman wage-earner:

"'In considering the business woman, whether as an economic or a social factor, whether for her own health or her own happiness, you must divorce her entirely from the home.'

"I gasped. So wise a man as to nerves! So ignorant as to the heart, the soul of the woman!

"No woman can be divorced from the home, either as an individual, instinct with life, or as a social problem. Home and woman—they are indissolubly linked together, even though some women do not realize the fact.

"Every woman in business is a factor in some family circle, or holds possibilities in establishing such a circle. Nor is her influence confined to her own immediate family. All unconsciously she permits her very independence and prosperity to touch in an ever-widening circle the homes of her girl friends, now married, and to arouse in the hearts of women singularly suited to the domestic, sheltered life, feelings of discontent and envy. So the financially independent sister, cousin or girl is often the real serpent in the twentieth-century Garden of Eden. Her commercial success, which passes for unalloyed happiness with her married friend who has never been in business, is an evil influence which the most willing and devoted Adam cannot always counteract."

On the other hand, Rev. John L. Scudder, pastor of the First Congregational Church of Jersey City, says business women make the best wives because mercenary motives are less apt to enter into their marriages. They know they can take care of themselves, therefore are not anxious to marry for a home. Mr. Scudder says: "The era of feminine imbecility and cowardice is passing away, and in its place we find a new age of well-rounded, exalted womanhood."

And Mrs. Lydia Kingsmill Commander, likewise a student of this subject, agrees with him when she says: "To my mind the best feature of it all is that it is taking marriage from the old basis, and women are marrying for the best reason in the world—for love—where formerly they married for a home."

It will be readily conceded that the wives of today are not in all respects wives such as their grandmothers were, and it is pleasant to feel that such testimony about the former, as the foregoing sentiments, can be given unreservedly. To determine the results more fairly, if less flattering, a line must be drawn between those who enter business life so as to be self-supporting or contribute to the support of others in addition, and the girls who live at home but seek employment for any of the other reasons that affect such a course, as, to partly support themselves, to earn pin money and get experience that might later avail them if thrown upon their own resources, or to gratify a talent, provide for further education, and last but least worthy, the going into the work-a-day world just to pass time away and secure a form of social life not otherwise accessible to girls of a certain class.

The girls who possess a special aptitude for business and go into it after professional preparation, or develop native ability along the line of work pursued, make a success of it financially and otherwise, may marry men in similar or allied occupations from propinquity, where domestic instincts are not dormant; to further business or social interests, when said instincts are latent or suppressed, and for love where Cupid truly intervenes.

But the girls to whom business is never more than an avocation, as is true of so large a number who have failed to become self-supporting from lack of skill or other handicaps, and even when a fair pecuniary and other reward attends their efforts, are still dissatisfied and unhappy—this host of girls, inefficient too often in business, though otherwise good-hearted in the main, having drifted somehow into business, and failing to cast anchor, drift again to, or deliberately seek matrimonial relations for a home. They have found it a struggle to maintain one alone, very likely, and even where they are willing or desirous of working after marriage, it seems to them better to share the burdens of material existence with another.

This prime object may not be owned even to themselves, but to an observer it may be too evident. And such mercenary alliances are to be deplored if they continue to be that and never rise to anything higher, even when children come to share their lives.

That home is not a home in the sense a true marriage makes one possible. However, these girls are wives, and according to their innate domesticity, training and general characters, make good or indifferent wives insofar as they are housekeepers and mothers, at any rate. Business experience, adverse or favorable, ought to yield all girls who participate in it a certain sympathy with and understanding of the trials a husband has to contend with in the commercial world. This, with some appreciation of the meaning of money, and whether each dollar in the family treasury stands for a few minutes', hours' or a day's work, calling for correspondingly slow or speedy expenditure—all contributes to her fitness as a helpmate.

Then if there be sufficient harmony of temperament and enough mutual tastes and tendencies are present, she is in a fair way to be a good comrade. And when united impulses are wholesome, devoted to the family and community welfare, then love will hallow this union and she will indeed be a business girl who is also a good wife.

The girl in whom domestic inclinations are slight or who deprecates such as she has, had better wed an art or profession or some other calling.

EACH AND ALL MOTTO.

Golden thoughts, golden deeds,
Rid life's garden of its weeds.

OUR PLEDGE:

"To make one another happy, to lighten one another's burdens, to share one another's cares, to be lifters, not leaners, to make the world a little sweeter place to live in, to be mutual encouragers, never discouragers of any one, to start songs, not complainings, and to do every day something beautiful, some kindness which will cheer and strengthen another."

For W.C. and D.S.C.

Mrs. A. L. B. of Los Angeles wishes to communicate with V. V. who is now known as the Good Samaritan of the Each and All Society.

I was pleased to see in last Sunday's Times that you were willing to help him or her. I will send my address by kindness of the editor. My rheumatism is in my hands mostly, chronic and inflammatory I think. My little finger joints are very much enlarged, are swollen and inflamed at times. I shall be so pleased to receive the treatment as I don't believe in drugs much. I would be pleased also to have the exercise for pneumonia as one cannot know too much about simple remedies, and it seems to me that a health department would do so much good in the Each and All. What does the editor think about it? Would you mind giving me the name of the private club and can any one join? Do you know a good remedy for constipation? Pardon me if I am asking too much. Shall be glad to comply with request in regard to pledges.

Will you please enroll me as a member of the Each and All Society? I think I would like to become a member of the Walking and Domestic Science Chapters.

A health department is carried on quite extensively in the magazine section of The Times. Your address will be forwarded to V. V. upon receipt of a stamped envelope.

For Versatile Venona.

A Times subscriber sends her name and address and also stamps that she may communicate with V. V.

Will you please say to Versatile Venona that we will gladly receive her kind help of rules for the cure of rheumatism. One member of my family has suffered with it off and on for about five years, but the last few months it looks as though it has come to stay. The right shoulder and arm are the worst, she has but little use of the hand. There is no swelling. The pain is in the joints and muscles. We are discouraged using medicines; we do not seem to have found the right one as yet. I have it in my thumb joint, and some times in my back, but mine is not severe, but at times is far from comfortable. I do the house work, washing and ironing for the family, of three. May I ask for the exercise that will cure rheumatism? It would be so good to know. Maybe handing to another "a golden deed."

Versatile Venona will be glad to send you the directions to be followed in your case by personal letter.

For the New Chapter.

E. S. K., an Each and All girl, is interested in the study of the Bible as literature and asks to communicate with the chairman.

Will you do me the favor to forward the inclosed envelope bearing my address to the chairman of the chapter on study of the Bible as literature. I am an Each and All member.

Your address has been forwarded as you request. A number of new names has been added to this chapter during the last week.

An Invalid Cheer.

Mrs. L. C. J. of South Pasadena will be an invalid cheerer, and sends a pretty thought expressed in verse for the Each and All girls.

May I knock at the door of the Invalids' Cheer Chapter? I have not much to offer unless it is a heart full of sympathy for those less fortunate than I. I have a little family of daughters—"all sizes"—and it is a cherished wish that they grow up thinking of others.

If you cannot in the harvest
  Garner up the richest sheaves,
Many a grain, both ripe and golden,
  Will the careless reapers leave;
Go and glean among the briers,
  Growing rank against the wall,
For it may be that the shadows
  Hide the heaviest wheat of all.

"Thought for others" is a most beautiful and unselfish sentiment to instill into the hearts of your little "daughters of all sizes." You will make an ideal member for the Invalid Cheer Chapter.

An Interesting Letter.

Juan Alvarado of Los Angeles has something to say explanatory of an architectural course, and sends information to Long Beach members about Luther Burbank.

Mrs. C. G., Long Beach, asks for information concerning Luther Burbank, so I inclose a magazine article on that subject, hoping it will be of interest to her. Also please find inclosed 10 cents (I wish it could be many times that amount,) to be applied to S. W.'s wheel chair fund.

In regard to an architectural course of which I wrote, I may add that there will be no expense attached, except for working materials and it need not interfere with "bread and butter work." Some day there will be more women than men in that profession.

I am very much interested in the discussion as to whether or not business girls make good wives. Of course they do, but, if it is possible, I will never allow my only little girl to go into business when she is grown. Business girls are so apt to lose their fine distinction between right and wrong and their innocence. They some times learn to use slang and, being associated so closely with the men, to be freer in their conversation and actions with them. Of course that does not hinder a girl from becoming a good wife, so perhaps I am a little off the subject. Business girls learn to economize. So do as many home girls.

Let me give you some experience at the risk of being criticised for being personal. From the time I was 15 I earned my own living, and when I married I went directly from the office into my husband's home. I had learned the lesson of economy, so was all right there, but I didn't know the first thing about the science of housekeeping; and it generally took me two hours to accomplish what a good housekeeper could do in one. It was a great pleasure though to have my husband say to me: "Alice, you can compose a better business letter than I, so wont' you please write to such-and-such a firm about their last shipment, etc.," or to have him bring his books home and let me help with them, or tell me about the day's work, sure of my sympathy and understanding.

On the other hand, the mysteries of preserving and canning time, certainly proved a guessing contest for me. How many gallons of fruit I wasted, how many jars broken or how many times fingers were scorched would be too much for me to calculate. I made up my mind to do all my own sewing. Such nondescrip garments you never saw! Some I wore and some I didn't. Of course in time I learned, but how much dearer my learning cost me than if I had learned all those things before. A man wants a home and a loving, sympathetic wife, whether she can can add two and two or not.

So much the better though if she can combine all the sensible, executive qualities of the business girl with the home knowledge of the home girl. It is also true a business girl appreciates a good home and a good husband, really more than a home girl, but at the same time a business girl is liable to be more independent and more self-assertive. There can be only one head to a household and that head belongs to the husband, and there is bound to be discord if the wife tries to usurp this place.

You may have guessed from the above that I admire the new woman, but I love and long for the "Order of Old-Fashioned Women."

Just as was said at the opening of this discussion, there is much to be said pro and con on this subject, "Do Business Girls Make Good Wives?" There aren't many of us who are willing to relate experiences at our own expense as you have done here, and this is what makes your letter very interesting.

For Animal Aid Chapter.

Mrs. E. C. T. of Los Angeles is interested in the Animal Aid Chapter and wishes to become a member.

As I would like to become a member of the Animal Aid Chapter of the Each and All Society, I send you herewith my name and address.

Yours truly,
MRS. E. C. T.

The Animal Aid Chapter is fast becoming one of the most popular branches of the society. Your name will be sent to the chairman of this chapter and you will hear from her promptly.

Mothers' Chapter Report.

The report of the Mother's Chapter is as follows:

"Our Chapter is getting along very nicely. We have sixteen members now and there is always room for others. We are glad to say the Round Robin letters are moving along in fine order, and are when they return to me, more than interesting. I wish the letters might be published so others not members could also be benefited.

"This chapter is open to married girls and mothers—young and old. Better be enrolled today.

"A letter to the editor of this department, enclosing a stamped envelope, will give you all information concerning the Mothers' Chapter."

A New Member.

Since Mrs. J. R. H., Glendale, Cal., has been assured that the E. and A. Society of The Times is not alone for young girls, she asks to become a member.

I have been a constant reader of The Times for some time and have enjoyed reading about the "Each and All" Society, and as I find all the girls are not young girls, I have a hope that I may be admitted to membership. Surely our lives will be made better by the keeping of the pledge of Each and All. Will you please forward the enclosed to "Versatile Venona?"

The Study of the Bible as Literature Chapter has received all the new members this last week.

Flitted to Los Angeles.

Mrs. N. F. S., formerly of La Crescenta, has now flitted to Los Angeles to reside permanently.

I am so anxious about the Round Robin letter which came to me only last night, owing to unusual circumstances connected with the "flitting." I will explain soon as possible, but believe me until now I have been unable even to give an account of my whereabouts. Even having to wait for our telephone to be put in the new home. With fraternal greeting.

We will surely have to pardon the "unconstitutional materials" and also your delay in sending on the Round Robin letter of the Mothers' Chapter, since you ask for this pardon so graciously.

Corinne Ross Harris, birthday anniversary was celebrated last Monday afternoon in manner, the little hostess dispensing presents to her little guests of receiving them.

NOVEL BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Corinne Ross Harris and Her Friends Enjoy a Pleasant Afternoon.

novel and merry birthday given in honor of the birthday of little Corinne Ross of Mr. and Mrs. Her- Harris of No. 1000 Alvarado Monday afternoon. The charming and dainty in frock, assisted her her forty-seven came to make merry the birthday party birthday was novel, for presents the little them to her friends. provided the people as their part party. Tucked 'way corner of the the little lady's party, written very plainly, was the instruction, "No presents."

A pet donkey was one of the surprises of the affair, and all evening long rides were enjoyed through the grounds by the delightful children; then there were games and romps besides to one's heart's content.

The big birthday cake with its four red waxen candles was very much in evidence, and the little hostess herself cut the cake and passed it around to the little guests. After the cake cutting the little people were all invited over to grandfather's house next door—the home of Mr. and Mrs. Abner Ross. Here the children were brought into the parlor, and each in turn was given a fishing rod and told to cast the line between the portieres, and in this way the most wonderful presents were found on the end of the line, when, after much angling, a bite was felt, and then with a sudden jerk a pretty present was landed. There was much glee over the fishing game. This was the way Corinne's parents and grandparents wished her to celebrate her birthday, in giving presents to her little friends instead of receiving them, and the little girl enjoyed the novel birthday party very much herself.

How Jimmie's Tact Won.

Here is a story, the truth of which Miss Elizabeth Kelly, principal of one of the big public schools of New Orleans, will attest. Miss Kelly, with her sister, is now visiting friends in Los Angeles.

It is a story of a boy's tact, which saved him a sound thrashing from an indignant and mortified parent, and restored him to his place in the classroom, from which he had been dismissed, and incidentally into the good graces of his teacher.

James McCarthy is the name of the lad, and he possesses all the wit and blarney which come to him rightfully as the descendant of an Irish father and mother.

The principal of the school which James attended is also of Irish descent, and it was upon this fact that cunning James played.

James McCarthy was what his teacher called "an incorrigible boy," and frequent punishments were unavailing. He was a sore trial indeed, although only a mite of a boy about 12 years old.

One fatal day James surpassed himself in being unruly—for even the virtue of being "sent to the principal" lost its effect, through every-day occurrence. So the principal was finally obliged, on this fatal day, to dismiss Jimmie from school on account of his bad example and influence upon the other scholars. She just packed him up, books and cap, and sent him home to his mother.

Jimmy's mother, of course, was very much humiliated over the occurrence, and punished him severely. But he was not allowed to enter the schoolhouse or grounds again. He gave several of the boys attending school a good thrashing for twitting him on the street of "being put out of school."

Jimmie's father was a traveling man and was, therefore, away from home months at a time. He was the only person in all the world for whom Jimmie McCarthy showed any respect.

As the time for his father's homecoming approached, Jimmie's mother and himself began to grow very uneasy, for both were afraid of what the dreadful consequences of dismissal from school would mean to the boy when his father learned of it.

Now right here is where Jimmie's tact and foresight were brought into play.

"I don't dare to think what will become of you, Jimmie, when your father comes home and finds out you have been dismissed from school," poor Mrs. McCarthy said to the boy one day. She was the only real friend incorrigible little Jimmie seemed to have in the whole world.

"Never mind, mamma," said Jimmie, going up to her and seating himself on the arm of her chair, while he slyly stole an arm round her neck.

"I've thought of the very wonderfulest plan that can't miss, and I'll be sitting right back in school before papa ever reaches home."

Mrs. McCarthy brightened up for a moment, but the look of worry returned almost at once.

"It's all foolishness for you, Jimmie McCarthy, to think Miss Kelly will ever have you back again at school; you simply disgraced yourself, and it will be awful around here when your father gets home." Tears came to the poor woman's eyes as she thought of what was in store for poor Jimmie.

"Oh, please, mamma, don't cry," pleaded Jimmie, all the rugged, innate manliness of the little chap aroused at sight of his mother in tears, and then he nestled his head up close to his mother's, while grimy arms were clasped around her neck, and he unfolded to her his "wonderfullest plan that couldn't miss."

"You see, ma, next Monday is St. Patrick's Day——"

"Well, I know that," said Jimmie's mother, "but what's that got to do with getting you out of trouble before your father gets home?"

"Everything," glibly announced Jimmie. "You just dress me up in my best clothes, and put a green tie on me, and I'll wear a shamrock in my coat, then you take me over to Miss Kelly's school——" Jimmie got breathless with enthusiasm as he unfolded his wonderfullest plan," and as he hugged his mother tightly around the neck, regaining his breath, he fairly shouted: "Oh, she'll take me back, mamma. Miss Kelly'll take me back on St. Patrick's Day, for she couldn't be mean to anybody on that day. No fellow ever gets a lickin' on St. Patrick's Day in Miss Kelly's school. She wouldn't allow it. Everybody is happy and smiling, and her heart ain't got no room for nothin' but love on St. Patrick's Day. The fellows always fixes up her room with all kinds of green stuff, and the ones that knows pieces about Ireland gets up and says 'em.

"You just try it, ma," coaxed Jimmie, "and see if it don't work, and see if she don't take me back to school."

Jimmie's eloquence and earnestness almost convinced Mrs. McCarthy herself, and her eyes shone brightly, all the tears having vanished. She finally consented, after a little more coaxing, to put Jimmie's plan to the test.

Accordingly the next Monday morning Jimmie and Mrs. McCarthy, dressed in their Sunday best, each with St. Patrick's color in evidence, made their way to McDonough school No. 4. They had not long to wait until Miss Kelly herself, bright and cheery, came tripping in, a great streamer of green ribbon pinned to her shoulder.

"Oh, good morning, Miss Kelly, and a happy St. Patrick's Day to you," said Mrs. McCarthy, as she went forward and held out her hand to the principal.

"I wish you a happy St. Patrick's Day, also, Mrs. McCarthy," responded Miss Kelly, taking the proffered hand and clasping it warmly.

Then Jimmie's story was told by his mother to Miss Kelly, while Jimmie stood to one side with downcast eyes, truly a little penitent.

Of course, Miss Kelly reinstated Jimmie in his class-room, leading him by the hand herself to his teacher, and all pronounced it the happiest St. Patrick's Day that was ever celebrated.

Jimmie's father never learned of his dismissal from school, and Jimmie ever after was one of the best and most apt scholars, and devotedly loved by the principal.

Parties for the Birds.

The males of the great bird of paradise hold regular dancing parties in the trees. They select a tree which has an extensive head of branches bearing broad leaves. In this tree these most gorgeous and beautiful of all birds dance stately minuets. Twenty birds or more will assemble, with erected plumes and outstretched wings. They fly in great excitement from branch to branch in every variety of motion, but with an astonishing regularity. There is no sight to compare with one of these dancing parties. Each bird is overshadowed with its magnificent colored plumes of gold, striped with brilliant red, while its yellow head and emerald green throat are kept in constant motion. There appears to be a blaze of ever-changing color and life in the tree.

These birds, however, are by no means the only ones which indulge in dancing. There is a small bird in South America that dances in a novel manner. The natives call it the bailador. Two bailadors will perch on twigs a couple of feet apart from each other to have a song and dance. Alternately they will jump about two feet in the air, alighting exactly upon the spot jumped from. These birds keep perfect time. One will jump as the other alights, each bird singing to the tune of "To-le-do, te-de, te-diddle-de-do-do." The "to" is sung as the bird crouches, ready to spring; the "le" is sung while in the air, and the "do," etc., on alighting. The song and dance proceeds until the birds are tired.

The tyrant birds are fond of delirious waltzes. These birds prefer to perch on the top of a bush. They leave the twigs at intervals, in order to waltz around and around in the air. They twist about so rapidly that their wings make a distinct humming sound and resemble a streak of mist. All of a sudden they finish their mad revels and go back to the twig to wait until the next waltz.—[Exchange.

Ned stood by the nurse, looking intently at his baby sister that was being lulled to sleep. "Ain't she nearly unconscious?" asked Ned in a whisper, alluding to the baby.

Nurse nodded affirmatively, continuing to sing a lullaby.

"Then stop singing or you'll sure kill her," declared Ned.

DAUGHTER OF FIGHTER.

look like shops, with all their wares displayed for sale. In Japan one picture hangs on each wall space, and it shows to fine advantage, without anything to distract attention. But the homekeeper changes her picture frequently, in fact perhaps once a week, and thus she displays all her treasures in the course of a year. The surplus supply of pictures, draperies and bric-a-brac is kept in an outhouse, and one of the duties of the matron is to overlook her treasures at stated times and select what she wishes to use. Only a few rugs, a vase or two on exquisitely carved pedestals and the necessary chairs and settees adorn the staterooms of the palace, and even less furnishing is seen in private houses.

"The effect is restful and gives a sense of absolute cleanliness which is very acceptable in the East. The bedrooms are a revelation. At first it would seem that one must have the chiffonier, the boxes and chests and pier glasses and a thousand and one odds and ends to which you get accustomed at home. But soon you discover the secret of life, that the fewer indoor incumbrances, the less paraphernalia for the toilet, the quicker the farewell to carking care. Then one begins to envy the way the Japanese ladies dress, so simply and comfortably, yet presenting the finished and artistic whole which all women crave. I once employed a little Japanese maid who was taken sick one morning while attending to her duties. I went to attend her, and finding her looking feverish, I insisted that she should go to bed at once. The alacrity with which she obeyed my command absolutely took away my breath. The words were barely out of my mouth when she untied a string at her throat, another at the waist, kicked off her slippers, stood revealed in the most immaculate white linen outfit and then tumbled into bed. When I pondered on the involved process which we call undressing, I concluded that the eastern women are the only wise ones."

Mrs. Wright is noted for her good taste in dress, and though she may admire, she has not imitated the Japanese women in robing herself. As she says, she is of the western world and must act accordingly. She is fond of soft, fluffy raiment, and of laces and embroiderd stuffs. Her hair is light brown, very pretty and wavy, and she arranges it with dainty care. Her husband has said that in all the thirty-odd years of their married life he never saw Mrs. Wright when her hair did not look perfection, and this may convey an idea of her comeliness in that most important regard. She is partial to wearing the fawns and the grays which go so well with the brown hair which is showing glints of silver, and she always has in her coiffure some little touch, a bow of soft ribbon, a jabot of lace, or a flower, which adds the touch of elegance to her toilet. Mrs. Wright, in spite of living in hot and debilitating climates, has clung most persistently to her youth. She seems ridiculously young looking to have good-sized grandchildren and to be the mother of three great, stalwart sons as well as two fine-looking married daughters.

Mrs. Wright comes of a distinguished family of Mobile, Ala., the Semmes, French in origin, who have been Catholics for untold generations. She was brought up in that faith, while her husband is a Presbyterian. She was educated at the Sacred Heart Convent on the Gulf Coast, and still retains a keen interest in her alma mater. In the Philippines Mrs. Wright was a fervent laborer in the many church organizations, and her home was frequently the scene of hospitality to the Roman Catholic clergy. Her successful efforts to aid the Philippine orphans received recognition at Rome during the late Pontiff's régime. She received from him a handsomely illuminated white leather breviary, with an autograph and blessing of Leo XIII on the fly leaf, accompanied by a gold medal surrounded with small gems. Mrs. Wright visited the late Pope and his successor, Pius XI, and was shown many courtesies at the Vatican.

Mrs. Charles H. Watkins, the elder daughter of the house, will spend the winter with her parents in Washington and will assume a large share of the social burden. Mrs. Wright has not been very robust since returning to her native land and the physicians have advised less social exertion than she is disposed to accomplish. Mrs. Watkins, who was Anna Wright, is one of the social leaders of Memphis and is thoroughly equipped to act as vice-reine in her mother's home at least on occasion. She is a handsome young matron and who has made two homes, one in Memphis, the other in Westchester county, N. Y., famous for her brilliant entertainments. Mrs. Palmer may come to Washington to spend part of the winter with her parents, but this is not definitely decided.

There are three Wright sons, two of whom are married. The eldest, Semmes, is a bachelor and will be here with his father during the winter. The Wrights cannot be counted among the very rich people in the executive set, but they have an income sufficient even for the many demands on a new Cabinet Minister. Another interesting fact is that Mrs. Wright is the sole representative of the southern hostess in the Roosevelt Cabinet. The Attorney-General is a southern man geographically, but both his wife and mother claim Boston as their home, and the sympathies and proclivities of the Bonaparte family seem entirely Bostonese.

"One may expect to see a southern home conducted on the old-time southern idea of hospitality when the Wrights set up their household goods in Washington," said a close friend of Mrs. Wright. "She is the motherly type of woman and the generous type which seems to be almost extinct."

Wood Ashes as Medicine.

Wood ash seems to be a curious remedy for diseases in animals, yet its virtues in that capacity are much appreciated in Mashonaland. One well-known farmer in that country has raised pigs on a very extensive scale for nearly twenty years without ever receiving a visitation of cholera or swine fever, and with a loss of only 2 per cent. of his animals from the plague. He attributes his good fortune to the fact that he keeps wood ashes and charcoal mixed with salt constantly before his pigs. The mixture is kept in large covered boxes, with holes bored near the bottom, from which the animals work the stuff out as fast as they want it. They never, it appears, eat more of it than is good for them. A little wood ash is also held to be very beneficial to horses; it is given, a teaspoonful at a time, sprinkled on a feed of oats. The natives aver that no other medicine is needed to keep a horse in good condition.—[London Standard.

Where the Dogs Dine.

Most restaurants have a rule which forbids a patron from bringing a dog to the table, but in Brooklyn one eating house proprietor has found it profitable to cater to women who have a fondness for dogs and a desire to have them for table companions. Any day at the luncheon hour, says the New York Sun, three or four women may be seen eating at this place, their pets sitting beside them on special high chairs. Doggie's dinner is served on a special plate, which is placed on a ledge in front of the chair.

LIVE AND LET LIVE.

Never before in the history of occult science has a man of PROF. W. E. KING'S professional standing consented to place his services at the disposal of the public for such a nominal consideration. Realizing that this city has been overrun with pretenders and that many of its citizens are anxious to visit a genuine psychic PROF. W. E. KING has decided to place his consultation fee within the reach of all.

Years of study, travel in far eastern lands, and endless experience, coupled with rare psychical gifts, have made him the world's greatest living exponent of HINDOO and OCCULT MYSTICISM.

DO YOU WISH TO KNOW
How can I have good luck?
How can I succeed in business?
How can I make home happy?
How can I conquer my enemies?
How can I marry the one I choose?
How can I marry well?
How soon can I marry?
How can I conquer my rival?
How can I make any one love me?
How soon will my lover propose?
How can I get a letter?
How can I get a position?
How can I remove bad influences?
How can I control any one?
How make distant ones think of me?
How can I settle my quarrel?
How can I hold my husband's love?
How can I hold my wife's love?
PROF. W. E. KING tells all—never asks a question.

EXTRAORDINARY PSYCHIC POWER, combined with his superior knowledge of occult force, enables him to read human life with unerring accuracy from infancy to old age; his powers are wonderful and indisputable; his advice is reliable, his information clear, concise and to the point, in love, marriage, divorce, sales, wills, patents, journeys, old estates, investments, property mortgages.

I WILL GIVE YOU THE LUCK that wins success in love, marriage, divorce, speculation, business, health and transactions of all kinds; restore lost affection; I will tell you how to gain the love of the one you desire, even though miles away; will tell you who and when you will marry.

I WILL TELL YOU HOW TO ATTRACT, control and change the thoughts, intentions, actions or character so that you will reach the highest possible development of mental vigor, health, happiness and capacity to earn wealth; how to accumulate a fortune and be happy.

I WILL TELL OF YOUR HUSBAND, WIFE, lover, friends, or enemies; who is true and who is false; will tell you every hope, fear, ambition, better than you could tell it yourself; those that are unsuccessful are made prosperous and started on the road to wealth; tell you how to make your husband or wife, or any one, be kind and true to you.

IF YOU ARE GOING TO SEE A PSYCHIC WHY NOT SEE THE BEST?

As the best is always the cheapest in the end. Better consult no clairvoyant at all than one who is unable to help you, as false prophets do more harm than good, as they leave you in a worse condition than before by their false advice, based upon guesses; but PROF. W. E. KING has an established reputation; testimonials and credentials from thousands of your own citizens and friends.

If you have already made a mistake, thrown away your money and lost confidence through dealing with much-advertised and self-styled palmists and psychics and their cheap, clap-trap methods, start from the beginning and consult PROF. W. E. KING. He will tell you frankly your condition and what you may expect; if nothing can be done for you he will not take one cent of your money. Has not this honesty on the face of it?

PROF. W. E. KING FORETELLS MANY EVENTS.

Some of the prophecies made by Prof. W. E. KING and which were fulfilled to the letter and day were:

The explosion of the United States warship Bennington at San Diego, Cal. It was predicted that on that day the government would lose a ship in the Pacific.

Prof. W. E. KING, Psychic, had warned the public of San Francisco's earthquake of 1906 for years.

Prof. W. E. KING predicted the Japanese-Russian war. The day of the month and year was predicted on which hostilities would be begun and the victory of the Japanese.

Prof. W. E. KING predicted the late President McKinley's assassination at "Buffalo Exposition."

Prof. W. E. KING predicted the assassination of Carter Harrison the elder three weeks before the weak-minded Prendergast fired the fatal shot at Chicago's chief executive.

Prof. W. E. KING predicted the earthquake at Kingston, Jamaica, W.I.; the earthquake in Chile; the Thaw-White tragedy; also predicted the Galveston flood.

On Jan. 17 two earthquake shocks were felt at Oban, Scotland. They had been predicted by W. E. KING.

Prof. W. E. KING, Psychic, has foretold many great events that took place on the day set.

Prof. W. E. KING is now located at 247 S. Hill st., where he will be pleased to meet his clients and many friends.

Recommended by a New York Judge: August 20, 1905—I cheerfully recommend Prof. King as a gifted psychic. He predicted my election and located important documents that had been lost three years. JUDGE F. B. CROWELL, Supreme Judge.

FROM LILLIAN RUSSELL, THE WELL-KNOWN ACTRESS.

I was greatly impressed with PROF. W. E. KING'S reading. His powers are truly marvelous. He develops in one a force that enables them to attract people, to interest them and to please them to their good and to your advantage without the least effort on one's part. His advice and assistance have been of great benefit to me.

FROM A PROMINENT MINISTER.

I desire to bear evidence to the genuineness of PROF. W. E. KING'S work. God gives to us an intuition whereby we may guide our lives. That PROF. W. E. KING possesses this guiding power to a marvelous degree is evident. The fact that his clients are his warmest and truest friends is alone a tribute to his sincerity and honest methods in dealing with all. He has rendered me immeasureable assistance. Rev. W. C. Jessup.

FROM M. ROTHSCHILD, THE WELL-KNOWN FINANCIER.

For the past five years PROF. W. E. KING'S advice and assistance have favorably influenced my business and financial affairs. I have tested nearly every psychic in this country and find PROF. W. E. KING'S advice reliable and far superior to any that I have ever met.

PROF. W. E. KING: I wish to give my testimonial for the benefit of those who wish to read it. Since I consulted you several weeks ago I have followed your advice and the instructions you gave me as nearly as I possibly could, and I can truly say the result has been marvelous. I shall consider it a privilege to recommend you to any person who will take the trouble to write to me. Yours truly, Maurice Winkler, 3829 State St., New York.

To Whom It May Concern: We take great pleasure in recommending our brother, PROF. W. E. KING, as a psychic of good standing, having to our knowledge been fully developed in all the various phases of mental psychicship. We cordially recommend him to any individual or society that may need his services.

President Indiana State Association of Spiritualists.

THE CELEBRATED RELIABLE ASTROLOGER AND PALMIST.

A resident of Los Angeles for 24 years, and whose work is known throughout this entire land, having made a life study of ASTROLOGY AND PALMISTRY, has convinced hundreds of the BEST INTELLECTS and persons in all walks of life that his REMARKABLE READINGS AND PREDICTIONS FOR FUTURE EVENTS in their lives are unparalleled.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE indicates the condition of health or disease, tells all about love, whom to marry and when, describing the marriage partner; shows deaths, divorce; tells about children; speculations, the best time to invest or to push affairs, and when to hold on to what has been gained; your talents; your environment; when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when one will be in danger of illness, accidents, death, losses, troubles; also of your good periods, coming—giving dates of these events for the future.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an expert PALMIST, and WITH EACH PALM READING GIVES ALSO AN ASTROLOGICAL READING.

PROF. ALTHOUSE stands at the very head of the profession, having read more celebrated people than any other reader. His readings, too, must in no wise be classed with those of any other readers now operating in this part of the country, and his skilled work has no comparison with theirs whatever.

PROF. ALTHOUSE also read E. H. Sothern, Frederick Warde, Louis James, Paul de Longpre, Admiral Schley, Senator Clark, ex-Gov. Pardee, David Starr Jordan, Gen. Chaffee, Baron Rothschild, Joaquin Miller, Ysaye, Sousa, Edson, Capt. Hobson, Caruso, Josef Hofmann, Huntington, Mme. Schumann-Heink, Lillian Nordica, Calve, Julia Marlowe, Modjeska, Sembrich, Jefferson, Lillian Russell, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, Fritzi Scheff, and hundreds of others.

Beware, however, of HUMBUG READERS.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in the casting of horoscopes and hand reading has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST PSYCHIC.
The only Yogi Mediator of secret influence in America from India.

KARMA is famous in two hemispheres for her accurately correct reading of human life from cradle to grave.

The acknowledged princess of clairvoyants and recognized authority on personal magnetism, mental telepathy and the finer forces of nature. Being highly connected, she was afforded every advantage which money could secure in the development of her strange powers. This, and her accumulated knowledge in the kindred branches of occult science and psychic phenomena, makes MADAM KARMA a woman of high ability and indisputable power, excelled by no man or woman on earth in this line. By virtue of these powers vested in her by Nature, and her profound knowledge of strange forces, she calls names, dates, facts, figures, without any previous knowledge of who you are or anything at all concerning you. These claims may seem unreasonable to a great many, yet they are absolutely true, and if she fails to perform her work exactly as she advertises, she will ask no fee whatever for her time and effort.

SECRET CONTROL.

By the scientific use of personal magnetism and mental telepathy MADAM KARMA is able to influence and control any individual, near by or at a distance, in matters of love, business, etc., according to your desire. Mental telepathy, when understood and properly applied, is as scientific and certain in its results as wireless telegraphy, and every schoolboy knows that wireless telegraphy is an established fact, and in use every day. If there is any one over whom you desire to gain a secret control, call on this talented lady.

WHAT SHE TELLS YOU.

MADAM KARMA tells you all about your business affairs, what to do, when and how to do it for the best results. She gives the names of people, the time, and under what circumstances you will meet or deal with them, whether in a business or social way, etc.; she tells who is true and who is false; whom and when you will marry, and if the one you love is true or false. You may consult her on any business affairs—old estates, sales, investments, lawsuits, moves, journeys, etc., family troubles, love affairs, etc. You tell her nothing. She tells you all without asking a question or your speaking a word.

To give every one a chance to get the best that can be had in life, she has reduced her reading to 50 cents.

PERSONAL—
MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store,)
by those desiring CAREFUL CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn, in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health, marriage and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.
(Daily and evenings; Sundays, 9 to 3.)

BORN AND RAISED A PSYCHIC.

INHERITING POWER FROM MANY GENERATIONS OF PSYCHOLOGISTS, WHO WERE THEMSELVES PEERS IN THEIR PROFESSION. MME. ANNUVE INHERITS THESE GIFTS FROM HER PROGENITORS, AND HER SUCCESS IS PHENOMENAL, AS EVIDENCED BY THE UNANIMOUS EXPRESSION OF HER PATRONS, WHO RECOGNIZE AND APPRECIATE HER GREAT GIFTS. HER REPUTATION AS A GREAT PSYCHIC IS FIXED AND UNASSAILABLE, AND THOSE WHO HAVE CONSULTED HER ARE HER STAUNCHEST ADMIRERS. SKEPTICS ARE DISARMED OF PREJUDICE IN THE PRESENCE OF MME. ANNUVE, WHO READS UNERRINGLY THE SECRETS OF THE PAST AND CASTS HER PSYCHIC LIGHT UPON THE FUTURE'S HIDDEN PATH.

MME. ANNUVE, THROUGH HER MARVELOUS PSYCHO-VIBRATORY POWERS, BRINGS ABOUT MORE MARRIAGES, REUNITES THE SEPARATED AND HELPS MORE PEOPLE TO HEALTH, WEALTH AND HAPPINESS THAN ANY PSYCHIC IN AMERICA.

MME. ANNUVE IS ACKNOWLEDGED BY THE PRESS AND PUBLIC AS A TRUE PSYCHIC, GIFTED WITH POWER OF DEMONSTRATION AND ORIGINALITY OF EXPRESSION, IS IMPERVIOUS TO IMITATORS AND PLAGARISTS, WHO ARE HERE TODAY AND AWAY TOMORROW, BUT BUILDS HER REPUTATION ON MERIT, AND HER POPULARITY ON THE ACCURACY OF HER PSYCHIC PRECEPTIONS. BEING THE OWNER OF CONSIDERABLE PROPERTY IN LOS ANGELES, MME. ANNUVE HAS NECESSARILY MADE THIS CITY HER PERMANENT LOCATION.

During the year 1907 some of her records for successful work as follows:

148 reunited after separation.
Brought about 200 marriages.
Gained love of desired one in 214 instances.
Located 13 absent ones.
Located 2 buried treasures.
Overcame 575 rivals.

And hundreds of other cases, such as business speculations, law suits and transactions of all kinds.

The tide of skepticism is surely turning by the wonderful power displayed by this phenomenal woman.

Mme. Annuve's purposes and intentions are best expressed in her own words: "I don't want money I don't earn; I don't need it. But I want to help you to success and happiness. I will tell you frankly your condition. If nothing can be done for you I will not take one cent of your money.

"My practice and professional reputation are built upon honor, reasonable charges, fair dealings, faithful service and speedy success, for my clients have won for me the largest practice in California. My superior knowledge and power give me advantages which warrant me in guaranteeing safer, surer and more rapid results than can be obtained elsewhere. Will give you the most complete, exact, reliable and intelligent reading you have ever had. Tell you whom and when you will marry; if you will be divorced and why. The sickness you have or will have. How to prosper and win success. Locate business to begin and where; the psychological moment for safe speculation or investment. Locate buried treasures, missing papers, lost or absent friends, mines, ore veins. Overcome rivals, enemies, evil influences, weakness of all kinds. I positively do what others claim to do."

The very secrets of the dead revealed.

And every warning, advice and information laid bare before you. Your present life and entire future told.

Poultry, Birds, Dogs, Etc.

FOR SALE—
If eggs reach 70c a dozen this fall and winter, as some predict, and you are one of the [illegible] who [illegible] off his stock [illegible], you will not get any of this big egg money. Nor will you if you have hens and let them take all the fall to molt, and come out of it all run down.

EGG-MORE

is just what they need, mixed with good grains, or with bran. It is a highly nitrogenous, concentrated poultry food, very rich in protein, to keep the poultry in good health, maintain a strong and vigorous system, make the hen molt early, feather out quickly, and then lay lots of eggs. Many so-called "poultry foods" and "egg makers" are nothing but stimulants and not advisable to be fed regularly.

EGG-MORE

is not a strong tonic and stimulant, but contains just enough condiments to give the food relish and keep the fowl in fine fettle. Send for folder with a few out of many high testimonials. Or, better still, just try a package for yourself and be convinced. 4-lb. package, 35c; 12½-lb. sack, $1; 25-lb. sack, $1.90. It is not only the best, but the cheapest concentrated poultry food on the market today. For sale by many dealers. If not by yours, send the price and we will deliver a sack, freight prepaid. CANDIDATE STUMBLES INTO PRAYER MEETING.

Congregation at Mining Town Freely Accords Republican Nominee for Delegate to Congress Opportunity to Press His Claims for Votes. Dam Employees Burned.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Sept. 11.—Last night, at a meeting on the city plaza, was opened the campaign of Ralph H. Cameron, Republican nominee for the office of Delegate to Congress. Besides a short talk by the nominee, there were addresses by Territorial Chairman Hoval A. Smith of Bisbee, Atty.-Gen. Clark of Prescott, R. E. Morrison of Prescott and J. E. Morrison of Bisbee. J. C. Adams presided. Mr. Cameron had just returned from a quiet canvass of Cochise county, the Democratic stronghold of Arizona, where he is confident he will secure a plurality over his opponent, Marcus A. Smith. From Douglas has come one story of his energy in campaigning; how, looking for votes in the neighborhood of the smelter, he stumbled into a prayer meeting, where he asked and was freely accorded a division of time with the preacher in charge.

Territorial Auditor Sims Ely, selected as secretary of the Republican Territorial Committee, has been compelled by pressure of official duties, to decline the appointment. He has been succeeded by George U. Young of Yavapai county, who has established headquarters here.

PECULIAR EXPLOSION.

A few days ago Chief Electrician A. H. Demrick and three other reclamation service employés at Roosevelt were burned and bruised by an explosion of gas, found in a water chamber of a great turbine wheel, which was being examined for adjustment. The explosion followed the lowering of a lighted candle into the chamber. As warm springs and petroleum indications both have been found in the vicinity, there has been much speculation concerning the nature of the gas that proved so inflammable. It has been announced, after investigation, that the gas came from the decomposition of vegetable matter brought down by the water.

IMMENSE BOAT.

The machinery of the immense Arizona canal dredger has been transferred to a new hull, improvements made costing about $25,000. The immense boat will be launched next Sunday and during the winter will be started on the task of enlargement of the canal to 100,000 inches capacity from the Granite Reef diversion dam down to about the Arizona falls at Ingleside, a distance of twenty miles.

CLOSED TO NAVIGATION.

The great Colorado River has been closed to navigation above Yuma. This week the Reclamation Service closed the channel by means of piling, the first line of work in the establishment of the Laguna diversion dam. Captain Mellon, one of the first pilots to ply on the river, had the melancholy pleasure of handling the last craft through the narrowing channel at the dam, bringing down to Yuma the little steamer Cochan. Thirty years ago a considerable fleet of stern-wheel steamers was required to handle the freight and passenger business out of Yuma, to the mining camps of the upper river, bringing down deckloads of ore for shipment on deep-water vessels to the smelter at San Francisco, but their usefulness declined with the advent of the railroads.

APPLICATIONS REJECTED.

Frederick Jones of Los Angeles, examiner for the Naturalization Bureau, is working through Arizona in the investigation of applications for citizenship. Several applications were rejected at Prescott for lack of qualifications for citizenship and one for perjury. The last was that of a saloon-keeper in a mining camp, who had been voting for years, his name having appeared on several county registers of voters. An interesting case developed here, also, in the rejection of the wife of a British subject as a witness in his behalf. The examiner held that the woman had forfeited her American citizenship by marrying an alien and could therefore not be a competent witness.

SKULL FRACTURED.

J. J. Davis was seriously injured at the Cunningham Pass mine, seventeen miles from Wenden, by the slipping upon him of a 1000-pound tank of distillate, his skull being fractured above the left eye. He was brought to Phoenix by special train for surgical attendance and it is believed that his life will be saved.

Claude Stewart thrown from a horse at the Mognett ranch a couple of weeks ago, died yesterday.

James Cashion, superintendent for the railroad contracting firm of Grant Brothers of Los Angeles, has planted to alfalfa a full section of land lying fourteen miles west of Phoenix and will stock it for the sole industry of mule raising. Of late years he has experienced great difficulty in securing a supply of mules for railroad work, though the price has been constantly advancing.

EDUCATIONAL NOTION.

TEACH CHILDREN TO GROW LIKE FLOWERS.

Edwin Collins Says no Child Should be Asked to Undertake Formal Lessons Until It Is Nine or Ten Years of Age but Should Assimilate.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Aug. 15.—There is a man in London who has beaten the London County Council Educational Committee after a fight lasting several years. He has compelled the courts to admit that his system of education, which authorities say is all wrong, is all right, and in a few weeks he is going to open a high-class school within thirty miles of London where his theories will be put into practice. The man is Edwin Collins, a university man, a writer and a teacher who does not believe in teaching at all—that is, in the ordinary acceptation of the term "teaching." His motto is that "children should be taught little and should learn much." His theory and practice are that no child should be asked to undertake formal lessons until it is nine or ten years old and that until it reaches that age it should be allowed to run practically w [illegible] and assimilate knowledge as a flower gathers its sweetness from the sunshine.

Children Who Grow Like Flowers.

Edwin Collins, a London teacher, has just won his long fight with the English educational authorities over his unique methods of teaching. He believes children should absorb knowledge as the flowers gather sweetness, and will found school to put his theories into wider practice.

Mr. Collins has been at war with the education authorities over the education of his own eight children. The law of England says that every child must go to school. If a child does not attend the public schools the school attendance officer calls to find out why, and if the parent can satisfy him that the child is being efficiently educated elsewhere all is well. If not the parent is summoned to appear before the magistrate and if he cannot satisfy the magistrate he is fined and if the offense continues he is fined again as often as the attendance officer finds time to summon him.

Fourteen-Year-Old Prodigy.

Ivan Julius Collins, a product of his father's revolutionary methods of teaching, who has astonished the London authorities by his accomplishments.

Collins has been fined many times for not sending his four elder children to school. The British magistrate is impatient of new ideas and when he learned that Mr. Collins's idea of education was to allow his children to grow up as plants and flowers grow, he became impatient and refused to listen to more. Collins insisted, however, and he has just succeeded in forcing the unwilling admission from the magistrate that his children were far in advance of the public school children of the same age. The sequel to this decision is the opening of Collins's school where he will teach other children on the same lines that he has taught his own.

Collins is a graduate of the University of London, of the Sorbonne in Paris, and of Heidelberg University in Germany. He has been a tutor in high-class educational institutions for years, and he has prepared students for university examinations. From this it will be seen that he has no prejudice against the ordinary learning. All that he contends is that the average child is stunted and weakened by being compelled to tax its brain and body by beginning its formal education too early.

"I do not believe in beginning to learn the formal things too early," said Mr. Collins to me today. "Children should be encouraged to ask questions, to learn rather than to be taught. My eldest boy could not read a line until he was 9 years old. Then he learned the alphabet in a week and he learned it without any difficulty. He just asked his mother or me what the letters were, and in a week he was reading for his own pleasure. Before that, of course, we had read to him poetry, Shakespeare's plays and many other things which were suitable to his understanding. Since then he has read all of Shakespeare, several of the English poets and a great deal of the finest English literature.

This boy, Ivan Julius Collins, was examined by the magistrate, and it was his proficiency that forced the London magistrate to decide in favor of Collins's system. He is now 14 years old and his upbringing is evident both in his physical and mental equipment. He is as tall and sturdy as an ordinary English lad of 17, and he can converse intelligently on most subjects in a way that would do credit to many grown men. He has written articles on the current political and educational problems which have been accepted on their merits by leading English newspapers and magazines, and he has also written verses which display considerable merit.

Collins explained to me that he had been asked to open a school in the country by a number of persons who wished him to undertake the education of their children, and he will start with enough pupils to insure the financial success of the undertaking.

"We will have children from 5 to 15 years old," he said, "and practically all our teaching will be done out of doors and by the peripatetic method. No class will have more than ten children, for no teacher can give individual attention to more. We will have our classes in the gardens and fields which suround the fine old country house that I have taken and we will adopt the kindergarten method as much as possible. I do not mean by this the formal kindergarten method which would shock Froebel almost as much as the old system did, but we will adapt his principles to our surroundings. Our class gardens and fields will be well supplied with large blackboards at which the teacher can stop in his walk and illustrate his talk.

"The children will be encouraged to ask questions. I want to encourage the natural development of ideas. For instance, if we are having a history lesson and some one suggests a geographical question growing naturally out of the history, there is no reason why we should drop the history and follow that line of thought. Geography may lead us into mathematics and so on. The reason for this is that the children should realize the essential relation of all branches of knowledge to real life. In the old-fashioned school each subject is taught by rote and the children seldom realize that one has any relation to another.

"For the same reason I have always taught my children both arithmetic and geometry by means of matches or little sticks. They learn by laying two sticks beside two other sticks that two and two make four and that simple addition and multiplication have some reference to real things. The geometrical forms and their relation to realities can be taught in the same way. After they have mastered the principles in this way the formal learning comes easily to them. It is simply teaching them to express in words what they already fully understand.

"The religious teaching in my school will be very broad. I believe in giving each child the essentials of religion and letting the parents themselves fill in the details of whatever creed they believe in. My principal assistant will be a clergyman in holy orders, but I will not object to Nonconformist or Roman Catholic clergymen visiting the children of their faith under my charge."

Jailed for Stealing Kiss.

"What would you do to a fellow who tried to steal a kiss?" good naturedly inquired Thomas Bowler of Miss Jane Shellhart, a clerk in a Stephens county (Ill.) store.

She warned him not to attempt such a thing, but he ignored her threat and kissed her squarely in the mouth.

"I'm from Missouri," he exclaimed after her answer.

Miss Shellhard called a policeman and had "the man from Missouri" arrested, and appeared against him in court. He was given a light jail sentence, but declares the experience was well worth it.

Is Undoubtedly Right.

Anarchy is a mark of disease in the view of a Memphis physician. He finds anarchistic ideas conclusive evidence of insanity, and would commit all anarchists as dangerous lunatics, thus making them harmless.

HOROSCOPE.

Sunday, September 13, 1908.

BY COZETTE.

Power lieth on hands that heal.
Vigor the mind of man shall feel.

Mars enters the sign of Leo on this 257th day. The sun is in parallel declension with Mercury and Mars is in trine with Uranus. Jupiter is in benefic aspect with the moon.

A day of unusual vigor and promise is denoted by the astrological signs governing this period. Freshness of thought and charms of idea and purpose should come to all.

Plans may be expected to ripen and assume effective form today. A good day to consider the opening of new business places, or to plan transactions with bankers, merchants and manufacturers.

Surgeons and physicians, as well as chemists, dentists and oculists will be gifted with singular force for alleviation and healing in these twenty-four hours.

Take heed, however, against flying wheels on narrow roads. There is a menace against all forms of speed with horse or carriage.

Women with this birthdate will do ill if they succumb to the temptation to participate in a social intrigue against a rival during the twelvemonth.

Men with this birthdate must be on their guard against excessive eating and drinking. Their business will demand care. Those in employment will be entrusted with a minor affair which, if well conducted will yield them unexpected benefits.

The signs over children born today are for success. Girls will probably have many favors shown to them by relatives. Boys will do well in business for themselves and should be carefully trained as they will repay a thorough education.

WAR ON DISEASE.

UNCLE SAM TO HELP COUNTY.

QUARANTINE PROMISED ALONG INTERNATIONAL LINE.

Immigration Inspector Tells San Diego Supervisors He'll Place Guards and Then Get Instructions from Washington—Spreckels Returns to Build Highways.

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 12.—Federal authorities have been prevailed upon by the county to assist in preventing the spread of infectious diseases by establishing a quarantine along the Mexican border. This decision was reached at a conference held this morning between Immigration Inspector Engelcke, the District Attorney and the Supervisors.

Inspector Engelcke said he would establish temporary guards and require all who cross the line to give a clean bill of health and that, in the meantime, he would take up the matter with authorities at Washington.

Since last March, when smallpox broke out among the Indians and natives below the line, many of them have crossed over and scattered the disease in this county. The Supervisors have expended over $5000 in caring for these cases and trying to prevent the spread of the disease.

At present smallpox is practically wiped out of San Diego county.

NORMAL OPENS TOMORROW.

The regular fall term of the State Normal School begins Monday, under the direction of the Executive Committee of the institution, as President Samuel T. Black is traveling in Europe and is not expected to return until the latter part of October. The committee is composed of the registrar, director of the training school and preceptors. The health officials are believed o have no jurisdiction over the Normal as regards enforcing the vaccination law.

SUES TO COLLECT NOTE.

J. A. Parker of Los Angeles, has filed a suit in Superior Court to collect $5000 from Mrs. Alice Hopkins of this city. He states that, through Trainor, the defendant purchased shares of mining stock and not having sufficient cash, gave her note for $5000. Trainor disposed of this to Parker, it is alleged.

TO BUILD ROADS.

John D. Spreckels, after spending much of the summer in San Francisco, has returned. As a member of the City Boulevard Commission he will superintend the construction of a roadway to the cemetery; a road over the old dyke to National City; a road to Lemon Grove and one to Fort Stockton.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

At a meeting of the Woman's Mite Missionary Society of the African Methodist Episcopal conference yesterday, the following officers were elected: Mrs. J. H. Wilson, Riverside, president; Mrs. C. H. W. Nelson, San Diego, vice-president; Mrs. Annie Hughes, Oakland, first vice-president; Mrs. K. D. Tilima, Oakland, second vice-president; Mrs. N. D. James, Pasadena, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Edna Price, Oakland; Miss Mamie Skelton, Pasadena; Mrs. Flora Sharp, San Diego; Mrs. R. Pinkney, Bakersfield; Mrs. Sadie Harris, Los Angeles Executive Committee.

WILL CONTINUE SURVEY.

It is announced by Chief Engineer Kallright of the San Diego and Arizona Railroad Company, that before October 1 two additional engineering crews will be put in the field to work eastward from the mountains separating San Diego and Imperial counties, across the desert to Yuma. The preliminary survey of the All-American route has been completed to the mountains for some time, but it is stated by the engineer that the estimates for this route will be considerably higher than for the line surveyed across the Mexican border.

PEOPLE TO DECIDE.

At the session of the Supervisors today the petition of the Anti-Saloon League for the submission of the local-option question to the people in all precincts outside of the incorporated cities anr towns was granted.

FUNERAL AT DOWNEY.

Business Houses Close While Services Are Held for Much-Respected Woman.

DOWNEY, Sept. 12.—Mrs. Vena Glasscock, wife of L. V. Glasscock of Chatsworth, died in Los Angeles yesterday. The funeral services were held here today at the home of her sister, Miss Orlando Moores, the memorial sermon being preached by Rev. G. C. Harris, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Interment was in the Downey Cemetery. The deceased was well and favorably known in this vicinity, where she lived for many years. Her funeral was largely attended by old friends of the family and out of respect to her memory the business houses of the town closed during the time of the services.

WILL OPEN MONDAY.

The Los Nietos Valley Union High School and the Downey grammar school will open today. Most of the old teachers have been retained, which insures good schools and large attendance.

Miss Bessie Harris will leave tomorrow for Lordsburg, where she will teach school this fall and winter.

Miss Verda Henshaw entertained a number of her young friends with a lawn party. Invited guests were Zlypha Dismukes, Alice Williams, Dorothy Ardis, Maggie Buchser, Pauline Rives, Anna Eberle, Edith Price, June Hull, Lenora Jones, Howard Rives, Dan McKellar, Wayne Ball, Bobby Graham, Joe Marr, Ernest Beaver, Raymond Strine and Ardis McCullough.

Dr. and Mrs. F. D. Holman of Los Angeles visited in Downey last Sunday, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. Hall.

Mrs. D. P. Smart, Mrs. Georgia Darby and Mrs. Agnes Benbrook are enjoying an outing at Long Beach.

IN THE MOUNTAINS.

Mrs. D. L. Strine and son, Raymond, and Mrs. J. H. McCullough are spending a two weeks' vacation at Rincon.

Mrs. Frank Burke and Miss Jo Harris have returned from a week's trip to the San Bernardino mountains.

Miss Henrietta Casselman of Pasadena visited last week with Miss Marguerite Bartels of this place.

Misses Helen and Mary Louise Williams of Los Angeles visited with Miss Elma Smith.

A fishing and hunting party, composed of Dr. T. A. Lynch, A. L. Darby, J. W. McKellar, Frank Burke, J. A. Myers and T. A. Manning has left for Deep Creek, in the San Bernardino mountains, to be absent several days.

WILL GROW EUCALYPTI.

Sierra Madre Man to Go Into Business on Large Scale in Riverside County.

SIERRA MADRE, Sept. 12.—H. A. Day, who has resided here for the past few years, has purchased 160 acres at Alessandro Station, about ten miles from Riverside. He is going into the raising of eucalyptus trees on a large scale. A. H. Ferguson his manager, is to attend to the business end of the venture. Already arrangements have been made for the planting of 10,000 trees. Mr. Ferguson states that every season there will be an increase in the number of trees planted until all the available land is covered. J. A. Gilbert, contractor and builder, has drawn up the plans for a pretty little bungalow to be erected as a home, and arrangements have been made for the sinking of a well and other improvements to put the tree ranch on a business basis. These young men are well known and popular in this section. Mr. Day whose father and brother are members of the New York Stock Exchange came to this section some years ago for his health, he being obliged at the time to give up his collegiate course at Cornell. Mr. Ferguson has been his constant companion and business associate.

BEAUTIFUL CHAPEL.

Rev. Father Barth, who for thirty years, officiated in a diocese in Chicago, and whose health broke down, owing to his arduous duties, is building a handsome residence on Baldwin boulevard and Olive street. On the same site he has erected a beautiful little chapel for the accommodation of members of his church. A better site could not have been selected. It nestles close to the mountains on a high eminence, commanding a beautiful view of the valley, is within a few feet of the main boulevard, and surrounded by pretty cottages and residences.

WHITE-WINGED SQUAD.

Now that the beautiful boulevards and streets are nearing completion an additional expense looms up. The city does not own machinery for scraping, patching or keeping its roads in condition. That the roads must be maintained is beyond dispute. Whether the city will issue bonds for the purchase of appliances, or contract with some adjoining town to do the work has not been decided. A white-winged squad for some of the boulevards will probably be the outcome.

WHITTIER.

WHITTIER, Sept. 12.—Frank Oliver, the City Tax Collector, has started a campaign against dogs whose owners have not paid the required tax. He has sent out a notice and gives owners of canines until October to settle; after that date he states warrants will be issued for all who have not complied with the ordinance.

Members of the "Home" and "Cradle Roll" departments of the Methodist Sunday-school held a picnic in the city park today.

A large audience enjoyed the entertainment at I.O.O.F. Hall, last evening, given by the G.A.R. and W.R.C.

GLENDALE.

GLENDALE, Sept. 12.—A reception was tendered Rev. J. F. Moody, the new pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, last evening in the church parlors. The pastors and congregations of the other churches were invited and the church was filled to overflowing. Remarks were made by Rev. Mr. Burton of the Methodist Church, Rev. Mr. Ward, Presbyterian, and Rev. Mr. Fackenthall, rector of St. Mark's Episcopal Church. Words of welcome were spoken by Frederick H. Wilde in behalf of the church and by H. M. Overton in behalf of the Sunday-school.

Rev. Mr. Moody responded in a few well-chosen remarks. A solo was rendered by A. R. Taylor. Mr. and Mrs. Marple gave a humorous duet. The ladies of the congregation beautifully decorated the church.

What Has Paris Done?

Paris is suffering from a plague of curious flies, known as St. Marc's Bibions. They are not poisonous, but are very ugly, being over half an inch long, with enormous heads, and feelers like cockchafers. Nobody knows where they come from, and, curiously enough, the plague is confined to Paris, and has not reached the country.

RAILROAD RECORD.

TWO ISSUES ONE IN FACT.

Rio Grande to Take up Bonds of Western Pacific.

Three-Year Gold Notes to Pay for Seconds.

Money Will Complete Gould Coast Line.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] E. T. Jeffrey, president of the Western Pacific Railway Company, says that the $25,000,000 second mortgage bonds, the sale of which, it is announced in a San Francisco dispatch, has been authorized by the directors, constitute a part of a plan for providing funds with which to complete the Western Pacific, which has been in process of formation for some months.

According to the terms of this plan, the bonds have been sold to the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad Company, and the latter company purposes in due time to issue a block of its new refunding bonds which were authorized at a special meeting of the stockholders this week, to take up the Western Pacific seconds.

In accordance with the comprehensive refunding plan of the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad Company, which was ratified this week, the company will issue $15,000,000 three-year gold notes, as a temporary means of providing the Western Pacific with the money needed to complete the road.

Mr. Jeffrey says that the $25,000,000 second mortgage bonds do not represent an issue in addition to the one involved in the Denver and Rio Grande refunding plan as above outlined.

A Useful Collection.

"Yes, sah," said the old colonel, "the prohibition law sho' did go into effect down in Georgia, sah."

"That so, colonel?" responded the Chicago friend. "Well, I suppose you had a great number of wire corkscrews left over."

"I did that, sah. I had them by the bushel."

"And did you throw them away, colonel?"

"Oh, no; I stretched them out and made a wire fence and a lightning rod, sah."

Usually the Case.

"You are one of the city's most famous lawyers, are you not?"

"I believe so."

"And men of different pursuits are constantly coming to you for advice?"

"Constantly."

"Now, who profits by your advice?"

"I do."—[Houston Post.

Foreign Idea of America.

Little things frequently illustrate the English view of American geography very picturesquely. An Englishman had taken the Pacific express at Philadelphia, and feeling tired, had retired to his berth. Just before he fell asleep he happened to remember that he had forgotten something, so he put his head out between the curtains and called:

"Portah! Portah!"

The porter came. "What is it, sir?"

"Please wake me up when we get to San Francisco, you know."—[Harper's.

About four times a year he finds it necessary to attack this piece of vacant property vi et armis, otherwise with fork and shovel, and clean up the débris dumped there from a dozen yards, front and back. The last clean-up, which took place several days ago, took a total of four or five hours of downright hard work. Mixing a little brain with muscle, and using as accessories a box of matches and an armful of old paper, it was marvelous to see the detritus of three or four months absolutely removed with so little labor. If it were not used as a dumping ground for nearly a dozen lawns, twice a year, two hours at a time, would keep the lot in very presentable shape.

Careless Householder.

It is marvelous what an amount of dirt some people can survive. We are proud of our shade trees and ambitious to have more of them, and more beautiful ones. But shade trees will shed leaves, some of them at a rapid rate. The eucalyptus is a dirty tree. The beautiful pepper tree is dirtier. Some of the strong-growing acacias are as dirty as any. The accumulation of leaves from these trees is something not to be appreciated by those who do not know by experience. Some of the acacia trees are full of oil and, accumulating in the gutters, they rot, exuding a substance as black as ink, and the stench from this accumulation of rotting leaves is unendurable to most human nostrils. Yet the Fact and Comment man knows instances where women, seemingly of refinement and good taste, have lived in a house a year without ever flushing the gutter, sweeping up a leaf or moving a hand to protect the household from the malaria arising from this practical manure heap. Here we have an example the very contrary of that set by the good people along Carondelet street. Fifteen minutes a day on the part of a maid, of the head of the house or one of the children will suffice to keep the gutter in spick and span order and the house free from these malarial odors. It is marvelous that people of intelligence and refinement will endure the look or the smell of such accumulations of rubbish and filth. But they do, and thrive and grow fat upon it.

Statement of Operations in Forty-two Cities Shows Ten Per Cent. Decline.

Building operations in forty-two leading cities in the country last month reached a total of $49,370,402. For the same month a year ago the valuation was $55,298,595.

The previous months of the year all presented a loss except July, as follows: January, 44 per cent.; February, 33 per cent.; March, 37 per cent.; April, 22 per cent.; May, 19 per cent.; June, 15 per cent. July showed an increase of 3½ per cent.

In the report for August thirteen cities scored a gain from 1 to 224 per cent., and twenty-nine show a loss from 2 to 89 per cent. The principal gains are Chicago, 25 per cent.; Denver, 24; Indianapolis, 33; Louisville, 27; Syracuse, 25; Salt Lake City, 128; San Antonio, 224.

INTEREST IN BEAUMONT.

Weekly Sales Aggregate Large Sum, and Many Homeseekers Visit Growing Town.

Interest in lots and acreage at Beaumont is shown by sales for the week, reported at $3800, consisting of grape and apple lands in the foothill farm subdivision north of the town. Many colonists are visiting Beaumont and the sale on a single Thursday excursion of more than $3000 worth of land was largely to eastern homeseekers.

Building contracts aggregating over $5000 were let in the past week as follows: J. C. Scott, Fifth and Euclid avenue, business block; H. Hammel, residence; Miss Winter, Seventh and Chestnut streets, bungalow; Sumner Porter, Beaumont avenue, addition to residence. W. F. Killion has completed plans for a two-story cement business block for Fifth and Orange streets, and Summer & Thompson are designing a $3000 store and office building for the corner of Fifth and California streets.

W. J. Baker is constructing Beaumont's first apartment house on Sixth and Edgar avenue.

A plan is now being formulated for a school of instruction in horticulture and irrigation.

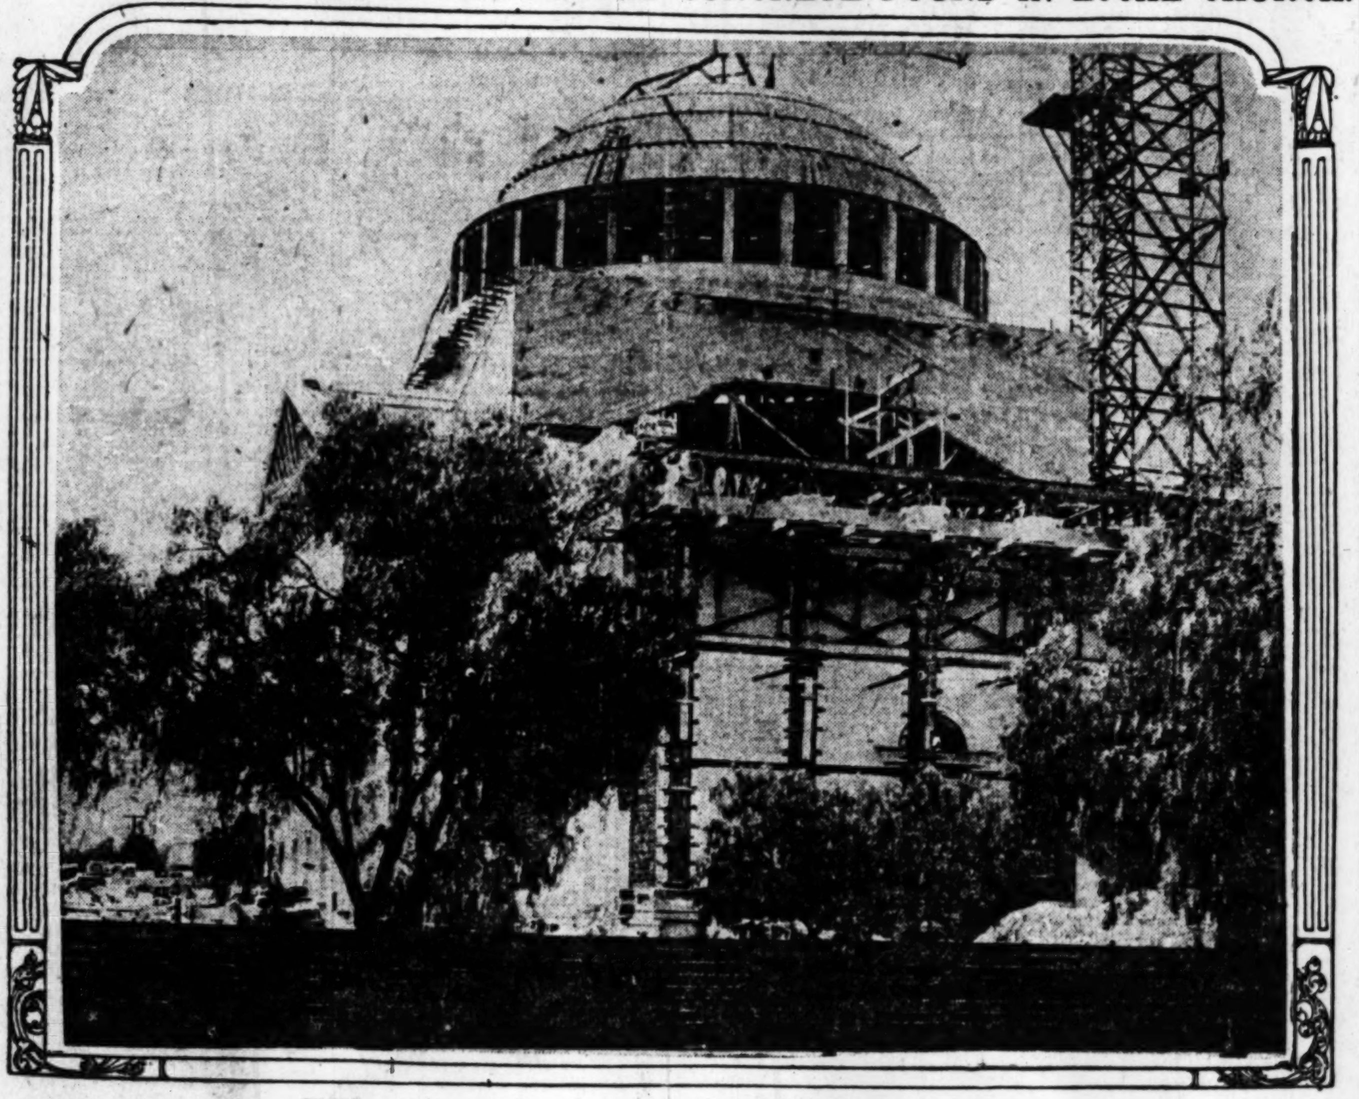
MARVELOUS WORK IN REINFORCED CONCRETE FOUND IN LOCAL CHURCH.



Edifice of Second Church of Christ, Scientist, West Adams street.

Work on the Second Church of Christ, Scientist, on West Adams street just east of Hoover street, is progressing as rapidly as the class of construction will permit. This building is literally a marvel in reinforced concrete embodying many daring pieces of architectural engineering in the plastic building material.

The main trusses of the dome, and the lower portion of the latter, as well as the concrete roof of the south and east wings, have been completed. The terra cotta of the east pediment also is in place, and from its appearance some idea of the magnificence of the finished structure may be conceived.

The building is unique in that it is the largest and most elaborate church west of Chicago. The richness of the terra cotta ornamentation on the exterior and the magnificent interior will make the church one of the finest buildings in the entire Western United States. In addition to its high rank among the beautiful and artistic buildings of the country, the church takes first place as a substantial fireproof structure. The floors, roof and dome are all of the enduring, rocklike reinforced concrete, with an additional fireproofing of metal lath, and plaster.

The concrete dome, and the trusses supporting the enormous weight, are the work of Albert C. Martin, who has been engineer for the architect, A. F. Rosenheim, in all the latter's work in the last four years. These trusses are the largest in the United States, while the dome takes rank as second to no other. The construction of these features of the building has been the most difficult part of the work, and has been watched by engineers and architects throughout the country.

These trusses are seventy feet long, there being four of them, one on each side of the building. They are supported at the ends by four reinforced concrete columns. The trusses support the dome, a monolithic mass of concrete and steel reinforcement seventy feet in diameter and weighing 1400 tons. The combined weight of the trusses and dome will be more than 1500 tons.

The feature of the construction is the method of reinforcement. This is unique in that the reinforcement consists of a lattice steel framework of sufficient strength to carry the weight of the web concrete, thus doing away with the necessity of heavy shoring and bracing usually required in concrete construction. This method of construction was used by Mr. Martin in building the so-called "Annex" to the Hamburger building at the southeast corner of Eighth and Hill streets. Much is expected of this system by engineers and architects. It has been patented by Mr. Martin in both this country and Europe.

The building when finished, will be very beautiful. It is of pure Roman Corinthian architecture, and will be faced with white glazed brick and terra cotta trimmings. The dome will reach 130 feet above the street level, being higher than the H. W. Hellman building, at Fourth and Spring streets. It stands in a lot 200x250 feet on the south side of West Adams. The building is 107x158 feet overall. It will cost close to $250,000.

An auditorium, 90x108 feet, with a seating capacity of 1200, arched by the great dome, 100 feet above the floor, is the feature of the interior. A magnificent pipe organ costing nearly $14,000 has been ordered, and will make the great dome reverberate with sound. The general plan is that of a Greek cross. The first floor is devoted to a large vestibule, with a great foyer beyond. To the rear is a Sunday-school room and offices for the officials and directors of the church. The interior will be finely finished in marble and mahogany.

Company Purchases Large Block of Land, and Will Erect Twelve Attractive Bungalows.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PASADENA, Sept. 12.—J. H. Woodworth & Son have completed negotiations for the purchase of the property on the north side of East Colorado street, between El Molino and Rudson avenues, immediately adjoining the residence recently owned by Dr. J. Tyler Parker. The lot has a frontage of 176 feet with a depth of 305 feet. The Frank G. Hogan Company is the purchaser and the consideration was about $30,000. The grantors are Messrs. Marsh and Laing.

The company proposes to build twelve bungalows of five, six and seven rooms each. Each bungalow will be on a lot improved with lawn, ornamental trees and shrubbery. A cemented driveway, twenty-five feet wide, will extend from the front to the rear, along which it is proposed to face the buildings. A cemented serviceway will extend along the rear of either row. An artistic court with a handsome fountain will be the center of the property.

SALE CONFIRMED.

European Syndicate Buys at Ninth and Grand for Investment—Property Improved.

Confirmation of the reported sale of the southwest corner of West Ninth street and Grand avenue by Isaac L. Lowman to a syndicate of European investors was received from the Arthur W. Kinney Company yesterday. L. J. Durnerin of that firm negotiated the transaction. F. J. Hess and several associates are the buyers, and the purchase was made as an investment.

The property has a frontage of 94 feet on Grand avenue and runs back about 160 feet on Ninth street to a twenty-foot alley. The improvements consist of a two-story pressed brick building. There are five stores on the ground floor and forty rooms on the second floor. The whole rents for about $400 a month.

SAN DIEGO NEWS.

NEW SYNDICATE WILL TAKE HOLD.

ADDITIONAL CAPITAL SECURED FOR GRANT HOTEL.

San Diego's Fine Hostelry to Be Rushed to Completion—Pasadena Capitalist Ready With Money—Announcement Has Resulted in Better Feeling in Realty Circles.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 12.—So often has been the announcement that construction work on the U. S. Grant Hotel building was to be resumed and pushed to completion and then not materialize, that residents in general and particularly real estate investors began to lose heart. However, it is now positive that outside capital has been induced to see where ample return can be made on the money, and a corporation to be known as Merritt, Grant & Co., with a capital of $2,000,000, has been formed to handle the matter. Workmen will be started on the large structure by the middle of this month, according to report. Interested in the new corporation is H. C. Merritt, a well-known capitalist of Pasadena; Harrison Albright of Los Angeles, who is the architect of the huge reinforced concrete structure, was in the city last week arranging business details relative to the resumption of active operations.

The brief announcements already made have stimulated the local realty market to quite an extent, especially among outside people who have come here for the purpose of looking over properties either for homes or for investment.

The Los Angeles Pressed Brick Company will establish a branch factory here. F. H. Robertson has been in the city the past week looking up a site. It is said he has been successful in locating deposits of clay suitable for the manufacture of glazed brick.

The F. A. Noyes, Jr., Construction Company of Los Angeles will establish a branch here, having filed articles of incorporation with the County Clerk with a capital of $25,000.

Contractor F. A. Atkinson of Los Angeles is shipping material here to begin work on the construction of a $25,000 school building on Brooklyn Heights.

Outsiders continue to be the principal investors in San Diego realty. Among the sales of the week was one of 100 feet on Robinson avenue and Grant streets by W. J. Chadwick to J. M. Phillips of Arkansas City, Kan. A five-room modern cottage occupies the lot and the purchaser will occupy it as a home. The consideration was $3500.

M. Schultheiss of Los Angeles has purchased two lots on Twenty-sixth street near the Golden Hill entrance to City Park for $1500. He will erect a residence and bring his family here. Mrs. Ida Richmond of Lansing, Mich., has bought of Mrs. ate Barstow an unimproved lot on Albatross between Pennsylvania and Robinson avenues for $1300. The purchasers will build a home on the site. Miss Lizzie Smith of Imperial has bought two lots from F. A. Hall on Normal Heights for $600, where she will build a home to be occupied as a summer residence. Mrs. Olive M. Woodward has bought of Mrs. Emma Brado two lots on Park boulevard in Normal Heights for $1300. She will erect several cottages for rental purposes.

Dr. J. Strang and Dr. E. C. Phelps of El Paso, who have been spending the summer here, have purchased two lots on Orange avenue, in Coronado, from D. G. Christian for $1200. They will immediately build an office building and remain here to practice.

Mrs. E. P. Behrens has bought from the Hakes Investment Company two lots on G street in Culverwell's addition for $2000. A modern flat building will occupy the site in the near future. W. T. Iams, through E. J. Swayne & Co., have sold to William C. Krone two lots on Julian avenue between Dewey and Evans for $1650. Plans are being drawn for a residence to be erected by the purchaser. Fintzelberg & Steinmetz have bought of V. E. Randall two lots on Julian avenue between Crosby and Dewey for $1200.

BEST BUSINESS OF YEAR.

Exceptionally Brisk Week Reported by Company—Sales of Building Lots in Southwest.

The Victor G. Kleinberger Company reports more business during the week just ended than during any week this summer. The sales were made in the West Jefferson and Seventh Avenue tract as follows:

To Frankie Beard, a lot on the west side of Eighth avenue, about 500 feet south of Jefferson, 40x140 feet to fifteen-foot alley, for $600; to Herman Thomas, two lots on the east side of Ninth avenue, adjoining the corner of Ninth avenue and Edison, each 40x140 feet to alley, for a consideration of $500 each; to Henry Vanverth, two lots on the west side of Ninth avenue, 400 feet south of Edison, for $450 each, they are 40x140 feet each; to Adelaide Brewer, a lot on the west side of Eighth avenue, midway between Jefferson and Edison, 40x140 feet to alley, for $600. Mrs. Brewer will improve with a modern cottage; to M. Ballard, a lot on the east side of Eighth avenue, about 140 feet south of Jefferson, 40x145 feet to fifteen-foot alley, for $500; to Herman Dandgral, a lot on the east side of Ninth avenue, about 140 feet south of Jefferson, 40x145 feet, for $500; to C. D. Anderson, the corner of Edison street and Ninth avenue, 44x145 feet, for a consideration of $700; to A. W. Bass, a lot 40x145 feet, midway between Jefferson and Edison on the east side of Ninth avenue, for $500; to E. D. Walters, a lot on the east side of Ninth avenue, south of Edison, 40x145 feet, to alley, for a consideration of $450;

The same agency also reports the sale for H. G. Cotton & Co. of a lot on the south side of Twenty-seventh street, 220 feet west of Fifth avenue, 40x140 feet to alley to Julia A. Bacon, for a consideration of $450; also for F. E. Andrews to Mrs. W. E. Brown, a modern five-room cottage at No. 3015 Eastside boulevard, on lot 50x150 feet, for $1700.

BRIDGE NEARLY COMPLETED.

Road Making and Bridging Arm of Alamitos Bay on Way to Naples, Progressing.

The bridge over the western arm of Alamitos Bay, near Naples, will be completed by the first of the week. The Mercereau Bridge and Construction Company is now rushing work on the 400-foot structure.

The section of road from the foot of Belmont Heights, to the bridge was completed last week. It consists of a ridge of earth 1000 feet long and forty feet wide at the top, and between five and seven feet above the surrounding low land. The last section, 500 feet long, will carry the road from the south end of the bridge, over two of the artificial canals, and into the heart of Naples. Work on this will be begun Monday.

The Mercereau Bridge and Construction Company is advertising for bids on the bridge over the San Gabriel River, between Naples and Bay City. This structure will be 200 feet long, and will be built of timber. The road, a section of the "good roads" boulevard, will extend across the low lands from Belmont Heights, through Naples, and on, along the coast after passing through Bay City.

NEW CORCORAN SUBDIVISION.

The Corcoran Farms and Water Company has just placed on the market 4000 acres of land in the Corcoran district, Tulare county, three and one-half miles from the town of Corcoran. The property is the famous old Creighton ranch, formerly well known as a stock ranch, for which the company recently paid $145,000.

The ranch has been divided into twenty and forty-acre tracts, which are well adapted to sugar beets or to alfalfa. Surface water is reached at a depth of from eight to twelve feet. The tract is one and one-half miles from the Santa Fé, and six miles from the Southern Pacific railroads. It will be placed on the market at from $20 an acre up, terms of payment extending over a period of four years. Kern & Bailey are the subdividers and managers of the property.

REPORTS THREE SALES.

The Jones & Ryder Land Company reports the sale for Harry Edson Dillon to Olive C. Pryer of the six-room modern cottage on lot 50x140 at No. 3480 Walton avenue. This property was bought for a home, for $3400.

This firm also reports the sale of the four-room bungalow on lot 25x165 feet to alley, at No. 3980 Vermont avenue. This property was bought by Olive C. Pryer as an investment. Former owner, Harry E. Dillon. The consideration was $2100. The same firm also reports the sale of the four-room bungalow on lot 25x165 feet to alley, at No. 3978 Vermont avenue, to Nellie McJannet. FOR SALE—
ON THE BEAUTIFUL ARROYO BLUFF
POSITIVELY MUST SELL IMMEDIATELY. MORE THAN A BARGAIN, A SLAUGHTER.
YOU CAN MAKE YOUR OWN PRICE.

I have a beautiful home property which has never been offered for less than $7000, because it is honestly worth that or more; on the basis of a very recent sale close by, the lot is worth $3850, and the improvements could not be duplicated for $4000. For urgent reasons I

MUST SELL IMMEDIATELY.
WILL POSITIVELY TAKE THE BEST
OFFER MADE BEFORE SEPT. 16.

$3800 of purchase price can remain on mortgage, due 1911, at 7 per cent., balance cash.

Improvements consist of two-story house of eight large rooms, besides bath and large upper hall; house was not built to sell, and is substantially constructed; is artistically simple in line and arrangement, and in excellent condition.

The lot (50x180) has very deep level front yard, with rare plants, trees and shrubbery, and roses in endless variety; the rear lot descends with easy walks and terraces to the arroyo bed, which at this point is a heavily wooded park, with a constant stream of running water at the rear of the lot. In the branches of an immense live oak reaching out over the arroyo bed a substantial pavilion is erected, and easily reached by paths, affording a rest place amid delightful natural surroundings, or is amply large for entertainment of guests.

Front and rear balconies afford view of charming scenery in every direction.

Artists and nature lovers have pronounced the Arroyo Seco section the most beautiful in California, and at no convenient point are more of the arroyo's charms visible and accessible than from this property.

All city conveniences with the charms of the country—most beautiful country at that, without leaving your own lot.

WILL POSITIVELY ACCEPT THE BEST
OFFER MADE BEFORE SEPT. 16,

and am likely to take the first offer made. Try me.

IF YOU OWN A LOT.

NOTICE TO INTENDING BUILDERS.

We will build you a cottage, bungalow or 2-story residence, if you own a lot, and take mortgage at 3 years at 7 per cent. The impression may prevail that extra cost is made for this accommodation, but such is not the fact. The contract price of the house will be the same as if paid for in cash. The large number and character of the houses built by our firm in the past 5 years will testify to the high class of workmanship in our buildings. If you are contemplating building call and inspect our plans and get our estimates. This method of building on such easy terms affords an unusual opportunity to improve a vacant lot and to make unproductive property valuable and remunerative, either for residence or investment purposes. FOR SALE—AT RIALTO!!

2000 ACRES! 2000 ACRES!

1300 of it as fine level sandy loam as you can find in the State. None better for oranges, alfalfa, grapes or any other fruits. The balance is water land in the foothills, just west of Lytle Creek. About 23 inches of water; 400 ft. of tunnels, $10,000 dam. A fine 3,000,000-gallon SOLID CEMENT reservoir, cost about $25,000, and, all in all, this is one of the finest propositions in the State, as the water development is only just begun and every inch at Rialto is worth from $1000 to $1200. Besides this, the water land is fine for eucalyptus and the wind brakes on the 1280 acres will give space for 100,000 eucalyptus trees and more.

The Santa Fe runs through the 1280—1 mile—and the oiled road from Los Angeles to San Bernardino splits the 1280 just half in two and is 1 mile in length. Moreover, the electric road from San Bernardino through Rialto to connect at North Ontario for Los Angeles will, I feel sure, go through this tract, being 2 miles of frontage on electric line.

Now, Mr. Moneyed Man, I mean biz! I'm going to raise about $200,000 in short order. I'm going to raise it the quickest way I can. I'll borrow it or if you'll take this "pride of my eye" before I get the loan, I'll sell it to you. Such opportunities don't come often in Southern California.

Think of it. 2000 acres! IN CIVILIZATION, don't forget that! Not in Mexico!

Price only $70 per acre! $140,000, ¼ cash, balance 3 years, 5 per cent.

100 ACRE ALFALFA RANCH.

This fine property is located just one block from the main railroad station in the town of Corona, (which has 2500 inhabitants and growing fast.) Good stand of alfalfa on same. Fine new water plant costing over $4000; splendid improvements, such as dwelling-house, barns, rakes, wagons, horses, etc. The place is divided into three fields of 60, 25 and 15 acres each, all join with exception of two of the city streets running through them. Water piped all over the ranch. This place was once divided into town lots, and will make an excellent proposition for a subdivision in the course of time. Has an income now of about $4000, which can be increased to about $6000. The owner lives in Los Angeles and wishes to trade for Los Angeles real estate, or he will sell any one of the three pieces separately with water rights. The property has a mortgage on one piece of $4500, due in three years. Any reasonable proposition will be considered. We will be glad to take the matter up with any one that is interested. GREAT CHANCE TO GET A GOOD PLACE, CHEAP.

Now if the stockholders of the Mohawk Herald want to hear good news of the company, come in and see me, no telephones answered, any cheap stock offered of this company is a good buy.

And a mighty good buy is stock of the Gold Palms Mining Mercantile and Transportation Co. at 5 cents per share, the management have purchased 5 more claims and put into the company, making 8 claims in all, so the company has plenty of fine mining property. The people who purchased stock in this company bought stock in three claims, but it shows what the management will do for the success of the company, they purchase five other claims and put them into the company, so stockholders who already purchased their stock in only three claims now have 8. The management will never rest until they make this company a thorough mining success. If you want a square deal, if you want good mining management, if you want the best stock buy, then buy Gold Palms, M. M. and T. Co.

New Service Annexes Towns to Los Angeles.

Seeking Oil in New Part of the Great Desert.

[STAFF CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

TEHACHEPI, Sept. 8.—This little town of 1000 people, perched right on the summit of the divide between Southern and Northern California, is one of the principal gainers by the operation of the Los Angeles-Fresno day train. Hitherto four Southern Pacific passenger trains went through at night, but there was none by day.

Now citizens can go to Los Angeles shortly after noon and get back about the same time, after spending two days in the city, or by traveling only one way under the old conditions, make the journey, transact a day's business and get back quickly. Angeleños can run up for one night, spend half of two days and have a day's journey both ways. Those in a hurry can leave the city in the morning, get here a little after noon, and go back on the night train that gets at 7 a.m. into Los Angeles. Thus no time is lost.

SHEEP AND FARMING.

Tehachepi is an important sheep-shipping station. It has a mixed population, many French, Spanish, Basques, Mexicans, native Spanish-Americans and Italians. The French and Spanish Basques become sheep owners or herders. The Italians, Spanish-Americans and Mexicans find employment in the lime kilns, as woodchoppers and on ranches.

In the mountain valleys there are many fine ranches, and more could be established. Lands capable of high cultivation remain unoccupied. Minerals abound, but are little exploited. There is little prospecting. Undoubtedly, once interested, Los Angeles money and Los Angeles people can find openings here. The day train will aid this by enabling prospective settlers or investors to come up and look around.

The cutting and shipping of cord wood is an important industry. Charcoal is also prepared in the surrounding mountains. A. Banducci and A. Notine, owners of a large wooded tract in Bear Trap Cañon, nine miles southwest of the town, have just negotiated the sale of their charcoal in Los Angeles. Transportation difficulties made them decide to do this instead of attempting to get wood or timber out.

THE LIME INDUSTRY.

Tehachepi is a center of the lime business of California. Three or four companies having their kilns at or near Tehachepi, maintain offices at Los Angeles and their product goes largely south for the new buildings. For some time the J. W. Jameson kilns have been closed because of depression in building, but Mr. Jameson, who has been here from Los Angeles, where he now lives most of the time, says he expects to start up ere long.

The lime deposits are appreciated by the Los Angeles Aqueduct Commission in establishing its main plant twelve miles south from Tehachepi, where it can get its material for cement. The raw material has been declared inexhaustible. Kilns are also located at Keene, north of here on the railroad.

SEEKING OIL ON DESERT.

George Esponda of Tehachepi says he has had a party of San Francisco men here whom he took out to Red Rock to look over some prospective oil lands, and that they have taken a bond on the San Antonio mine located in that region. The site is way out on the desert, northeast of Mojave, right on the Espee's new line. It is remote from any oil well and the ground has never been prospected for oil before.

NORTH OF TEHACHEPI.

Between Tehachepi and Bakersfield the stations are small and there is scarcely a house, but the land is rich, great numbers of cattle graze on the mountain sides, bodies of timber loom up, and one cannot but think that there should be a future in store for all this region. Every man who knows and loves the mountains knows how to wrest a living from them, whether by raising stock, by the plow, the woodman's ax or by the miner's pick, or by the charcoal burner's fire or the lime burner's kiln, should come here.

LIKE THE PYRENEES.

There are thousands of such people and many in California. In some respects the scenery and conditions resemble those of the Pyrenees of Northern Spain and Southern France. The writer crossed that mountain chain two years ago on the Spanish Northern Railroad going to Madrid and saw that there is much in common between the two regions, but, at least as far as seen from the car windows, the advantages appear to be with the California range.

The Basques, whose colonies are dotted all over here and in the southern San Joaquin Valley, hardy natives of the Spanish Pryenees, appear to recognize the similarity of the mountains and more of these people to settle the hills and valleys would do much for the prosperity of the great range.

When one rides over this route by day it is impossibye not to regret that for twenty-five years the Angeleño has been deprived by train schedules of a glimpse of such scenes. Indeed, one wonders that the railroad has not for years run this train and advertised its scenery for tourists. Thousands of Angeleños have gone back and forth, some of them scores of times, and have never seen the beauties of the Tehachepi. That sight has been reserved for those traveling between the East and San Francisco via the Santa Fé, but even that road has never exploited its attractions.

Of course, the reason has been that local travel was very light and business men want to go by night when the journey is long enough, and work by day. The colonist movement from Los Angeles north is changing all this. cessity and will do much to advance the country.

JOY IS UNCONFINED.

GIVEN FREEDOM OF BIG DRINK.

JONATHAN CLUB MEMBERS GAY AT OCEAN PARK.

Conspicuous Notices Afford Timely Warning to Devilfish and Other Octopi, Who Make for the Deep Blue Far Out of Reach of the Invaders from the City.

As the invited guests of A. R. Fraser, 300 members of the Jonathan Club went to Ocean Park yesterday afternoon in special cars of the Los Angeles-Pacific Railway. Tidewater was reached at 3 o'clock, and the round of festivities opened with a visit to the Ocean Park bath-house and a dip in the deep. Every restriction was removed and the guests were given the keys to the ocean and the freedom of the surf. Notices had been posted conspicuously on the bed of the sea, warning all devilfish and other octopi what they might expect, and as a direct result of this forewarning, the conquest of the big drink was accomplished without the shedding of blood. The aquatic disportments were followed by terpsichorean pastimes in the ocean front auditorium; but this was not accomplished until members of the party, disguised as South Sea Islanders, had made a parade of the strand, been photographed in their native costumes and entertained themselves and the onlooking throng with speech and song in the South Sea language.

On the heels of the dance, in which joy was unconfined, the visitors were entertained with a vaudeville programme. This feature of the gay festivities was pulled off in the auditorium. It was an exclusive affair, to which admittance was gained only through the password and secret sign of the Jonathans. One of the enticing numbers of this burlesque was a boxing match, in which the world's leading exponents of the manly art were impersonated by fight bugs, who had been imported for the occasion.

At 6 o'clock a Dutch luncheon was served at the Casino, and during this repast the guests were bidden welcome by their host. The response was made on behalf of the club members by Mayor A. C. Harper, who felicitated the guests and their entertainer upon the pleasure of the affair. The evening's early hours were devoted to the enjoyment of the breezes and pleasures of the beach. A Kangaroo court, in which United States Marshal Youngworth was the handcuffed prisoner, afforded considerable amusement throughout the length of a parade extending along the broad promenade from Pier avenue to the Venice pier.

PHILIPPINE FLYING FOXES.

Hard to Shoot Them, and Can Only Get Them by Breaking a Wing.

"I think the hardest thing to kill in the Philippines is a flying fox or fruit-eating bat. Those fruit-eating bats come flying over by the thousands from the Island of Bassalan to the Island of Mindanao just at sunset, and fly back between 4 and 5 in the morning.

"I went out hunting with two shipmates about twelve miles outside of Zamboanga one day, and about 3 o'clock in the afternoon the natives took us to some rice paddies, where, about 5 o'clock, the doves and rice hens were flying around so thick we sat in one place and kept on shooting till our shells were very near all gone," says a returned soldier from the Philippines.

"We had forty-five birds altogether. But we lost lots of rice hens in the tall grass along the edges of the rice paddies. We had about a box and a half of shells left altogether, so we thought we had better keep them, because the Moros were pretty bad in some places out here.

"Just as we were going to start back to the ship a Moro told one of the Filipinos about some big birds which roosted at night in the trees close by. As near as we could make out it was some kind of a wild turkey, so we concluded to try to get one.

"While we were sitting there drinking and waiting patiently for turkeys the Moro came running up and pointed into one of the big trees, and what did we see but a big fruit-eating bat sailing around the tree. My two partners were disgusted over the funny turkeys and wanted to start back, but I wanted to get a bat and see what it looked like.

"After wasting a box of shells I finally succeeded in breaking one's wing. When he came down he started to screech, or rather I don't know what kind of a noise you would call it, till we couldn't hear. I hit him on the head with the gun barrel about four times, and it didn't seem to feaze him. One of the Moros said he wanted him for chew eat, so I blew the bat's head off and gave it to him.

"These bats are about the size of a half-grown cat in body, and this one's wings spread from tip to tip about three feet. They have a head just like a fox, and their bodies are covered with fine fur, something like a muskrat's, but not as thick. They have two hind legs with heavy claws on them for hanging on trees, and they also have a hook on each joint on their wings, so they can hang either way.

"I examined this bat and found out it had no stomach. I wanted to find out what they lived on, but all I could find was water of the fruit. I think all they eat is fruit growing wild in the mountains.

"Their wings are like fine rubber and you can fill them full of holes and it won't feaze them. If you hit them bad in the body they will sail off and drop so far away that you won't be able to find them.

"The only way to get them is to break a wing, or go where they hang in the trees in the daytime and kill them with clubs. I never saw them hanging in the trees in the daytime, but soldiers told me they saw them in the mountains hanging on trees so thick that the branches were about to break under their weight.

"The fur bearers out here don't amount to much. The only thing I saw that might be of any use was a mountain cat and those flying foxes. The deer hides have only got coarse hair on them, and they haven't got a nice pelt like the deer in the States."

'Twas an Outrage.

One Fourth of July night in London, the Empire Music Hall advertised special attractions to American visitors. All over the auditorium the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes enfolded one another, and at the interludes were heard "Yankee Doodle" and "Hail Columbia," while a quartette sang "Down Upon the Suwanee River." Altogether it was an occasion to swell the heart of the exiled patriot. Then came the turn of the Human Encyclopedia, who advanced to the front of the stage and announced himself ready to answer, sight unseen, all questions the audience might propound. A volley of queries was fired at him, and the Encyclopedia breathlessly told the distance of the earth from Mars, the number of bones in the human skeleton, of square miles in the British Empire, and other equally important facts. There was a brief pause, in which an American stood up. "What great event took place July 4, 1776?" he propounded in a loud, glad voice.

The Human Encyclopedia glared at him. "The' hincident you speak of, sir, was a hinfamous houtrage."—[Everybody's Magazine.

Target Practice Under Sea.

The second submarine flotilla, consisting of the Octopus, Tarantula, Viper and Cuttlefish, under the command of Lieut. Charles E. Courtney, has been smashing target records from twenty to fifty feet under the sea in Gardiners Bay. The new periscopes have been used to excellent advantage by the helmsmen, and the new additions, it is said, have advanced the value of submarines largely.

Under the sea the submarines have been firing with Whitehead torpedoes at from 1000 to 1500 yards distance against targets made of woven nets about sixty-five feet long. The submarines were run at full speed. When the submarines become attached to Commander Marsh's training squadron more extensive drills, with both night and day attacks, will be held.—[Newport Dispatch to New York Times.

READY TO BID.

GOOD ROADS BONDS LOOK GOOD TO HIM.

A. W. BALLARD, representative of E. H. Rollins & Sons, bankers, of San Francisco, arrived yesterday at the Van Nuys for the special purpose of watching the action taken regarding the disposition of the $3,500,000 good roads bond issue already sold in a secret way by Supervisors Charles E. Patterson, Peter J. Wilson and S. T. Eldridge.

"The entire transaction, as seen from a distance," declared Mr. Ballard, "seemed peculiar. This is particularly true when one takes into consideration the fact that all Los Angeles city or county bonds, no matter how small the issue may have been, were previously publicly advertised, and in this instance, when the amount ran into millions, disposed of by private sale."

"Was the price paid for them by the local firms a sufficiently large one?" was asked.

"To answer that would be more or less a difficult matter, since I am not fully informed as to the entire happenings of the deal. However, the price paid was a trifle lower than that which we have just given for a similar issue of bonds offered by San Francisco, the amount of which totaled $3,280,000, and for which we paid $3,514,520. The average maturity on these bonds is twenty-two and a half years, and the rate of interest we figured on was 4.46 per cent. We were, therefore, paying a premium of $7.15 on every $100, which is considerably more than was paid here when the time for the maturity of the bonds here is nearly forty years."

"Are you here to make an offer on the issue if they are placed in a legitimate manner?"

"That would go without saying. Bonds as valuable as those which are issued by Los Angeles county are sought after by all the largest bond buyers in the country. They rank the safest and most profitable county or municipal bonds in the United States. Naturally, we are always taking care of opportunities of this sort, and would bid on them if they were again offered. How much more we should pay than the two local firms which obtained the issue in private sale I could not state."

The San Francisco issues to which he referred were fire protection bonds to the amount of $1,000,000, comprising twenty-five bonds of each year's maturity from 1916 to 1955, inclusive; sewer bonds to the amount of $800,000, comprising twenty bonds with a maturity from 1915 to 1954; school bonds to the amount of $1,200,000, comprising forty-eight bonds of each year's maturity from 1914 to 1938 and hospital bonds to the amount of $280,000, comprising fourteen bonds with a maturity from 1913 to 1932, inclusive. All of these bonds were dated July 1, 1908, and of the denomination of $1000 each, bearing interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually.

WORKER'S PAGE.

Garden Worth While.

THE BACK YARD OF A CITY LOT MADE A THING OF BEAUTY AND PROFIT.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

"COME into the garden, Maud," all summer we have hospitably sung to our callers, whose souls have been gladdened by the esthetic beauty of our beloved flowers and growing plants.

Now the harvest days have come and our hearts rejoice to send our neighbors good-will offerings of the practical fruits of soil, water and a little judicious labor.

Does a garden in the city pay? Well, rather. If one values at all health attained and retained by work, or if you like better the sound of the word, exercise in the open air; the fresh sweet crispness of lettuce, radishes and cucumbers just gathered; string beans that have never wilted, but come tender and succulent to the boiling water; in fact, an extra flavor and goodness in everything that can be grown in the soil.

Here is what we have grown in a space about fifty feet square, the rear of a 50x140-foot lot located in the southwestern, close in precincts of Los Angeles. In passing, it is well to note our water bill is $1.40 per month, fixed rate.

In the first place, twenty months ago our lot was a weed-grown devastation, two feet below the street grade and a lamentable eyesore to the neighbors who used it, however, as a dumping ground. About two-thirds of the lot we filled with good black soil. This was terraced down to the sunken garden, where the deciduous trees were planted a year ago last March. The original soil in our lot is a strong, stiff loam. The addition of a few inches of sand and two small loads of unrotted manure—the latter costs nothing—comprised the improving of the soil of our sunken garden.

Then came the planting of the trees in which the entire family joyfully participated. Four peach trees of standard varieties, three plums, one each of quince, apricot, fig, loquat, apple and pear, are flourishing amazingly. They were properly pruned last winter, and, of course, will, after this winter's cutting back, reward us well next summer. One of the peach trees is now ten feet high and of proportionate spread.

The back fence is of wire, and in its meshes are hanging a truly artistic tangle of ripe hubbard squashes, blushing tomatoes and six flourishing muscat grape vines bearing fruit. Along the west fence, also of wire, are growing the Crimson Winter rhubarb, more tomatoes, clumps of our California poppies, and two hills of cucumbers; from the latter, by the way, we have supplied our family and several neighbors all summer. All these are growing in a bed about six by thirty feet. In this strip also the three plum trees are brooding the buds that will give us sweet, luscious fruit next year. On the other side of the path is a bed about four by twenty feet, where our first planting of lima beans, which has given us many a nourshing dish, is still blossoming. A guest at luncheon recently remarked the goodness of our young sweet limas. "Why, I didn't know they could be so good."

A much larger bed of these beans now "coming in," planted in the sandy loam at the side of the house, will supply us and two or three other families who are clamoring for them. Remember, Mr. Economist, lima beans of the dusty, moldy kind John usually purveys, seldom sell for less than five cents per pound in the pod!

Two rows of Kentucky Wonder beans, planted in succession during the summer, gave an abundance of the finest string beans in the world to five families. One picking was so large that after sending them freely to the neighbors, a vegetable man was importuned to purchase the remainder at two cents per pound. There were about eighty pounds picked that week from our vines. Their space is now being prepared for peas, the Yorkshire Hero, which from Christmas until June, and after, supplies the family with the most delicious dish, to many palates, any garden affords.

What can we say of our great Ponderosa tomatoes! Our little daughter declares many of them are "two-pounderosas" and they surely are. In order to have early tomatoes we plant half a dozen Earlianas at the same time as the Ponderosas. This gives us ripe tomatoes from the first of July. But after the Ponderosa begin to ripen, which is not until the first of August, we eat no others (but the neighbors still enjoy the Earlianas.) We sell several boxes of tomatoes each summer, besides many a ten cents' worth, and we give away as many more.

Perhaps the most remarkable feat our growing things have performed a summer is the accomplishment of our muskmelon bed. From five hills planted only two feet apart, shamefully crowded any gardener would say, we have gathered sixty melons in six weeks—just all we could use, and not a puny one in the lot.

It is worth while to have a melon patch for at least one season, just to learn how to select a ripe canteloupe when you are obliged to buy. You know how often you have to purchase three to get one fit to eat. When you are carefully watching your own precious "patch" you soon learn just how much of a gentle tug is required to detach a truly ripe delicious melon, and just how springy it should feel and how fragrant it should smell at the blossom end.

Harvest time has come for the Hubbard squashes. We shall put away forty of these great solid fellows in the cellar for our winter's delectation. We all agree on the merits of a sound, sweet baked squash and what we cannot eat baked, we eat in pies—baked.

I have said nothing of the beets and carrots, only suggested radishes and lettuce, but all of these we grow and use as taste calls for.

The value of the happy hours in early morning or on cloudy days spent digging and hoeing can surely not be estimated. Here in our garden many a fit of blues, or in other words, a bilious spell, has been worked off.

Although surely not according to the Hoyle of gardening, our vegetable yard is greatly beautified, we think, by a liberal sprinkling of flowers. Here and there we have "stuck in" a geranium slip; California does the rest.

At the feet of a lofty clump of white and pink hollyhocks in the early summer grew and blossomed an exquisite group of Canterbury Bells. Starry-eyed verbenias disputed ground with radishes we had grown tired of. Arctotis, too little known, of exquisite pastel shades, glorified the very center of our garden and afforded scores of bunches of its soul-satisfying flower throughout the year, to bless and brighten many homes.

I had almost forgotten to tell about the casabas. A year ago last spring we planted seeds of these prized melons in the same bed with—just muskmelons. One of the casabas proved so excellent, its flavor resembling lemon ice cream—simply ambrosial—that we saved its seed. From this seed we have this year a hybrid muskmelon of sweet, fine white flesh with a salmon pink flush at the heart. This melon matured and ripened as early as the cantaloupes and we assuredly will carefully keep its seed pure from further mixture if possible, until we have proven we have something worth while.

But after all, do you not think it is all worth while? We do.

ANNA CHAMPLIN WADSWORTH.

Industrial Independence

UNIONITES SEEK TO DESTROY THE BUSINESS OF A MAN WHO REFUSES TO PAY TRIBUTE.

A STARTLING story comes from Chicago regarding the destructive disposition of unionites. Because a firm manufacturing plumbing supplies would not pay "tribute" an attempt was made to destroy its business. The firm is the Shilvock Plumbing Supply Company, and the story of the outrage is told by W. H. Shilvock, formerly head of the concern, but now retired in favor of his son. Business Agents Garvin and Simon O'Donnell of the Plumbers' Union are the men who attempted to exact the tribute. The firm had previously been pointedly asked by a union official to pay "a certain sum of money" for which the agent would "jab the other plumbing supply houses and compel plumbing contractors to use the Shilvock company's products."

The threatened manufacturer refused point blank to accede to the demands, and from that time the persecution of the concern was increased in violence by the labor men. Mr. Shilvock gave the names of a large number of plumbing contractors against whom strikes have been called because they used goods made by the Shilvock company.

Among the contractors is Paul Eichenbaum, Armitage and Kedzie avenues. The latter recently bought fittings from the Shilvock company for the first time in six months, having been deterred previously by threats of the labor leaders.

A few days after Eichenbaum had bought the fittings a strike was called on his building. Business agents drove around to the various "jobs" in an automobile and called the men out on strike.

When the agents reached a building under construction where Shilvock fittings were being used they stopped and called out to the plumbers:

"Come down out of that building. Don't you know those fittings are from the Shilvock company and not to be touched?"

These threats were successful in every instance, the men leaving their work at the word of command of the business agents.

Another contractor tied up by strike was A. J. Fisher, Lincoln and Byron streets. When Shilvock inquired why Fisher could not use his fittings, Fisher said:

"Shilvock, I am sorry for you, but I can't use your fittings. It's a shame; it's a crime. Why don't you prosecute those fellows. I'll be a witness in court for you."

"I am getting my evidence together with a view to criminal prosecution. It is strange that a young man can't operate in this city without paying tribute to labor leaders."

Coal Strike Lost.

The strike of miners in the Birmingham district of Alabama has resulted disastrously for the miners. During its continuance there was the usual accompaniment of violence, even rifle shots being fired at cars believed to contain non-union men who were being brought into the district to take the places of the strikers. Murder thus done would be murder just the same as though the individual man were personally shot unawares. Much other mob violence was indulged in, but when the Governor took a hand in the affair the strikers knew that the end had come. He ordered that the miners no longer be allowed to live in tent camps in the vicinity of the mines, and that no more public meetings should be held by the strikers. All the mines in the Birmingham district are now on a non-union basis, and the strikers who are known to have committed acts of lawlessness must pay for their lawlessness by seeking work elsewhere.

Chester Strikers Violent.

The strike of street railroad employés at Chester, Pa., has been dragging on for some months, but were it not for an occasional act of violence—an attempt to do murder or something else of a destructive character—the public would hardly know a strike were still in progress. As at San Francisco the strikers have lost their battle, but some of the radical ones refuse to admit it. The peace and quietness that had prevailed for some time was rudely disturbed a few nights since by an attempt to blow up a car on its last trip for the night. Fortunately there were only two women passengers on the car when the explosion occurred. The front end of the car was badly shattered, and though the two women escaped serious injuries they were badly shaken up and made ill by the shock. Strikes—destruction of property—murders, appears to be the result of this union way of securing recognition of demands upon employers.

Fight for Independence in Washington.

The building trades in Washington have been making a long and gallant contest for the open shop, with the result that the strictly union job has become the exception, instead of the rule. The investor is getting much more labor for the same wages than before the open shop was brought about; no restrictions are placed on what a man shall do in eight hours; there are no strikes on "open shop" jobs; the cost of building has been materially lessened; the unions have been successfully thwarted in their attempt to enforce the universal working card; the freedom and right of the employer to administer his own business has been definitely established; and the public is deriving the momentary benefits of the commercial struggle.

With this enumeration of the results that have been accomplished the members of the Employers' Association take the public into their confidence with the information that $15,000 has been expended in the accomplishment of this condition, with an expenditure of time and actual losses of more than three times this amount. An important truth is also stated in the address issued to the public—that the resultant benefits gained can only be maintained through the moral support and hearty coöperation of the public-spirited men of the city. Otherwise the movement will have been in vain, and the movement will retrograde to the old conditions, viz., domination by the unions and dictation by the walking delegates.

The contest has been an especially strenuous one because of the fact that the unions had been allowed to dictate for a long period; in fact, they had been in practically complete control of all building operations with the result that owners of property were finding building too expensive to be undertaken. There's only one moral to such a contest, and that is to not allow the open shop to be driven out at the start. Keep the open shop as the bulwark of freedom.

Needed Trust Legislation.

In the midst of the agitation anent the doings of our various trusts, it ought to be just as well to consider for a moment some actions indulged in by certain portions of our ever noisy labor trust, which, it may be here remarked, is openly acknowledged a "Trust" by its great legal apologist and defender, Mr. Clarence Darrow.

The actions mentioned below need no comment; they speak volumes for themselves, and it is only regrettable that general press publicity has not been given them.

On the first Sunday of last March, the day before the Supreme Court of the United States handed down its decision that the different States of the country possessed authority to pass laws prohibiting the use of the national flag for advertising purposes, a large meeting of union labor followers in San Francisco hissed the American flag and forced a German singing society to pull down the flag which it bore aloft. True it is that some of the cooler and wiser heads had the banner restored, but the act had been done and the animus shown. Yet neither the local authorities nor the government itself has taken any notice, or attempted to hold those guilty at all responsible.

It is certainly a disrespectful, even an insulting, thing when our flag is used for advertising purposes but at least no such intentional dishonor exists as was exhibited by this part of the labor trust.

Almost on the same day a mass meeting of the Montana miners passed resolutions denouncing the judges and courts of the country, because contrary to their desires, a decision had been rendered which necessitated some prominent members of their union standing trial for an atrocious murder with which much evidence connected them.

Finally arrived the strike of the drivers of city wagons in New York, during which forcible attempts to prevent others from laboring to remove the city refuse, brought the health of citizens in certain parts of that city unto grave danger.

For unwarranted disregard of the rights of others and thoroughgoing oppression, the labor trust takes the lead.

Nor have any of its acts ever led to the cheapening to the people of a single commodity. In this light, its comparative oppressiveness with that imputed to productive combinations, and for which alleged policies the latter are denounced, warrants some consideration by the daily press of the country.—[The Open Shop.

FRIENDS OF GREAT MEN.

Peculiar Ties That Draw Them Together and Make Them Chummy.

[Exchange:] Senator Henry Cabot Lodge still retains his position as the closest and most valued friend whom the present Executive of the United States ever had, still has or will have, so say those who know. The President may boom Taft for President. He may hobnob with Gifford Pinchot, Chief of the Forestry Bureau, and take long walks with Beekman Winthrop, make chums of the tennis cabinet, including M. Jusserand, his excellency from the French Republic, but the fact remains that not one of those worthy gentlemen ever has moved the serene and scholarly solon from Bay Back one quarter of an inch from the Great Chief. Senator Lodge has the last word with the President always. Big men from the four quarters of the globe may talk themselves blind, but when Senator Lodge announces an opinion that is the way the President will act. Every two weeks, usually on Friday evenings, when the President is in Washington, the Roosevelts go to the Lodge mansion for dinner. Every two weeks the Lodges dine family fashion at the White House. Many times a week the Senator strolls in the back way and has a chat and very often the pedestrian tours of the President begin or end in the vicinity of Massachusetts avenue and Eighteenth street, where the Washington home of the Lodges is situated.

William Howard Taft's most intimate friend is Gen. Clarence Edwards, sometime Chief of the Insular Affairs Bureau and close to Taft since his first trial at making laws for the Filipinos. Col. Edwards, as he was then, managed his end, which was to smooth away the difficulties about the friars' land, with such consummate skill that Judge Taft began by admiring and trusting him and has ended by making him his daily comrade and his confidant about almost everything.

Nearly all the great men of Washington are chummy with their private secretaries. The sole exception to this rule is the Secretary of State, Elihu Root. Like the great monarchy, Britain, which he admires so vastly, Mr. Root's position in Washington, New York and elsewhere is one of splendid isolation. Once on a time he was very intimate with the President, and the two startled a Cabinet meeting by greeting each as Theodore and Elihu. But not now. He greets Mr. Roosevelt gravely as he would the President of Mexico if that dignity dropped in to talk over some border trouble. Mr. Root inherited his private secretary, Mr. Babcock, from a line of secretaries stretching as far back as John Sherman, so he may look on him as a sort of impersonal perquisite of the office. Mr. Meyer, the Postmaster-General, has a scholarly secretary, Dr. Holmes of Boston, of the great Holmes branch which produced a humorist, scientist and jurist. The secretary is an honored friend at the Meyer home in Washington and Hamilton, Mass.

But the three friends in whom Washington feels the greatest pleasure are all Scotchmen by birth who have taken Iowa as their American home, James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture; Senator William B. Allison, and the venerable horticulturist, for over forty years in charge of the public gardens of Washington, William R. Smith. These three are the chummiest imaginable, just like schoolboys when they are together. They talk of Scotland and sing Scottish songs and on occasion concoct punch made of the old Scotch whisky. Each has a prize brand and some century old brews, direct from the good port of Glasgow. Strange to relate, these three old friends have a sad tie to draw them more closely together. All three lost their wives through the tragedy of drowning, and in each case the tragedy was precipitated through temporary mental derangement.

A Real Surprise Party.

"Where are you goin', ma?" asked the youngest of the five children.

"I'm going to a surprise party, my dear," answered the mother.

"Are we all goin', too?"

"No, dear. You weren't invited."

After a few moments' deep thought: "Say, ma, then don't you think they'd be lots more surprised if you did take us all?"—[Everybody's Magazine.

BORDER SAGE.

TEMPERS LAW WITH SENSE.

Texas Justice Deals With Wisdom of Solomon.

Has No Jail or Calaboose, and Makes Few Fines.

Is Held in Great Respect by His Constituents.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BOQUILLAS (Tex.) Sept. 8.—M. A. Ernst of Boquillas is a powerful potentate. He owns a store here, and holds the office of justice of the peace, and as such officer has full sway over a territory as large as an average State.

Boquillas is situated on the Rio Grande, far down in the Big Bend region of Texas. It is one hundred miles from Boquillas to the nearest railroad point. The territory over which Mr. Ernst presides borders on the Rio Grande for more than one hundred miles, and extends toward the interior for seventy-five miles. It is occupied almost exclusively by Mexicans. In former days this remote and wild region was the place of refuge of desperate criminals. Most of these outlaws have been cleared out, and to Mr. Ernst is due the credit for accomplishing much of this good work.

The Mexicans on the upper border look upon him as the absolute ruler of this little kingdom. They go to him for advice when in trouble, and should one of them commit an offense against the statutes of the State, he knows that he will receive deserving punishment at the hands of the border justice of the peace. If the prisoner and the case merit leniency, Mr. Ernst gives it without regard to the testimony or the law.

"I don't pretend to know much law," Mr. Ernst said the other day, "but I exercise common sense in dealing with persons who violate the statutes of the State."

NO JAIL OR CALABOOSE.

"Is there a jail or calaboose at Boquillas?" he was asked.

"No; I have managed so far to get along all right without a place of imprisonment."

"What do you do with your prisoners?"

"If they are unusually desperate, I chain them up until I can send them to the County Jail at Alpine," he said; "but in most cases I put the man under arrest on his honor to return to my place for trial. I have lost very few prisoners by doing this. I let the Mexicans go without bond, and they nearly always return at the appointed time and stand trial.

"I had a case not long ago in which the prisoner skipped the country, but it was at a hint from me that he did so. The man had abducted a pretty Mexican girl at Boquillas, and had taken her into the mountains. I sent my constable on the trail of the couple. He overtook them at Terlingua, sixty-five miles away. The couple had made the trip on foot, and my constable followed them on a burro. He placed the girl on the burro, and brought her back to Boquillas. The constable and his prisoner had to walk all the way.

"I had my doubts about making out a case against the Mexican. I told him I ought to send him up to the big judge at Alpine—we call the District Judge the big judge—but that it might be well if he was missing when his case was called. Sure enough, he failed to show up next morning. He fled to Mexico, and has never returned to this side of the river.

MAKES FEW FINES.

"I make it a point to talk to the prisoners who are brought before me and try and have them improve their ways. I seldom fine any of them. I know they are poor, and that it is hard for them to make a living. I would have to chain them up if they could not pay their fines, as I don't care to spend the night guarding them. I find that it is better to give them good advice than to fine them.

"A case of this kind occurred recently. A Mexican of this section who is known as a killer and a bad man generally, got hungry one day while traveling through the mountains, and coming upon a flock of goats, killed one of them with a stone and ate his fill of it. He had the nerve to go to the home of the owner of the goat and borrow salt with which to season the meat that he ate.

"The owner found the remains of the goat, and was convinced that this bad Mexican was guilty of the deed. He came to me and told me about it. I asked if he was willing to swear out a complaint and have the Mexican arrested. He was afraid of the fellow, and would not do this. I told him that I would give the Mexican a good talking to about killing the goat the first time I saw him. The man begged me not to do this, insisting that the Mexican would kill him for having told me about it. I told him that it was my duty as an officer of the law to talk to the accused Mexican and give him a good lecture about his stealing.

"It was a month or so later before I saw the Mexican who had killed the goat. He visited my store one day, and I took him aside and quietly told him that he had beter stop stealing and killing goats. He denied having killed the goat of the man who had complained to me, but he agreed to quit stealing. He has been living up to his word since then, and he may become a good citizen. I talked to him straight, and he knows I meant what I said when I told him he had to quit his meanness.

"Another time a Mexican made complaint to me that another Mexican had stolen a plow from him. I had the fellow arrested, and let him go until his trial could take place. The day before the trial the fellow came to my store and wanted to buy 25 cents' worth of beans on credit. I told him I couldn't let him have the beans on credit as I might send him to the penitentiary next day and I would lose what he owed me. The trial came off, and the Mexican who made the complaint could not prove his charge. I fined him for accusing the other Mexican of something he couldn't prove."

TIES MANY NUPTIAL KNOTS.

Mr. Ernst officiates at most of the marriages in this part of the Rio Grande border region. He is in great demand among the marrying Mexicans. Love-stricken couples frequently make a trip of fifty to one hundred miles on burros or on foot to Boquillas to obtain his services in tying the nuptial knot. He has an elaborate ceremony which he performs when the occasion warrants an unusual spread of his authority as matrimonial splicer.

Some of the Mexicans have such an exalted idea of the greatness of his office that he is not infrequently called upon to grant divorces and to perform other official acts which come under the jurisdiction of the higher courts. Acting in an unofficial capacity, Mr. Ernst gives much good advice to the Mexicans who call upon him in time of trouble. Scattered in the narrow valley along the river are little villages of Mexicans. They till small patches of ground, obtaining a meager living from the crops of corn and vegetables. The hills and mountains which border the river are used as goat ranches. The people of the remote region are simple hearted and have the utmost respect for Americans. Mr. Ernst is the only constituted legal authority of which many of them have any knowledge, and to them he is as great as the President of the United States. The fame of Mr. Ernst has spread into Mexico, and he is frequently visited by civil and military dignitaries from across the boundary line.

FOUNDED PRESENT TOWN.

Mr. Ernst is the founder of the present town of Boquillas. When he came down here a good many years ago, the original town of that name was situated several miles from the site of the present Boquillas. He decided that he could do a better business as a merchant and justice of the peace if he were located on the route of travel between a rich silver mine that was being opened up across the river in Mexico and the shipping point on the railroad, 100 miles away. He moved over to the site which he had selected, and called the embryo town Boquillas. The government established a postoffice here of that name, and the new town is officially recognized.

The most distinguishing feature of the landscape of Boquillas, aside from the store building, is a giant cottonwood tree. This tree is perpetually green. Its old foliage remains upon it until the new buds in the spring crowd off the other leaves. Mr. Ernst also has cotton plants at his home which have been bearing annually for several years. These plants show no signs of old age, and seem to be good for several more years of production.

Mr. Ernst is a philosopher and a close student of human nature. He wields an influence of great good among the Mexicans. He is a great believer in a happy home life. It is his theory that much of the strife of the world has its inception in discord in the home. He has conducted his work among the Mexicans along this line.

Natural Advantages.

At an evening party they were playing a game in which everybody in the room makes a face, and the one who makes the worst face is awarded a prize. They all did their best, and then the judge went up to one of the women and said, "Well, madam, I think you have won the prize."

"Oh, she said, "I wasn't playing!"—[Good Housekeeping.

Fiddle for a Church Vane.

One of the most curious vanes to be seen on any church in Great Britain is at Great Gonerby, a parish adjoining Grantham, says the London Standard. It is in the form of a fiddle and a bow, and is unusually large. Its history is curious. Many years ago a peasant resided in Great Gonerby who eked out a modest livelihood by performing on an old violin, which was almost a part of his life. At last he decided to emigrate, and out in the Far West prospered and became a rich man.

One day he sent to the clergyman at Great Gonerby a sum sufficient to build a church, and attached to the gift the curious condition that ... of his old fiddle and ... the summit of the ... accepted, and the ... seen on the church.

REALTY BOARD NEWS.

The following have been admitted to membership in the Los Angeles Realty Board; the Beaumont Land and Water Company, W. O. Huse, Janss Investment Company, and the Scandia Land and Loan Company.

A meeting of the board will be held shortly for the purpose of discussing the proposed amendment to the State Constitution which would impose the entire burden of State taxation upon the public service corporations. The subject will also be discussed in the other local real estate organizations which are members of the State Realty Federation. A proposed bill, which would compel all real estate agents to file bonds and secure State license, will also be considered by the members of the federation. This proposition originated in the Fresno Real Estate Board, and its advocates believe that it would to a large extent eliminate irresponsible agents.

COMPLETES IMPORTANT DEAL.

THE MARKETS.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

The long expected decline in beans finally came yesterday morning. The drop was general in the more common varieties and averaged 50 cents. The new bean crop is beginning to arrive, and this is the chief cause for the lower quotations. That the new crop will be excellent is conceded. Early in the summer, there were grave fears that the early rains and then a warm hot spell would kill the flowering vines, but conditions gradually improved and as a result the crop has turned out in every way as large as that of last year, and the quality about the same. Limas, which can be grown only in this section of the country, have been doing well, and are already shipped out in carload quantities. With the lowering of prices, there were some fair offerings but no buyers on Change. Receipts were only 29 sacks.

With but 100 cases of fresh local ranch eggs received, the price to the farmer was advanced 1 cent, while the jobbing quotations remained unaltered and firm. There was a good demand and 10 cases were sold. Iowa fresh eggs, Kansas fresh, and several other grades were offered, in as large as carload lots, but there were no purchasers on hand.

Butter arrivals were 24,472 pounds. There were no offerings, and the demand on the street was light. The average receipts of the past week have been considerably lower than for several months, and as a result the market is firm.

Only 25 pounds of cheese was reported in. Offerings were confined to local anchor, longhorns, twins and daisy cheese. There were a few bids.

The potato market was a trifle weaker at the close of the week than at the beginning. Arrivals have been better and are the reason for the present feeling. Highlands in carload lots were the only offerings yesterday. Arrivals were 2492 sacks.

Onion arrivals were 154 sacks and there was a general feeling that the prices should be lower, at least on Yellow Danvers which are now quoted at $1 per cwt. Sales of the past week have been way below that price. There were arrivals of 300 sacks of sweet potatoes and the market was very weak. On the street there were sales of good proportions and as low as $1.50.

The fruit market has been gradually advancing on most products and the end of the week finds peaches showing a much better tone than early during the period. Grapes are about the same, but there has been no glut on any day owing to the close watch being kept on arrivals by the dealers. Pomegranates are becoming plentiful and sell at $1 per lug box. Vegetables are all the same in value.

Yesterday brought an advance of ¼ cent in lard and fractional rises in the salted meats as well, as in several varieties of bacon. Fresh pork remained unchanged. Beef was very firm and the indications point to better prices than are now prevailing within a few weeks.

CONSOLIDATION.

BANK MERGER IS COMPLETE.

TRUST COMPANY AND A STATE BANK COMBINE.

Merchants' Bank & Trust Company Will Be One of City's Strongest Financial Institutions — Capital Three Hundred Thousand, With Surplus Two-thirds That Amount.

One of the most important bank consolidations that has been effected in this city for some time has just been consummated between the Merchants' Trust Company and the Western State Bank, which will hereafter operate as the Merchants' Bank and Trust Company, under which name a new charter has been taken out.

The assets of both banks were appraised by the clearinghouse bank examiner and transferred to the Merchants' Bank and Trust Company at their actual appraised value, establishing the institution upon a most substantial basis.

The new bank will have a capital of $300,000 and a surplus of $200,000, and opens with deposits approximating $1,000,000.

The controlling interest of the Merchants' Trust Company was recently acquired by Mark G. Jones, president of the Merchants' Trust Company; George B. Epstein, president of the Western State Bank, and other associated interests in that bank, and by James Bastable, an eastern banker of wide experience.

The officers of the new institution are Mark G. Jones, president; George B. Epstein, N. Blackstock and James Bastable, vice-presidents, and Emanuel Cohen, cashier.

The following men, prominent in business and financial circles, will comprise the directorate of the new bank: Henderson Hayward, Mark G. Jones, N. Blackstock, Reuben Shettler, James Bastable, O. M. Souder, J. C. F. Hull, Benjamin E. Page, George B. Epstein, W. F. Botsford and T. H. Dudley. Under this management, the conservatism of the bank's future policy is assured.

The present Western State Bank, at Main, Spring and Ninth streets, will be maintained as a branch. Since its organization the Western State Bank has been very successful, enjoying a patronage that has kept pace with the spread of trade and activity in that quarter of the city.

The Union Square branch, at Hoover street, near West Adams, recently purchased by the Merchants' Trust Company, will also be continued. This branch caters to a large and constantly growing community and the increase of its business since its acquisition by its new owners has been phenomenal.

WEEK CLOSES QUIETLY.

Only Oil and Mining Stocks Handled on Los Angeles Exchange—Few Price Changes.

Trading was light on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange yesterday, and most of the price changes were unimportant.

Olinda Land was the only issue handled during the early call. 3000 shares changed hands at 19, on buyer thirty contracts. The stock closed at 16½@20, up ½ and 2 points, respectively.

Associated Oil was 1-8 point higher in the bid at 32.12½, but none was offered. An advance of ½ point was scored in the bid for Amalgamated, which closed at 84.00@92.00, the asked price being 8 points below Friday's market. Brookshire Oil was wanted at 1.76, a 6-point advance. The asked price remained unchanged at 2.00. Central closed at 88@97½, up 1 and down ½ point, respectively. Columbia was quoted at 95@98, up ½ and 1 point, respectively.

The Union Oil quotations were little changed, 79.75@80.12½. Union Provident was quoted at 78.00@84.00, and United Petroleum at 78.50@84.00, both unchanged.

There was little interest manifested in the industrials. Home Preferred closed with a 1-8 point gain in the bid at 46.75@47.00, but none was sold. The bond list was practically stationary, and bank stocks were neglected.

On the mining call Johnnie Consolidated was handled at 7.25 a thousand; California Hills at 1 1-4; and Consolidated Mines at 2 1-4.

TRADING LISTLESS.

Weak Market Obtains on Los Angeles-Nevada Exchange—Oil Stock Deals.

The market on the Los Angeles-Nevada Mining Exchange was weak yesterday. Trading was listless and bidding lacked snap and vigor. Price changes were small but were, for the most part, toward a lower plane.

One thousand shares of Combination Fraction were sold at 1.33, the price being one point higher than the final bid of Friday. The close was at 1.33@1.34, up one point in the bid.

Florence closed unchanged, at 3.95@4.00, but was not handled. Consolidated was quoted at 5.95@6.20, 5 points below the market bid of the previous day. Great Bend closed at 33 bid, after a sale of 1000 shares, at that figure. Jumbo Extension was inactive, and unchanged, closing at 39 bid.

The price on Daisy sagged badly again. Sales were recorded at 62, seller ten days, and the closing quotations were 61@62, up 1 and off 2 points, respectively.

There was considerable trading in Baby Florence; 9000 shares went at from 8 to 8 1-4 cash, and at 8½, buyer thirty days. The close was at 8@8½, up 3-4 and 1-4 points compared with Friday's level.

LIGHT TRADING AND NOT MUCH INTEREST IN MINES.

Goldfield Leaders Waver, and Many Close Lower—Intermediate Issues Remain Quiet and Unchanged—Booth Affected by Strike on Red Top Lease.

[Special service to The Times by B. F. Taylor, No. 112 West Third street. Member Los Angeles-Nevada Mining Exchange.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 12.—It was a typical Saturday market, with little trading and not much interest. Florence held its own. Goldfield Consolidated lost five points, and Combination Fraction broke even. The other issues were practically unchanged. The market opened with a slightly softer look than it had last night at the close. Sandstorm was weak, selling down to 23. As a rule the medium to low priced stocks are holding very well.

Homestake and Gold Bar were both weak, the former closing at 22 bid, against 25 last night. The big strike on the Consolidated Red Top lease had its effect on Booth, which property it adjoins. Rawhide Coalition and Queen were both strong and are attracting public attention.

Following are the closing bid and asked prices with sales on the formal call:

SHARES AND MONEY.

DULL DAY IN STOCK MARKET.

UNCERTAINTY OF ELECTIONS HAS EFFECT.

Stiffening of Money Market, Omission of American Locomotive Dividend, Return of Harriman, Lack of Moisture for Corn Crop, Factors in Unsettled Condition.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The professional element in the speculation showed some symptoms of disquiet over the prospects of staying short of stocks over Sunday. The day's short session was dull and uninteresting and showed no striking new phase in the situation. The stiffening of the money market, the omission of the American Locomotive dividend, the possibility of a sensational outcome of the Maine election, and the lack of proper moisture for the maturing of the corn crop to the best advantage were subjects under discussion. St. Paul was a weak feature of the railroads and American Smelting and some of the railroad equipment stocks extended the decline in force when the market closed yesterday. Remarks by influential capitalists pointing to the uncertainness of politics were interpreted as an admonition to conservative action pending the result of the Presidential election. When prices started upwards, the Harrimans and Reading were found again in their customary position of prominence. The return from his vacation of the head of the Harriman system and the expectation of his appearance on Monday in Wall street seemed to have a favorable influence on stocks bearing his name. Reading moved upwards anew on the strength of winning by the coal roads of the suit to test the validity of the commodities clause of the Hepburn act. Money and exchange markets are little more than nominal on Saturday and offered no improvement development today. The complexion to be shown by the bank statement was considered with interest, but the statement, as is now the rule, was not published until after the stock market had closed. It disclosed that the week's decrease of cash had been closely gauged by the preliminary estimates of between four and five million. The heavy loan expansion bore on the reserve requirements as well as the net result being a decline in proportion of reserve to 28.84 per cent., bringing the surplus to below $52,000,000, not an adequate supply for all normal necessities ahead of the money market.

Bonds were irregular. Total sales, par value, $1,820,000. United States bonds unchanged on call during the week.

BULLS CONTROL WHEAT MARKET.

ONLY SLIGHT DIP IN PRICES EARLY IN DAY.

Prices Close Firm, Despite Record-breaking Receipts—Corn Opens Weak, but Recovers Later in Day, Oats Sympathizing in Its Course. Provisions Higher.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—The wheat market displayed considerable bullishness nearly all day despite the record-breaking movement of new wheat in the Northwest.

A slight dip occurred during the first half hour, due to selling based on the liberal receipts at Minneapolis and Duluth, but the market soon rallied, continued firm the remainder of the day. Arrivals today at Minneapolis were 536 cars, and Duluth reported receipts of 520 cars, while Winnipeg followed closely with 387 cars, compared with 36 cars a year ago. This enormous movement failed to affect the market to any great extent because of the fact that the demand for cash wheat in the Northwest was more than equal to the supply and today's entire receipts were eagerly taken by millers within an hour after they were placed on sale.

A few of the bull leaders who were free sellers yesterday gave the market vigorous support today, and this buying was largely responsible for the firm tone which prevailed. Higher cables, continued dry weather in the Southwest and firm markets for cash wheat at all grain centers in this country were factors that inspired buying. Some export business was reported today—fifty boatloads in all, with six loads from Chicago. The market closed strong at almost the highest point.

Heavy realizing sales caused weakness in corn early in the day, particularly in the September delivery, which declined one cent during the first hour. The market, however, became oversold, and in attempt to cover earlier sales, pit traders bid up prices. More reports were received today of damage to pasturage by the dry weather, and many of the advices claimed green corn was being cut and fed to stock. The market closed steady with prices 1-8c higher to 3-8c@1-2c lower.

The early weakness of corn had a depressing effect on oats, but late in the day the market became quite firm, owing to buying of May by a leading cash interest. The market closed steady with prices unchanged to 1-8c lower.

Trade in provisions was on a large scale, and the market displayed decided strength. The market closed steady with prices at the top notch—up 7½ to 25c compared with the previous close.

Boston Copper Market.

[By private wire to E. F. Hutton & Co., bankers and brokers. Members New York Stock Exchange, No. 112 West Third street.]

BOSTON, Sept. 12.—The shorts attempted to cover today and found no stocks offered. The rally was sharp and decisive, especially in the coppers, and shows the extremely strong position they are in. North Butte sold at 83½ for 50 shares at the opening, but after that the stock was offered only by the traders and rallied quickly to 85½. Monday should see higher prices and if the election in Maine furnishes no disappointments the bull movement should be resumed.

New York Cotton Market.

[By Private Wire to E. F. Hutton & Co., Bankers and Brokers, Members New York Stock Exchange, No 112 West Third street.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—There is a bull pool in October and they support this month freely, but it is thought they are selling the distant months against it. The crop is moving quite freely, but not as much so as the trade has expected. We look for a traders' market until some new features come up.

The New York Commercial said this morning: "Liverpool is due to come two down on October and November. The South did not appear a bit impressed by the predictions of storm, and sold more than it bought. The sentiment of the ring is still very bearish. The bears showed their strength yesterday in holding the market in the face of predicted bad weather and in the face of fact that crop estimates are being reduced. The feeling seems to be that there is not enough damage to cause any advance, and it is a market that is not as much interested in the size of the crop as it is in trade conditions. Any improvements in demand and trade conditions would be quickly reflected in the price of cotton."

Atwood, Violet & Co. says: "Our market did not respond to the cables or bullish statistics, mainly because the principal buyers were able to soften the market while they replaced the long cotton sold on the opening. This will probably let the market advance to a new level. A hurry to buy October at the close indicates something doing next week."

Hubbard Bros. & Co. says: "The undertone is less strong and without actual damage from the impending storm, it looks as though the market would work lower again."

A. V. & Co. says: "An easier spot situation was reported yesterday from some quarters, but from what we can see, this applies to markets only which have been asking high prices."

C. H. & C. says: "We expect, unless there should be some unforeseen accident, in the way of continued bad weather or torrential storms to materially check the output of this cotton crop, to see prices gradually but certainly sag to a much lower level."

Green says: "The chief news is the weekly figures, which are bullish. There is nothing new in the way of reports of the storm off the Galveston coast yesterday afternoon and trade is of the opinion that there is not much danger of it. There looks like a scalping affair for time being. We advise sales on ten to fifteen-point bulges."

RECEPTION TO DIRECTOR.

Young Women Will Welcome Leader and Dedicate Gymnasium on Tuesday Night.

A large reception and entertainment will be given at the Young Women's Christian Association on Tuesday evening, in honor of Miss Ella Stevers, the new physical director of the association. It will be under the auspices of the Indoor-Outdoor Club, an organization of nearly 100 young women, who are banded together to promote the interests of the physical department. It is really a dedication of the splendid new gymnasium, as well as a welcoming reception, and all girls and women interested in gymnasium work are invited. There will be a programme of music, reading and games.

Addresses of welcome to Miss Stevers will be delivered by Mrs. E. J. Marshall and Mrs. Homer Laughlin Jr. Miss Stevers received her training in the Boston Normal School of Gymnastics, and has been a director of the work for five years. Classes will be conducted in riding, rowing, tennis and swimming, as last year, and an unusual interest is being manifested in all lines of physical instruction.

FIRE NEARLY OUT.

Valley, Hill and Mountain Blaze Clears Five Square Miles on Little Elsie Peak.

Reports from La Crescenta late last night show that the fire in the hills north of that place is almost out. It did not burn in the valley at all during the day. At one time it blazed briskly on the mountains, but dwindled to small proportions by nightfall.

Most of the fire fighters have returned home and left the work of putting out the last embers to the rangers, who are working on the north side of the mountains. A careful survey of the damage done to the watersheds shows that the fire burned for the most part on Little Elsie peak, denuding about five square miles of mountains.

RAWHIDE ALIVE AND REBUILDING.

DID NOT AWAIT REMOVAL OF FIRE ROPES.

All the Mines Uninjured and First Team Through the Burnt District Carried a Load of Ore for Shipment—Valuable Ores Found on Three-Hundred-Foot Level.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

RAWHIDE, Sept. 9.—Five days ago Rawhide was destroyed by fire, and today there is no more cheerful place on the map. The people would have forgotten all about the fire were it not for the fact that they are busy at work in the midst of the ruins. And they are busy, too, for the work of reconstruction has been going on since Monday, when the fire lines were thrown down, and the work of clearing the débris began. But the majority of the people did not wait for the removal of the ropes around the burned district to get busy. On the very day of the fire, all the lumber that was in the camp had been contracted for, and the lumber yards were sending out their orders for more material. On Monday night there were eight buildings in frame in the burned district, and seventy-five carpenters knocked off work. The carpenters are getting a dollar an hour, but this price does not feaze the lot owners.

This gives an idea of the confidence that the people of Rawhide have in the future of the camp. Of course, behind it all are the mines. It is a different Rawhide that is being built today from that which was in the course of erection last January and February. In January, we had the greatest showings in the world, the promise of the most wonderful gold camp that had ever been discovered. But it was only a promise; the ground had to be developed to show what was below the surface. The real miners who examined the grounds honestly were not afraid of the development, not afraid to take the chances of going to the depth. And these men are the men who have won out, for there has not been a failure wherever there has been a hole sunk.

This may sound like an exaggerated idea of the mines of Rawhide, but it is a fact, the proof of which is to be found in the most cursory examination of the camp. Murray Hill, Balloon Hill, Hooligan Hill, Grutt Hill, all right in the confines of the town are yielding the precious ores and are shipping every day. Out in the Regent district, which lies a short mile away from the town proper, or to be more accurate, the center of the camp, the same story is found, and the Royal Tiger district, two miles to the west, is busy in the work of production and shipping. These are the things which go to cheer the people in the rebuilding of the business district. The fire which destroyed the town has done more to advertise the resources of the camp to the world than anything that could have happened. The spirit which has been manifested has shown to the outsiders that there must be something here to work for; otherwise, the camp would never have been rebuilt.

GREAT ENCOURAGEMENT.

The developments which have been made in the mines since the fire have been the greatest encouragement to the people. There was not one of the mines injured, and they were shut down only long enough to enable the miners to get out and help fight the flames. The very day of the fire, the Grutt Hill mine reached the 200 level, and there the high-grade streak was found richer than before, with the free gold all through the rock.

Since the fire, the work in the Grutt Hill Coalition has opened up more high grade, and both these properties have proven that they have a great body of high-grade ore. The discovery in the Mint has proven the Grutt Hill Coalition for a depth of 200 feet, for the drift of the former stops at the side line of the Coalition, and the latter is now drifting and stoping at the 107-foot level. This morning the Grutt Hill Coalition sent out its first shipment to the sampler at Hazen. The shipment, according to the statement of President Sutherland, will go better than $300 a ton. This is second-grade smelter ore. There are also several hundred sacks of milling ore ready for shipment, which will go between $70 and $80 a ton. The high-grade smelting ore will go better than $2000 a ton. This ore will be treated here.

The Queen Mascot Company sent out yesterday ten tons from the Jordan lease, some of which will go $1000 a ton, and the lowest assay of which went better than $200. This is the second shipment from the Queen Mascot.

The fire added additional value to the property of the Grutt Hill Coalition, for under the ruins of the office of the Coalition Mines Company there was found the cropping of the rich vein of the big mine, at a distance of 250 feet from the shaft. The new find is one of the same character of picture ore that is being taken out from the present shaft, and President Sutherland of the Grutt Hill Coalition has announced his intention of sinking immediately on the new find.

The crosscut of the Big 4 lease on the Rawhide Consolidated is approaching the high grade and low-grade veins of the 100 level, and it is only a matter of a few days when the veins will be cut. The indications are that the mine will be richer than ever. The same story is told in the Murray, and they have also struck the high grade in the Lillian on the same property at the 100. These are some of the things which are fostering the construction of the new and greater Rawhide.

In the Regent district the progress of the mines is not less marked than in the heart of the camp. Three hoists have been installed there—one on the McKinley lease, another on the Czar and the third on the Edwards-Barlow lease. A fourth has been ordered for the Starkey lease, and all of these properties are taking out high-grade ore, and the first-named three have been making regular shipments.

The Kearns No. 2 is shipping regularly, and the big shoot of high grade at the sixty-five-foot level has been proven to be bigger than ever in the drift in the opposite direction to the first that was started. On the crosscut at the 200 level they have opened up a fine body of milling ore, and they are still busy on the crosscut at the 300-foot.

A striking coincidence of the fire was the fact that the first team to pass through the ruins was one bearing a shipment of ore from the Truett lease of the Coalition Mines Company. This was on the day of the fire, and the people, some of whom had lost their all in the flames, stopped to cheer this reawakening of the camp. It was a striking example of what the camp had behind it in the way of production. It was taken as a good omen of the future, and it helped an awful lot to put ginger into the constructors of the new Rawhide. Coming on top of this, the new developments in the mines helped the good feeling in a wonderful degree.

TO SPECULATORS

Interspersed in our thousands of cash orders for "National Stock" from investors all over the world are many requests for us to buy and carry "National Stock" on margin. To accommodate this class of buyers we have entered into an arrangement with "National Stock" whereby we will sell to our customers through the open market, and at the open market price, any part of 500,000 shares on the following terms: 50 per cent. margin on any amount from 500 to 1000 shares and 25 per cent. margin on any amount over 1000 shares with 6 per cent. per annum interest on unpaid balances, our only charge being the regular market commission, the same as on cash orders.

In making this offer, it should be borne in mind we will not buy and carry on margin any less than 500 shares, for it is not our desire, nor the desire of the "National Stock" management, to encourage margin buying, but we will margin purchases in the case of regular seasoned stock market speculators or brother brokers. In other words, while "National Stock" is securing millions of investors to aid it in the carrying out of its plans, we will offer every facility to speculators that "National Stock" may compete in every way with System stocks.

We take this occasion to express our thanks to the public for the enormous business they have sent us on "National Stock" and to assure all who bought and who have not yet received their certificates that they will receive them at the earliest possible moment.

Notwithstanding we have an extra office force working day and night, it will be some three weeks longer before we will be caught up on orders and certificates.

We call the attention of any client who has not yet received his certificate to the fact that its non-receipt should make no material difference with his investment, for if he wishes at any time before he receives his certificate to sell his stock we will dispose of it the same as though he had had his certificate and remit to him the proceeds of the sale.

We also call the attention of brokers throughout the country to the misinterpretation of a notice contained in the "National Stock" pamphlet to the effect that all orders for "National Stock" should be sent to New York or Boston Stock Exchange or Curb houses. Mr. Lawson authorizes us to state that he intended this to mean that would-be buyers should give their orders to those brokers in their vicinity who had business connections with any New York or Boston Stock Exchange or Curb house. We solicit the business of all reputable brokers throughout the country and assure them the same quick and reliable service which we give to clients direct.

WHO'S WHO IN YOUR HOUSE?

Are you the Boss?

Or is it Cook?

Some cooks are jewels. If your's is, you'd better hang on to her. But some cooks are NOT jewels. They take frequent vacations without leave. They strenuously object to dinner parties. And those cosy little midnight lunches and inroads on the pantry are simply out of the question. Perhaps in spite of all her faults you want to keep your cook. But don't keep her if you are not satisfied with her. Don't keep her just because you fear you can't get another. You can, without trouble.

Some good cook who would suit you has a want ad in the morning's Times. She will be a good cook because the pick and cream of cooks and all other help advertise in The Times exclusively. You won't have to waste time looking up some one who is altogether out of the question. She will be all right—the cook you get through The Times.

So look her up. Things will go so much smoother with a dependable woman in the kitchen. Meals will be served on time and taste like mother's own. Get the kind of a cook you've always wanted by reading Times Want Ads today.

QUICK ACTION IN ACCIDENT.

Woman Saves the Mayor, Chief of Police and Others from Probable Injury.

Presence of mind coupled with quick action on the part of Mrs. H. B. Gleason, No. 1255 Elder avenue, prevented a serious accident and saved Mayor Harper, Chief of Police Kern and several members of the health department from probable injury under her automobile at Eleventh and Hope streets during the passing of the funeral cortege of the late Capt. Auble yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Gleason was occupying the near seat of her large automobile, watching the procession. Just behind this machine was the auto used by Chief of Police Favour of Pasadena.

As the city officials were opposite this corner, the chauffeur of the police machine started his engine. The clutch had been thrown in by some mischievous person, and the powerful auto lurched forward, striking Mrs. Gleason's car a terrific blow, and sending it straight at the line of march.

Mrs. Gleason was thrown across the front seat, but recovering herself, she leaped from the machine, which was still driven ahead by the police auto in the rear, and running alongside she set the brake so hard that both were brought to a stop.

This gave the operator of the police machine an opportunity to stop his engine, but the front wheels of Mrs. Gleason's auto were in the way of the procession and would have run over several health inspectors had they not jumped. Had Mrs. Gleason not acted quickly, both autos would have plowed on through the line and run down not only the health inspectors, but the Mayor and the Chief.

GAIN LITTLE BOOTY.

The building of Goodwin Bros. & Co., varnish manufacturers, was entered by safe blowers late Friday night, who dynamited the safe, blowing out the combination. They secured $5 in change for their trouble. The safe of the Will P. Stevens Company at No. 1630-36 Long Beach avenue, a few doors away from the Goodwin plant, was also blown. At the last place the robbers secured 40 cents in stamps. Detectives are working on both cases.

BALANCE OF FINE.

Naval Apprentice Heard from in Ladrone Islands—Sends Money to Square Himself.

Justice Austin received yesterday the last payment on a fine imposed upon A. E. Fuller more than two years ago. A letter which came contained a check for $12.50. It was dated United States Naval Station, Island of Guam, Ladrone Islands. Fuller is connected with the hospital as an apprentice, first class.

On January 25, 1906, Fuller was fined $50 in the Police Court on a charge of practicing dentistry without a license. He was granted time in which to procure the money. On January 31 he paid $25. Two months later he paid in $12.50. He failed to make the other payment, and the committment was issued by the court. In his letter Fuller states that he is going to return to Los Angeles at the expiraion of his cruise, and wants to be able to go about the city without fear of arrest on the old charge.

The Automobile Club of Buffalo now has 1400 members, and is confident of reaching the 2000 mark by New Year's. There are 4300 motor car owners in the city.

CALIFORNIANS IN OLD MEXICO.

Gen. Frisbie's New Deal With Government.

Automobile Accident to Man from Los Angeles.

Southern Pacific's Jalisco and Sonora Lines.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

MEXICO, Sept. 9.—The Southern Pacific in Mexico opens a new chapter of conquest. It is said that this great system brings into California two or three hundred settlers every day of the year. It is to be hoped that it will bring them by hundreds into Mexico, and those coming thus into Mexico will not only be farmers but miners as well, and at any rate they will be nation builders. Along this company's line from Guaymas to Guadalajara, or better said, from the American frontier to the City of Mexico, via those two points, a steady stream, a living wave of human pathfinders will rush. This extension of the Southern Pacific from Guaymas to Guadalajara, will cover 1200 kilometers. Track-laying is now in progress, simultaneously in Jalisco and Sonora, respectively north and south. In the former instance, from the Guadalajara connection of Orendain, the road has been completed ten kilometers, in fact, was finished on the 31st of August, and the second division of ten kilometers is now being prepared, for the rails. Percy Jones of Tucson, Ariz., is doing the work.

The first twenty kilometers south from Mazatlan will be completed early this month. The line expects to reach Tequila by November, and one thousand additional men are to be put on this week. One of the most gratifying features of this enterprise is that, despite the so-called hard times, the Mexican government is keeping up faithfully its promised subsidy, as in the case of the Pan-American Railway. Both these subsidies were granted at a time when there were no clouds in the financial horizon, but the government is redeeming its promises just the same. It has expended on the San Blas-Culiacan branch of the Southern Pacific extension, a distance of 219 kilometers, the sum of $2,737,500. Its subsidies for the entire extension from Guaymas to Guadalajara will be $15,000,000. Last month the government paid $125,000 for the first ten kilometers north from Orendain, and, as stated, will pay this month early $250,000 for the twenty kilometers south of Mazatlan, making a subsidy of $12,500 per kilometer for the first three kilometers constructed aside from the San Blas-Culiacan branch.

A CALIFORNIAN.

One of the most interesting personalities in Mexico is an old Californian, Gen. John B. Frisbie. This personality has been brought out somewhat prominently of late by the report that the Jalapa and Cordova Railroad was about to be taken over by the National Lines of Mexico, the government system of Mexican railways. Gen. Frisbie, although in the neighborhood of 78 years of age, is still vigorously engaged in business activities. A New Yorker by birth, he calls himself a Californian, for in early manhood he located in that then "tierra incognita." He left New York in 1846 as a captain in the United States army, his command forming part of a regiment sent by the American government to California in connection with the Mexican war. The American fleet in which Capt. Frisbie sailed, included four transports—sailing vessels, for there were no steamships on the ocean, although Robert Fulton's "Clearmont," the first steamer, made its famous voyage from New York to Albany in 1807, thus initiating steam navigation. The American fleet occupied six months in rounding Cape Horn, reaching California in 1847, and occupying the coast in the name of the American government. This fleet reached California a little prior to the British fleet sent for the same purpose. Gen. Frisbie was raised in rank on account of meritorious conduct in the Mexican war. He made his home in California, opposite San Francisco, and lived there for thirty years. He laid out on the bay the town of Vallejo, named for Miss Vallejo, a member of a distinguished Californian family, whom he married.

Gen. Frisbie came to Mexico in 1878, and is one of the perhaps half dozen old-time Americans of twenty-five years ago. He has been very successful in mining, agricultural ventures and railroads. He has a sugar plantation at Atlixtac, Guerrero, covering 40,000 acres, from which he has a sugar crop probably of 200,000 arrobas annually. The Jalapa and Cordova Railroad now subject to discussion between the government and Gen. Frisbie, is a road of about sixty kilometers, operating between the picturesque city of Jalapa, capital of the State of Vera Cruz, and Coatepec, in the same State. It is a short line, but exceedingly productive, for it runs through some of the richest coffee and fruit lands in the Republic. By extending the road towards Cordova, which is the purpose of the government, should it acquire control, an exceedingly rich territory could be tapped, much of which now unloads its products by wagon or mule trail.

Gen. Frisbie, when seen this morning, said that no deal had been contemplated for the purchase of the railroad by the government. He admitted such a deal had been discussed, but no definite agreement had been reached. "So far as I am concerned, I am not anxious to sell and the National lines do not seem particularly anxious to buy," said Gen. Frisbie. However, Assistant General Manager H. M. Taylor of the National line left Jalapa last week to make a minute inspection of the line, and it is possible that it will come within the merger system later on. Cordova, the point towards which the line would head, is a very picturesque place in the State of Veracruz, on the line of the old-time Veracruz Railway. Historically Cordova is interesting as being the place where the treaty between Mexico and Spain was signed eighty-seven years ago on the 28th of last month. Mexico had fought for its independence from Spain for eleven lingering years. The treaty was signed at Cordova, and it was such a hard blow to Spain to be compelled to sign the convention, that she did not recover for twenty years. Then she sent as her first diplomatic representative to Mexico, Mr. Calderon de la Barca, one of the finest scholars and diplomats that ever graced circles in Mexico. His wife was a Scotch lady of rare, scholarly gifts, and she wrote her memoirs at the time. These memoirs have been compiled by Prescott, and the book makes very valuable reading on the old-time history of Mexico.

THE HEARST FARM.

The immense Hearst cattle ranch and farm in Chihuahua, of which Hon. Ignacio Sepulveda is the Mexican representative, is possibly one of the largest of its kind in the world, whether one considers the great corn belts of Illinois, or Arkansas, or the league-long wheat fields of Dalrymple. There are on the Hearst place 250 miles of barbed wire fence, enclosing a portion of the vast property, and within that enclosure graze 60,000 Herefords, 125,000 fine sheep and many thousand horses and hogs. The crops and products are famous not only in Mexico, but in American markets. The property is typical of the great modern stock farms. Big farm-propositions in the northern part of Mexico are not uncommon. One of the staples recently being developed in Northern Mexico is potatoes with a reputation equal to the famous Greeley potatoes of Colorado.

Lic. Augustin Arroyo de Anda, who has just returned from San Francisco, reports that he was successful in organizing his company for the construction of the new city of Colonia Porfirio Diaz, near El Paso del Norte, Mex. All necessary capital was subscribed, and within three years Colonia Porfirio Diaz, he declares, will be a flourishing city of at least 10,000 inhabitants. Contracts were already let for the construction of a theater, a race track, a church and a sanatorium. Streets, public squares, parks and boulevards will be laid off immediately, and work on paving and macadamizing begun. Mr. Anda stated that the site had been selected particularly on account of being ideal in climate. Hundreds of consumptives and other invalids go to El Paso to seek their health, and he is of the opinion that the new Colonia will rapidly build up from that source.

PERSONAL.

The family of Hon. Ramon Corral, Vice-President of the Republic, left last evening for a visit to California. The party included Mrs. Amparo Escalante de Corral, wife of the Vice-President, and her children, Ramon Corral, Miss Amparo Corral, Miss Ortencia Corral, Miss Carmen Corral, and Miss Petronila Velasco. They left on a special car for Los Angeles direct, where they will visit Miss Leonor Corral, who was not able to come to Mexico from her vacation on account of delicate state of health. From Los Angeles this family group will proceed to San Francisco, where some of the young folks will remain at school.

Joseph Posner of Los Angeles will next week open, directly opposite the Jardin Hotel, the store of the California Diamond Company. The company is well known in California, where it has been in business for a number of years. Its store at Los Angeles has been closed, and the concern will in the future make its headquarters in this city.

George Mitchell, formerly of Los Angeles, and head of the Mitchell Mining Company, operating extensive mining properties in the State of Guerrero, met with an automobile accident in Guadalajara on September 2. An electric car ran into his machine, wrecking it. Mr. Mitchell was painfully bruised, but not seriously, and his friend, Mr. D. B. Russell of Guadalajara, sustained some injuries. Mr. Mitchell was on the point of leaving for New York, but will be detained at Guadalajara some little time on account of his accident.

W. W. Miller, a land owner of Berkeley, Cal., and representing Pacific Coast capitalists, has been here for several months, at Porters Hotel. He leaves tonight for his home in California, after closing some real estate deals of importance. Mr. Miller expects to return to the city later with his family to reside.

Henry Mel of San Francisco, representing the Michoacan Lumber Company, arrived in Mexico this morning on a business trip, and is at the St. Francis.

Mrs. Nathan Price, together with her daughter, Mrs. Paul Hudson (wife of the general manager of the Mexican Herald,) and her other daughter, Mrs. Theodore Graham Wear, with their children, left on Monday for Long Beach, Cal., to spend a vacation. Mr. Hudson expects to join them the last of this month.

T. M. Coffer and wife, of Los Angeles, J. W. Roach of San Francisco and W. Krouse of Los Angeles, are the latest arrivals at the St. Francis.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Pearson of San Francisco, Cal., who are visiting in this city, are so much pleased with their sojourn that they have taken a house in the ancient suburb of Coyoacan to spend some months. Coyoacan ranks historically as the first city started on the American continent by white men, when it was built by Cortez in 1520.

LEARNING HOW TO WALK.

Physical Director Takes His Class to Church and Has Them Walk Devotionally.

The sexton of one church that keeps open doors all day long didn't know whether to regard the matter in the light of a desecration or a devotional exercise, relates the New York Times. He paid no attention when the three women, watched by a man who stood at the lower end of the aisle, walked the length of the church and back again. Even when they made the trip a second time he scarcely gave them a thought, but when the trio started around the church a third time and the man called out. "Step a little more briskly, please," he began to wonder, and presently made inquiry.

"I hope you won't be offended," the man replied "I am a physical culture instructor. I am teaching these young ladies to walk. I have already taught them to walk in the street, in the drawing room, in the theater, and every place else they are likely to find themselves. I am now teaching them to walk in church. Very few women can walk there properly. Some lope some swagger, some skip, others adopt a mincing gait. All these styles are very inappropriate for church. A dignified, subdued gait alone is suitable for devotional purposes. Church is the best place for pupils in walking to receive practical instruction, therefore I have brought them here."

"Great fathers!" gasped the sexton. "What next?"

But he said no more till the walking exercise was ended. Then he followed the class to the door.

"I hope," he said, "you will practice the lesson learned today, by coming here to church once in awhile."

Women Oyster Gatherers.

The work of oyster collecting and culture is most unsuitable for women, but in France, owing its tedious nature, it does not appeal to men.

Often from an early hour in the morning till late into the evening the women are standing up to the knees in water, with a strong sun beating down on them. The result is that never a year passes without some of them going mad and having to be hurried away to the asylums.

The work is well paid, as indeed it ought to be, while in the case of the few who own beds the profits are large and small fortunes are quickly amassed.—[Woman's Life.

Coon Obeyed Orders.

The interested parties may not yet have heard about this flurry in financial circles, says Success Magazine.

It is stated that not long ago Kuhn, Loeb Co., the New York bankers, had occasion to send some bonds to J. Pierpont Morgan about noon on Saturday, and as all the other employés had gone home the colored porter was intrusted with the errand. He was told to go to Mr. Morgan's office and to insist on giving the package to "Mr. Morgan, of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., and to no other person."

By continued repetitions of these instructions to all who stood in his way, he finally broke into Mr. Morgan's presence, where several gentlemen were in session, and wiping big drops from his brow, blurted out, "I wants to see Mr. Mawgin uv J. Peahpont Maw-gin en Comp'ny."

Mr. Morgan arose and said, "Well, I am Mr. Morgan, of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co. Who are you?"

"Who—me?" said the porter. "Why, I'se de coon of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and heah's de dockymints I done brung ye."

A Hot Enough Day.

As a bit of homely drollery, it would be hard to find a better example than the following story related by a prominent Connecticut peach grower who also has large orchards in Georgia:

"Well, Joe," said he to his driver, "this is a very hot day."

"Yessir, boss," replied Joe. "Ef I owed a man a hot day, an' he wouldn't tek dis 'un, I dun'no whar I'd git one to pay him wid."

Mr. Seabrook, the general manager of the company, has taken his corps of engineers and mechanics to San Bernardino, California, where they are exhibiting the small model cars, and at the same time doing the equipping on the Santa Fe railway in their shops. The following is a letter just received from Mr. Seabrook by the Secretary of the company:

SAN BERNARDINO, CAL., Sept. 10, 1908.

MR. ELMER F. CROSBY, Secretary, American Differential Railway Axle Co., 501-2-3 Herman W. Hellman Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

My Dear Mr. Crosby:—I am very glad indeed to report to you the conditions as we find them here in San Bernardino. We arrived here on Tuesday and got our demonstrating models set up in a good room at 528 3rd street, under the St. Charles Hotel.

We went over to the shops today and were received very nicely by Mr. Hicks, the master mechanic, and the other officials in charge. It is a source of great pleasure to us to note the enthusiasm with which everybody has received our device. I find that we have in the castings an exceptionally fine job, and the coupler will look much smaller on an axle than I had anticipated.

We found in measuring up some of the wheels in the railroad yards that they vary in circumference from 1 to 4½ inches. This proves conclusively that our device is of almost as much value on straight track as on curves. We also find that the endorsement of our device by Mr. Lovell, former superintendent of motive power for the Santa Fe, is a great help to us here.

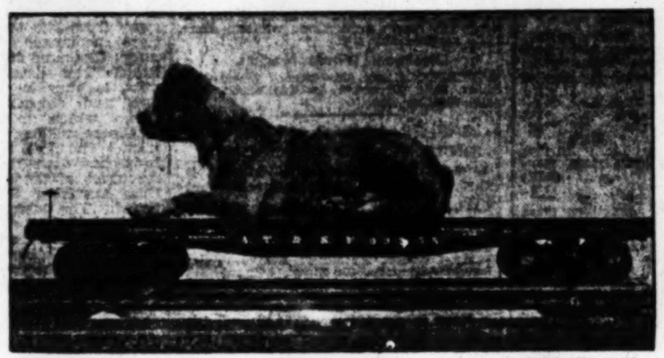
If things continue to progress as rapidly as they have so far, I believe that we will be justified in advancing the price of our stock to $2.00 per share; and I think it would be as well for you to notify your friends to this effect. I will keep you informed as to the progress of the work from time to time.

Yours very truly, B. R. SEABROOK, Treasurer and General Manager.

The above letter, written by Mr. Seabrook, the inventor of the SEABROOK-BOX DIFFERENTIAL RAILWAY AXLE CO will give you a very good idea of conditions as they now are. When we say that this device is the greatest ever invented for a railroad, we the sentiment of every man who has ever seen it, who is competent to judge in matters of this kind. It will earn the railroad companies than anything that has ever been devised for their use. It will do as much to prevent wrecks as any safety appliance ever invented. It is only a success commercially, but from a humanitarian standpoint.

It has been said, and truly, that railroad devices are hard to sell; but if you will look into the matter, you will find that it is due entire that the devices that are hard to sell are not those required by the railroad. A few years ago, Mr. Barber invented and perfected wh the Standard Railroad Truck. He has sold over 300,000 of these trucks to the railroad companies of the United States, and this is in co probably from 25 to 40 other truck companies.

Why did they buy Mr. Barber's trucks? Simply because they had to have them, a very simple reason, indeed. This is why they will BROOK-BOX DIFFERENTIAL RAILWAY AXLE COUPLER—because from the very moment that they are placed under a small expense, they immediately increase the earnings of that car enormously, probably paying for themselves several hundred times look reasonable that a railroad company or any other business concern would refuse to purchase something that was absolutely essential making?



This model car is about 5 inches high and 40 inches long, and built to the scale of one inch to the foot. The small Boston terrier puppy shown on the car will give you an idea as to its size.

It is conservatively estimated that this device will earn the railroads of the United States at least $250,000,000 per annum. If this company makes the small sum of $10,000,000 per annum, their stock will be worth on the market at least $40 or $50 per share. Ten million dollars a year is a very small amount for the railroads of the United States to pay out for a device that will earn them at least $250,000,000 per year, when one considers that they are now paying out from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 each year for the sand that they use purpose of enabling them to ditional tonnage.

While the little cars are in San Bernardino at 528 Th der the St. Charles Hotel, we car in our Los Angeles offices demonstrated on a 4 per cent contains a reversed curve. We to have the public call at either ther information regarding yet most simple device.

If you find it inconvenient to call at either the San Bernardino or Los Angeles offices, we shall be glad to have you write us for further

WOMAN'S BREAST AND MAN'S FACE

Most Common Places for Cancer

The papers made mention a short time ago of people cured of cancers without knife or pain by Dr. and Mrs. Dr. Chamley & Co. Since that time the cures of many prominent people have been the occasion of great comment.

They all said their cures were marvelous beyond expression, many of them having been given up to die. They first obtained the Doctors free book, which proves that any lump in woman's breast is cancer, it led to, as they say, the greatest blessing of their lives.

All the leading newspapers and medical journals of the world have noted their success and wonderful cures, they charge nothing until cured and offer $1000 if they fail. It is said they have cured more cancers than any other doctors living. Strictly reliable; no X-Ray or other swindle. They probably have the best 130-page book ever printed on cancers and tumors, sent free only to those who describe their case. Their address is 747 S. Main st., Los Angeles, Cal.

My next letter and testimony and experience and the work God has given me to do freely and willing to win souls to God, and published by the way of the Los Angeles Times, will be a song entitled "The Gospel is Free to All." The Los Angeles Times is the only free and independent newspaper that I know of in the whole round world that will or does publish an independent gospel letter. What are newspapers for? The gospel is the truth and the holy life of Christ, our Lord and Savior. Who will seek the Lord intelligently, and the divinity of Christ and His divine nature (2 Pl. 1:2, 4-10) and obtain it, and live it before the people as the holy prophets did and the dear Lord did and His disciples and the saints did and taught it to others, willingly not for money at all, but willingly to win souls to God (1 Pl., 5:2.) The gospel is free to all. Bribed preachers don't teach the gospel. Polluted devils don't preach the gospel in the synagogues of satan at all. Isms and doctrines of devils under the auspices of the holy scripture in the synagogues of satan for money. Their mouths must be stopped (Ti. 1:10 12:16, 1 Tim 4:1:2, Rom. 16:17, 18, 2 Cor. 11:13-15, Phil. 3:2, 18 19.) The gospel is free to all. Christ is the gospel. Christ is a free gift from God. We must seek the Lord for ourselves, independent of bribed preachers or polluted devils in the synagogues of satan. They divine for money (Mic. 3:11.) and gamble with the Bible in the synagogues of satan and gamble with precious souls in popular rooming-houses for blood money. Hell will be ashamed of the people in a Bible land. The gospel is free to all. Seek the Lord. Seek His face continually. The Lord will truly manifest Himself to humble seeking souls. If we have not seen the Lord in the spirit or heard His voice we don't know the Lord at all. No matter what we profess or how many societies we belong to or how much we pay the preachers, the gospel is free to all. I was the preachers' slave for forty years. Now I am free and independent, too. The gospel is free as the air we breathe or the sunshine. We must seek the Lord independent of preachers or teachers. The Holy Spirit will teach and direct us in all things. We must go to God in a business way and mean business with God. The gospel is free to all. I have bitter enemies (P. 109:1-14 to 31.) My enemies are your enemies, too. God is Judge. The Lord God has given me this sacred work to do and the Bible for my lawbook. God is Judge and Supreme Judge. The Lord God and angels are my bodyguard, and the Holy Spirit to direct me. The gospel is free (Revelations 2:9, 10; Matt. 23:13-15, 33.) We must seek the Lord independent of bribed preachers or teachers. Their mouths must be stopped. A line to the unmarried and virgins (1 Cor. 7:32-34; 2 Cor. 3:14-18.) We are in the generation of the bride of Christ, the Lamb's wife. Warn the people of Nineveh, Sodom, Gomorrah and San Francisco. The devil's people think others are the devils, too. Crazy people think others are crazy, too. Fools think others are foolish, too. But the wise and intelligent people know that thoughts fool through the platform door he was persons who recognized him.

for principle and not for men.
man in Illinois told me that he vote for party, but for men,"
"Well, I said to him, "if any man is fooling his time away.
Whenever a man gets better than his party he leaves it and joins the Prohibition party."

Mr. Chafin then launched into a lengthy satire concerning the acquisition of territory by the United States, reviewing the seizure of California from the Mexican government and the Philippines from Spain.

"We whipped poor old Mexico, of course, and then we said: 'Now we'll pay you for whipping you; that's the rule of Christian warfare.' When Cuba opened her door Uncle Sam put his foot in, and he'll keep it there until he gets clear in and owns every railroad and other utility in Cuba. He has said he is going to get out. Not while you live."

SLAVERY AND RUM.

He spoke at some length upon the question of slavery, as a parallel for the slavery of rum, and of the part played in it by Daniel Webster, John Brown, Charles Sumner, William Lloyd Garrison and others. Mr. Chafin, by the way, has been a strenuous student of American history, and is a law graduate from the University of Wisconsin. He practiced law for a number of years, and has just put in print a life of Abraham Lincoln. He threw terse epigrams indiscriminately into his speech.

"The brewers are pirates on the sea of politics," he declared, "and have no interest in it except their business.

"A man who has horse sense is one who does stable thinking.

"Settle the liquor question? It will be here in the year 4000, if the old parties are yet in power.

"We're not going to spend a moment in this campaign trying to make Prohibitionists. Got so many of 'em now that we could carry any State in the Union, if they would vote the Prohibition ticket. Too many of 'em; we can't corral them."

Mr. Chafin says he expects to carry California, though he was cautious enough to qualify the announcement.

CALIFORNIA HIS, IF—

"I expect to carry California," he said, "and I would be disloyal to my party to say anything else. If two out of three of the Republican and Democratic prohibitionists should join the Prohibition party, there is no question, but I'd have the electoral vote of California, and you may apply that proposition to every State in the Union."

He had the audience constantly in a good humor and raised frequent storms of applause, and this one about carrying the State created an unusual demonstration.

"Elected?" he shouted. "Why the thing is all over except doing the voting," and the demonstration was renewed.

"If Taft or Bryan is elected, the liquor traffic will go on for four years more. If it goes on is it by leave of the brewers, the saloon-keepers and the bawdy-house keepers? No, it's by leave of the Republican and Democratic prohibitionists, who haven't the sand to vote for their convictions.

"One man told me he was going to vote for Bryan on account of his position on the tariff question. How do you suppose Bryan is going to have anything to say about the tariff, with the Senate and House two-thirds against him? Why the Democrats tried it and couldn't do it when they had both the Senate and House.

"If Bryan should be elected and Roosevelt has half the sense I think he has, he'll call a special session of Congress within ten days and the Republicans will revise the tariff before March 4.

"If Bryan is elected he can do nothing more than stand there and point to the fact that he was once elected President of the United States.

"But a fellow came back at me about right, when he heard me say this.

"'How will it be if you are elected?' he asked.

"Well, I'll tell you; if I'm elected, there'll be the most marvelous number of conversions you ever heard of, by the 4th of March.

"You fellows who haven't the backbone to come out and vote for your principles, make cowards of public officials, and when I am elected President you will all want to come in."

J. H. Blanchard called the meeting to order yesterday afternoon and presented Wiley J. Phillips, who acted as chairman of the day. Mr. Phillips explained the reason for the tardiness of the candidate; and introduced Dr. E. C. Nash, who spoke along the lines of Prohibition as a personal duty, on the part of all good citizens.

The meeting last night was much larger than that of the afternoon, the speaker covering much the same ground in both speeches. He was well received and shook the hands of a large part of the audience at the close of his speech.

He is announced to speak at Hermon this forenoon, and again at Simpson Auditorium this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

COMING JEWISH SERVICES.

For the purpose of giving opportunity to Jewish people who cannot afford to pay for seats during the coming High Holiday season, divine services will be held in Choral Hall, Auditorium building, Rev. Alfred Arndt and A. Abelson officiating. On the first new year day, a sermon will be preached in English by Rabbi Arndt; on the second day Mr. Abelson will preach in the Jewish language. B. Forer is president of the association and S. Friedman, secretary. Services will be conducted by the congregation Sinai, Rabbi Isidore Myers, Cantor Weinstock and choir, officiating. Dr. Myers will preach appropriate sermons at all services.

PASTOR'S RESIGNATION.

Rev. Dr. J. M. Newell, one of the clergymen of California, has resigned the pastorate of Bethesda Church and will not again take a regular charge. He has presided over the destiny of this one church for fourteen years and has guided its growth from a weak congregation to a strong one worshipping in a splendid church without debt. Rev. G. D. Heuver has been chosen as his successor and will take up the work on October 1. Dr. Newell resigns in pursuance of a purpose formed many years ago to do so at the close of forty years service. He is now 65 years of age but looks much younger.

Make your own comparisons. Be your own judges. Buy our product on its merits—its superior quality. We make up better plumes, boas, etc., because our patrons demand quality. Our customers expect better values and we must give them. We could not hold our trade with ordinary stock.

We can afford to give better values because we are manufacturers, selling direct to consumers, thus cutting our import duty, jobbers' profits and retailers' profits. Furthermore, our process of finishing is the most economical, our expenses are less, our factory appliances the latest improved time-saving devices.

Savings amount to 40 per cent. to 60 per cent., which means values through our whole line, corresponding to the following:

17-inch plumes made of the best grade of prime feathers 9 inches wide and a quality usually sold in millinery and department stores at $7.50 or $8.00. Magnificent heavy plumes. Our price $5.00

18-inch plumes, wider in proportion than the above, measures 10½ inches across. This is exceptionally broad. Such plumes, if you could find them, would be $10.00 at regular retail price. Our price $7.50

19-inch plumes 11 inches wide. Take your tape measure and see how much 11 inches measures, then you will know that this plume is worth $12.50. Our price $10.00

21-inch plumes 12 inches wide. A grade which would be priced usually at $15.00. Extremely heavy heads and perfect stock throughout. Our price $12.50

23-inch plumes 12½ inches wide. Made of carefully selected stock. Actually better than those usually sold at $20.00 at retail. Our price $15.00

Men who attended this opening are bound to become permanent patrons.

We are showing all the very latest shades and patterns in Fall woolens—the new browns, greens, grays, blue shades, zebra stripes and other novelties, as well as a full line of staple blues and blacks. The best of workmanship in every suit, no matter what the price, is what you get when you order a suit from King, the tailor.

SACRIFICE?

DEMOCRATS PUT RUSH IN RUN.

CANDIDATE FOR CONGRESS FROM SEVENTH DISTRICT.

Everybody in the Convention Delighted to Get a Man Who Is Willing to Make the Race Except Brooks, Who Wanted the Prohibition Nominee Chosen.

A symphony in politics planned for the delegates to the Seventh District Democratic Convention, yesterday, was rudely jarred by J. Marian Brooks and his scarlet vest. The convention was called to order in Symphony Hall at 2 o'clock by District Chairman J. L. Chase, and Judson R. Rush, an attorney, was the unanimous choice as the candidate for Congress—all but J. Marion Brooks, who proposed and voted for J. W. Atwood, the Prohibition nominee.

Not over fifty were in the hall and there was so much suppressed jubilation that a candidate had been found after the long hunt, that all were ready to do the job quickly, but Brooks was bellicose because he declared Rush would vote for his law partner, Frank R. Willis, who is a Republican candidate for Superior Judge.

D. K. Trask proposed Rush. He said the time had come when the Los Angeles district must send a man personally and politically qualified to do it credit. Rush, he said, is the best campaigner and speaker the party possesses; a man who would work to remove the oppressive tariff wall and gain independence for San Pedro harbor from malign interests.

Rush was the recipient of bouquets from the last two sacrifices of the party in this district—Robert G. Loucks and W. Ona Morton—who seconded the nomination. Other seconding speeches were by W. R. Burke, Joseph Simons and Walter Simons. All the time Brooks was seeking recognition, but Chairman Chase couldn't see him with a spy glass. When Chase did permit Brooks to speak he challenged Rush to come on the floor and prove that he will not vote for Willis.

Rush was not in the hall, being in attendance at the funeral of Capt. Auble. For this reason the Committee on Notification, composed of Morton and Loucks, did not seek him, but W. R. Burke and others gave testimony that Rush would accept and make the race of his life.

"When McLachlan wakes up," said Burke, "he will find that there is a live wire after him."

Every speaker denounced McLachlan for his years of torpidity at Washington. Joseph Simons declared McLachlan's service had cost the civic organizations of Los Angeles, like the Chamber of Commerce, thousands of dollars keeping committees at the front building fires under the Congressman from this district.

The denunciation was focalized in resolutions offered by H. M. McDonald and unanimously passed. The resolutions declare that McLachlan has never taken any action to ha the lines of the inner harbor of San Pedro defined, and that the City Council and commercial organizations had to make direct application, and that this dereliction had retarded the progress of the harbor development.

After the nomination the convention designated the County Executive Committee as the Congress committee for all purposes under the law and authorized Rush to increase its membership if he so desires. Resolutions deploring the death of Capt. Augie were passed.

Mr. Rush is a member of the law firm of Davis, Rush & Willis, and is a campaigner of many years' experience. He was once the Democratic candidate for City Attorney. It was stated that he accepted the nomination with the intention of making a strenuous campaign and that he has pledges of assistance from all elements of the party.

STRENUOUS VACATION.

Dr. Henry Returns and Will Celebrate His First Anniversary With Informal Reception Tonight.

Dr. J. Q. A. Henry, pastor of the First Baptist Church, returned from his "vacation" on Friday. The average person would scout the idea of calling so strenuous a season of work a period of rest. Today marks the first anniversary of his pastorate and he will preach both morning and evening, an informal reception following the latter service.

During his absence Dr. Henry delivered four addresses at the Colorado Baptist Chatauqua and preached one Sunday for his old church in Denver; occupied the pulpit of the First Church of Cleveland; preached nightly for three weeks in the great Union Gospel Tent, Brooklyn; and conducted for one week a large and successful temperance conference in New York City. He also spoke for two weeks at the famous Fullerton street noonday prayer meetings, with one Sunday at Yonkers, N. Y., and spent last Sunday in Carlisle, Pa., where, with J. R. Hemminger, who for three years was Dr. Henry's singer, he conducted several services. Altogether he reports about fifty sermons and addresses delivered during his vacation. He has received many invitations for work, but has declined them all, to devote himself to the work of his own church and congregation.

HORSES TRAMPLE WOMAN.

Mrs. Evan White of No. 203 North Avenue 19 was run down by a team at Fourth street and Broadway yesterday afternoon and but for the brave work of Crossing Officer Gardner would have been killed. Mrs. White is 55 years of age. She did not notice the horses, which had become unmanageable, until too late. She was thrown directly beneath the trampling hoofs. Officer Gardner sprang to her rescue and at the risk of his life dragged her out. She sustained a fractured rib, her left arm was broken and her left wrist dislocated.

VIVA INDEPENDENCIA.

WITH MUSIC AND DANCING.

Mexicans to Celebrate Days of Revolution.

Patriotic Clubs Prepare to Honor Heroes.

In Gay Costumes Old Times Will Be Shown.

Mexican Independence Day for the Spanish-Americans of Los Angeles will be a time of celebrations. They will again live over the turbulent period of 1820 and 1821, when the patriots of their country, fired by the desire for a better government than that prevailing under Spanish rule, arose in arms and after continued struggles, succeeded in gaining national independence. The eighty-eighth anniversary of the insurrection lead by the Rev. Father Miguel Hidalgo, will be the occasion for special rejoicing among the large Spanish-American colonies, and three societies have perpared elaborate programmes in which many of the leading American citizens will participate as well. The old costumes, fantastic dances, folk songs and stories of the Mexican heroes will be rehearsed. The cry of the day will ring out "Viva Mexico! Viva la Independencia!" The organiaztions which have prepared for the day are the Club Cura Hidalgo, the Sons of Montezuma and the Club Porfirio Diaz.

The initial celebration will be given on Tuesday evening in the Venice Auditorium. The programme will be repeated on Wednesday afternoon in its entirety at Turner Hall, under the auspices of the Diaz Society. On Wednesday morning, the day proper for the celebration, festivities will begin at the Old Plaza Church for the Sons of Montezuma, and the Club Cura Hidalgo. A solemn high mass will be sung, with Rev. Leo Gariador, who is acting as pastor during the absence of Rev. Juan Caballeria, now in Europe. Mrs. A. Larieux will be organist, and a special choir will render Farmer's mass. After this, the entire congregation will go to Chutes Park, which has been procured for the day, and a programme of athletic sports will be carried out. Prizes will be awarded in all contests.

OPENING BY THE MAYOR.

The Mayor is expected to open the entertainment of the afternoon with an address. B. N. Olivas, president of the day, will deliver the welcoming speech. After the remarks of the Mayor, Gen. Don Anton Aguilar, the aged Mexican War veteran, will fire a salute of twenty guns, to be followed by the reading of the Mexican Declaration of Independence by Y. Y. Perez. This will be succeeded by a musical and literary programme which has been arranged, and will be carried out under the direction of Mrs. M. G. Gonzales. A chorus of 150 male and female voices will sing the Mexican national anthem. They will all be in the costume of days gone by, and some of the mantillas to be worn by the young women have come directly from the ancient imperial palace of Mexico.

The Estrofas, a song of characters, will be rendered by Miss Josephine Chaves, Ida Olivas, George Gonzales, Mrs. Anna Bruce, Mrs. Francis Politte, Josephina Solon, Maria Flores, Hernando Villa and M. Quijada. A tableau presenting Mary Mareno as America, Carmen Olea as Justicia and Mrs. B. J. Solomon as the Goddess of Liberty, will follow. Stella Gonzales will dance the La Cachucha, and the La Manzania will be presented in all its pretty variations by Eloise Olivas and Ignacio Verelas. Little Grace Larieux will sing old Spanish songs, which will also be done by Mrs. Frances Politte. La Golandrina will be presented by Mrs. Joseph Chavez. J. Park Jones and Myrtle Gonzales will sing character songs in English. The Sombrera Blanca and the La Jota, two famous Spanish dances, will be given by a group of sixteen people, and the programme will be closed by the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" by Mrs. M. G. Gonzales, accompanied by forty-eight school girls.

During the period intervening between the afternoon and evening sports, a band concert will take place in the pavilion. Later there will be a fireworks display, and the day will be concluded with a ball, prizes for the best dancers on the floor being promised.

Officers of the Club Cura Hidalgo are: M. G. Gonzales, president; Rev. Leo Gariador, honorary president; F. J. Talamentas, vice-president; J. A. Dominga, treasurer; J. Saenz, Y. Y. Perez and F. H. Olivas, secretary and assistants, respectively.

OTHER EVENTS.

The participants in the Turner Hall and Venice celebrations will be practically the same, particularly as far as the musical features and the dances are concerned. As president of the Porfirio Diaz Club, Ralph Dominguez will open both events with an address of welcome. Gen. Johnstone Jones will deliver the English oration, and J. C. Nava, the Spanish at Venice. At Turner Hall, Motley H. Flint and Edwin Meserve will be the principal speakers. The Venice of America Band will offer the musical numbers on Tuesday evening, and Prof. N. Guzman's Spanish orchestra will play on the following afternoon.

The dance, La Golandrina, will be offered by Miss Gracie Moreno. Miss Bess Mathilda Welch will lead in singing "The Star Spangled Banner." Fully costumed, J. M. Riveria, Mrs. Riveria, E. R. Plummer, Rosa Machada, J. Tapia, Mrs. J. Tapia, J. Ruiz and Marie Tapia will dance the Sombrero Blanca, with special calcium-light effect on their terpsichorean efforts. Mrs. S. Grant Goucher will give an American reading, and little 7-year-old Clara Forbes will sing. Spanish characterizations will be presented by Señors Villa and Valle and the Misses Maybelle Warner and Marie Mareno. In addition to these chief celebrations, there will be several private family entertainments of considerable size in various parts of the city, all honoring the first efforts of the Mexican colonists in America to throw off the yoke of the mother country, Spain.

THE COUNTY WE LIVE IN.

BY WALTER J. BALLARD.

In wealth, population and resources Los Angeles is the most important county in Southern California, says the recently-issued report of the California State Agricultural Society.

Within its territory may be found the climate and scenery of almost every part of the State, from the cool and breezy seashore to the warm inland plains and bracing mountain tops. Of the area of the county about four-fifths is capable of cultivation, the remainder being mountainous. The shore line is eighty-five miles in length. Nine-tenths of the population is within from fifteen to thirty miles of the ocean.

The marvelous growth of the county is shown by the fact that within twenty-four years its population has increased more than tenfold, and the assessed valuation of property in proportion—in fact, more so.

The chief industry, says the report, is horticulture, the list of products including everything that can be grown in the State, and almost everything that can be raised in semi-tropical countries. The area of land devoted to horticultural purposes is being rapidly extended, as the large tracts are subdivided and improved. Transportation facilities are excellent. A dozen lines of railroad center in Los Angeles city, tapping almost every section of the county, while Coast steamships call regularly at its leading seaports.

When the big breakwater at San Pedro is completed (a time not now far distant) ocean-going vessels will be able to tie up to the wharves, and Los Angeles city will then be able to compete for its share of the rapidly-increasing trade of the Orient.

The San Gabriel Valley, a choice section of Los Angeles county, and the best known of any portion of Southern California, contains 100 square miles of territory. In it is some of the choicest fruit land in Southern California, largely devoted to the raising of oranges and lemons, as well as the many varieties of deciduous fruits.

The soil and climate of Pomona aValley are peculiarly adapted to the culture of citrus fruits. Railroad facilities are very good and are increasing. The valley contains several flourishing towns, the chief one being Pomona, one of the most thriving cities of Southern California. Orchards encircle Pomona for miles around, with oranges, lemons, peaches, prunes, olives and other fruit trees, a specialty being made of olive culture.

Other important sections of Los Angeles county are Los Nietos Valley, a well-watered district, noted for corn, alfalfa and dairy products; the stretch of country between Los Angeles city and the ocean; San Fernando Valley north of Los Angeles, where fine wheat is largely raised; and Antelope Valley, an elevated section in the north, where land is cheap, water plenty, and products large.

The soil of Los Angeles county is very varied—from light sandy loam to heavy adobe. It is a mistake to assume that farming in the county is only by means of irrigation. For grains and winter crops irrigation is not employed. Corn is irrigated in some localities, but is also successfully grown in many places without irrigation. On irrigated lands two or three crops a year are often raised, enormously increasing land values.

Alfalfa, largely grown for hay, is cut from three to six times a year, and is a most valuable forage plant. Large quantities of wheat and barley (California leads the Union in barley) are raised each year. Corn sometimes reaches twenty feet in height. Pumpkins weighing over 400 pounds each have been raised. Horticultural development in the county has been most rapid and remarkable, with the orange leading, followed by the lemon. Other principal fruits are figs, prunes, almonds, apricots, walnuts, peaches, pears and berries.

Deciduous fruits are shipped fresh, canned, dried and crystallized, all over the Union, to Europe and to many other parts of the world. Beet sugar factories are increasing and enlarging. Los Angeles honey is celebrated all over the United States. Acres and acres of lilies, tuberoses, carnations and other flowers surround Los Angeles city. Celery is grown on hundreds of acres and shipped East by the trainload. Winter vegetables are plentiful.

Among the game found in the county are wild geese, ducks, snipe, rabbits, squirels, foxes, deer, wild cats, California lions and bears.

Plenty of trout in the mountain cañons, and excellent fishing in the ocean.

The mineral wealth of Los Angeles county is important. Including petroleum, it ranks fourth among the mineral-producing counties of the State, and it is the only one which leads in five mineral products. Los Angeles city is the center of many rich mineral fields in Southern California, which produce annually millions upon millions of dollars of new wealth.

The school facilities of Los Angeles county and city are especially good. Besides a complete system of public schools, private schools and colleges abound in Los Angeles, Pasadena and other cities and towns. Scores of churches and one or more religious colleges. Several good public libraries.

America Leads in Cremation.

The French branch of the International Society for the Propagation of Incineration has just published a report which shows, among other things, that cremation is most favored in America, where there are no fewer than thirty-six crematories, which, in 1907, incinerated more than 4000 bodies.

Next in order comes Germany, with fifteen crematories and 2977 bodies incinerated, while in the Argentine Republic there were 976 incinerations. Other figures are: Switzerland, four crematories and 721 incinerations; Great Britain, thirteen crematories and 705 incinerations; Italy, thirty crematories and 442 incinerations; Denmark, seventy-seven incinerations; Sweden, thirty, and Canada, thirty-three.

In France last year there were 451 incinerations at the four crematories. The society comments gloomily on the fact that cremation scarcely seems to become more popular. Although the number of incinerations is larger than in any single year before, there is scarcely a growth in the number of incinerations in the provinces of France. Marseilles, Lyons and Rouen are the only provincial places where crematories exist.—[Exchange.

He Knew They'd Fit.

A Southern colonel had a colored valet by the name of George. George received nearly all of the colonel's cast-off clothing. He had his eyes on a certain pair of light trousers which were not wearing out fast enough to suit him, so he thought he would hasten matters somewhat by rubbing grease on one knee. When the colonel saw the spot, he called George and asked if he had noticed it. George said, "Yes, sah, colonel, I noticed dat spot and tried mighty hard to get it out, but I couldn't."

"Have you tried gasoline?" the colonel asked.

"Yes, sah, colonel, but it didn't do no good."

"Have you tried brown paper and a hot iron?"

"Yes, sah, colonel, I'se done tried 'mos' everything I knows of, but dat spot wouldn't come out."

"Well, George, have you tried ammonia?" the colonel asked as a last resort.

"No, sah, colonel, I ain't tried 'em on yet, but I knows dey'll fit."—[Everybody's Magazine.

A Natural Inference.

"Pa," said Johnnie Dumbley, "what's an apologue?"

"Why, it's a—er—a fable, my son," said Mr. Dumbley. "Usually designed to convey a moral lesson. Why do you ask?"

"Oh, nothin'," said Johnnie; "only I've lost a dime on it. Me and Billie Watkins had a bet, and I said it was the original commandment in the garden of Eden. If the decalogue is the ten commandments I don't see why that first one ain't an appleogue."—[Harper's Weekly.

The Husband's Fault.

"How does it happen to be black now?"

"You forgot, my dear, that she has lost her husband since then."—[Exchange.

NATIONAL STOCK

is the use of denying: the whole world IS stock gambling. It should not be so, but it is so. Senators and ward politicians, bishops and curates, judges and court criers, lawyers, doctors, tailors and newspaper editors and all-round star-[illegible]liers, moralists, and, and, and—their mothers, wives and sweethearts, and Faro Jim and Race Track Dan and all the gang.

e believe that the whole world is not stock gambling, but m they all come for a "heart-to-heart" "don't for goodke give us away investment" know that broadly speakthe world IS stock gambling. And why not? The age is age, a give-me-ease-and-comfort-and-luxury-and-give-it-tot age, and the only respectable short cut to quick and easy is a stock gamble.

bishop would not game in stocks or in anything else, boy IS at college and his daughter MUST be brought up, ile he and his good wife have all and more to supply their wants it is their duty "to invest their little fortune to advantage." Red Mike is "dead on to how the trick was that shot Morgan and his pals to the top of life's ladder good enough for his swag all right, all right." From the rooster on the top round to the one glued to the rung in and all the in-betweens, they are all gambling in stocks. their act gambling, but to us who have the hopper business, to us who look at the hopper's contents with glasses, we know all the "investments," "speculations," "business ventures" bear the same tag—"stock gamsomething for nothing." When the Philadelphia High blic purist was confidentially told that Harriman was to Union Pacific dividend to 10 per cent. overnight and he 5000 shares at 150 with his earthly all, $50,000, as marwhen Union Pacific jumped to 196, and his $50,000 turned 000, he knew he had only been investing. But when ific afterwards dropped like a bolt from the blue to 100 $250,000 had disappeared in pale, yellow atmosphere, and t was a vacuum into which had been sucked all the which he was trustee, the coroner found pinned to his remains this truth tag: "All that remains of a gambling the world DOES stock gamble, as is evidenced by the unle public records, which show:

—The industries of the American people are represented $70,000,000,000 of paper tokens, stocks, bonds, which are on the stock exchanges.

—The purchase and sale of these paper tokens each year the employment of more money than all the manufacall the farming and all the transportation business of the people.

3d—The amount of deposited money in the banks and trust companies of America which subsist directly and indirectly on the business of stock gambling and which represents the capital and savings of the American people, is far greater in amount than that employed in all other business.

4th—The amount of money taken each year for the living expenses of these directly and indirectly engaged in the business of stock gambling, not a man of whom is a legitimate producer of anything of value to his fellows, is far greater than that taken by those engaged in managing any ten lines of legitimate business.

5th—The destroying value and destroying-energy effect on all legitimate business of the American people by the rise and fall of the price value of the $70,000,000,000 of paper tokens of wealth produced through the agency of stock gambling has been far greater during the past forty years than that produced by all the earthquakes, floods, fires, famines, wars and labor-unions.

6th—The effect, the bad effect, the heart-depressing soul-crushing, hope-destroying, energy-numbing effect on the American people by the accumulation of monstrously mammoth private fortunes through the agency of stock gambling during the past quarter of a century is far greater than the ill effects of all the socialistic, anarchistic, laboristic and professional thievistic preachings and practices of the past 200 years.

All the world IS stock gambling. If the American world continues to stock gamble during the coming ten years on the increasing ratio of the past twenty-five, it is inevitable that the name "American" will hold but the same relation to human freedom as the name Darwin does to man, as much, no more.

No question, no combined one hundred questions which will be asked during the coming ten years will carry the same vital import to the American people as the one, "How can stock gambling as at present conducted be stopped?"

There is but one way to stop stock gambling as at present conducted. And it is obvious to all students of affairs that there is but one way possible, for all other ways have been tried, and have failed, absolutely failed. Fearless President Roosevelt's efforts, the efforts of Congresses, State Legislatures, the courts, the press, the labor-unions, the politicians—and the muckrakers—have absolutely failed. The recent past shows conclusively that in spite of the earnest efforts of these classes stock gambling has not been crushed, but on the contrary that it has flourished until today it is being carried on upon a 1000 pe rcent. bigger basis than it was twenty-five years ago, and for evidence I point to the last October panic, where quicker, mightier and more dastardly brazen tricks were pulled off with a 1000 per cent. greater profit in money and "glory" than ever before.

The only way possible to stop stock gambling is "National Stock."

1st—Because "National Stock" is already since its recent launching an assured success. It is now assured that the American people and Europeans will buy from its treasury unlimited amounts of its unlimited possessions of "National Stock" until 2d—"National Stock" will be possessed of at least as much cash for all practical stock market purposes as the System.

3d—With this cash and its knowledge of the stock gambling game, and its machinery for harnessing this game, which knowledge and machinery is as great as the System's, it will be as able to dominate the price of the $70,000,000,000 of stocks and bonds as the System.

4th—From the fact that it will never bring this cash, knowledge and machinery into play but on the RIGHT side of the stock gambling game, and then only when the System is already engaged on the WRONG side of the stock gambling game, it must inevitably have the System beaten to a shredded frazzle every time it opposes them.

And now that "National Stock" has been successfully launched, now that its pamphlets, reward blanks and orders for stock are rolling up an astounding success, and now that it is patent to all that "National Stock," in spite of the gigantic efforts of the System through its banks, trust companies, subsidized brokers and stock exchange officials and that portion of the press which is in its hire, has swept everything before it until at present its fast increasing success is holding the attention of the whole thinking world, it is meet that I should close the first chapter of its history and go to the second.

I can now say to the world what I could not say at its launching without the danger of dampening the ardor of the scores of thousands whose only enlisting motive was profit.

"National Stock's" foundation motive is to destroy stock gambling.

"National Stock" will destroy stock gambling as at present conducted, because it will first make so much money by making at will the price of the $70,000,000,000 of stocks and bonds on the stock exchanges, that the whole world will buy "National Stock," which in turn will give "National Stock" such additional power that it will either

1st—Absolutely crush and destroy the System, or

2d—Compel the System to abandon its present methods of doing business, in which event "National Stock" will go out of its present business by merging itself into my final remedy, and at this merging will return to all owners of "National Stock" their original investment plus the enormous accumulated profits.

In other words (I call the attention of my most vicious critics to this most vital part of my plan) I knew before launching "National Stock" that if it once got the hold of the people it already had secured that it would quickly compel the System to abandon the methods by which the System has been crushing the American people and adopt those employed by "National Stock," which acknowledgment of "National Stock's" success will in itself bring into full play my final remedy. It was for this great end more than the profit to investors in "National Stock" that I toiled and schemed for twenty years to successfully launch my plan, because when once all the world realizes what has now become visible to Wall Street—that "National Stock" has the System on the run—the realization will in itself fully bloom my final remedy, and my work will have been finished and the American people will have come into their own.

Since the launching of "National Stock" the common rallying ground of my critics has been "How can he be sure of success when he enters the market against the System?" The answer should now be clearly visible even to ordinary minds. Even if "National Stock" and the System were equal in cash, market knowledge and market machinery, the System would go down before "National Stock" in every detail because "National Stock" will never enter the stock market to oppose the System, but in cases where the System is engaged in one of its robbery-of-the-people campaigns, that is, when the System has bid up stocks by dishonest methods to an artificial height for the purpose of unloading upon the people, "National Stock," with its newspaper advertising broadsides, will scream the dishonesty so fiercely and so shrilly as to produce a stock market panic, and in the inevitable tumble it will make the millions the System loses. On the other hand, when the System has dishonestly depreciated stocks to shake out the public, as in the October panic, "National Stock" will raise the whole world to a buying movement which will make the combined efforts of Standard Oil, Morgan et al. resemble a cat-o'-nine-tail dike in the course of a Niagara.

The System can never corner or "panic-strike" "National Stock" in its market operations, because "National Stock's" operations will never be based upon a dishonest or artificial basis. And why should they be, when the System will supply it with all the opportunities it requires, or (and here is the very nubbing of "National Stock's" reason for existence) the System will reform its methods and —"National Stock" will have most gloriously fulfilled its mission.

I will illustrate the tremendous power of "National Stock" to make money and at the same time to crush the System.

AMERICAN SMELTERS

American Smelting Trust is probably the richest corpon all the world in its future possibilities for money makits stockholders.

—It has great smelting plants scattered throughout the States, Canada, Mexico. When business is good it has the of the richest of the continent's mines brought to its it coins money for its stockholders.. When business is takes out of the ground from its own mines their enorealth, and—coins money for its stockholders.

—Through its extraordinary opportunities for insight into mines on the continent it has been able to buy the very of them all and at bedrock prices, at bedrock prices bedeals direct with the miners, and also because of this it able to get together a band of the best engineers and which in turn means that it will always have the best properties in the United States, Canada and Mexico.

—The business is in the hands of seven young, honest, able men, the Guggenheim brothers, who inherited the business from their father, who laid the foundation for its enormous success. These men are brainy enough to know that they can get more of what is of value to humans out of their business by playing honest and fair with the public than by doing otherwise.

4th—The Guggenheims from inheritance and environment and business association trained with the System forces. They would shudder at the idea of defying the System by affiliating with "National Stock." Therefore "National Stock," which has no likes or dislikes but exists only for the purpose of accomplishing its great end in any legal and honest way, determined to connect up with American Smelters without the by-your-leave of the Guggenheims.

To that end, while Wall street wined and dined and carded and mirrored itself into its habitual state of "public-be-damnedness," "we-are-the-whole-shooting-matchness," "National Stock" burned the midnight kerosene digging out the facts and formulating plans which when laid before him looked so good to one of the Rockefellers that he boarded the American Smelters express with the determination to go through with it to its plainly evident destination—success, tremendous success. It should be borne in mind that there is always some powerful member of the Rockefeller band ready to board any Dollar enterprise which assures him big profits for his capital.

It should also be borne in mind that "National Stock" cares not a finger snap who its fellow-passengers are in its market voyages provided it is sure of the honesty of the voyage and the profits to be made from the trip.

The result: With Smelters selling at 57 I began an advertising campaign for its purchase, and it quickly mounted to 70, where its quick rise and my advertising arrested the attention of two bold System plungers, who concluded that it had risen solely because of my work and not because of the unlimited buying of a Rockefeller. These plungers laid out a campaign to sell Smelters short. They were encouraged by certain powerful System men who may or may not have been in league with the bull end of the campaign—but this is a story for a future advertisement. During the past few weeks Wall Street has gazed open-mouthed at the conflict which has waged around Smelters which soon became evident to all, but which divided itself to Wall Street as the System on one side and "National Stock" on the other. The short sellers have sold and sold and sold until at present time they are probably short more stock than has ever been shorted since short selling was invented. The paper losses to the two System plungers are enormous, for Smelters is now close to 100, but worse than their present paper losses is the fact that they know now that they can never buy back what they have sold without running the price of Smelters into the clouds. In the meantime the System men who have encouraged them into slipping the noose over their heads have consoled them and loaned them great blocks of Smelters stock against the day of their final rounding up. In the meantime again "National Stock" stands ready awaiting the first sign of their becoming panic-stricken and attempting to buy back what they have sold when the stock will be jumped so quickly and to such heights as to drive another large nail in the coffin of the stock gambling game, while Wall Street is frenziedly guessing why American Smelters is acting so mysteriously.

I cite the above simply as an illustration of one of the thousands of possibilities of profits for "National Stock."

The following is a morsel of reflection fodder for the shorts on Smelters. This one advertisement which goes all over the world and which will be read by probably 50,000,000 e will probably create over 10,000 new buyers for Smelters. If they average 50 shares each their buying alone will cause the stock to advance $30 to $50 and the rise because of this g should so panic strike the two System plungers as to start them buying back the 350,000 to 400,000 shares they are now short, which in itself should carry the price to the 190 I have cted for it, and which it is inevitable it will sell at—it sold last year at 175. Also by way of comfort to the shorts. If this advertisement does not produce the full effect it will be repeated does, for I have decided that one of my duties to "National Stock" and the public is to cry the merits of Smelters until I have placed the stock in the hands of 100 times as many stockrs as the Guggenheims and the System have been able to secure for it by their combined ten years' efforts—already I have probably more than doubled the number of its stockholders.

TO GAMBLERS

ask again, as I did in my first advertisement, y stock gambler intelligently answer this n—Why should he buy 1000 shares of Sysck, say Union Pacific selling at 165, and put 000 margin, which will be lost in any of its us 15 point drops—why should he do this for the chance to secure a 10 point profit, or $10,000, when with the same margin he can buy 30,000 shares of "National Stock" at say $2, which in a short time will sell at say $4, and thereby pay him $60,000 profit, and at no time during the operation could he in all probability lose his margin of $15,000, or 25 per cent. on the price of "National Stock." In the first section of my campaign I did not encourage margin buying of "National Stock" even by stock gamblers, but so great has become the demand from this class that I now advise all stock gamblers—bear in mind I say stock gamblers, only; that is, those who insist upon gambling upon margin in the System's stocks—to buy "National Stock" in preference to any System stock, even Smelters, and I refer all such buyers to the advertisement of C. C. Clapp & Co., with whom "National Stock" has entered into arrangements for the handling of this branch of "National Stock's" business.

Put teaspoon currant or strawberry jelly on top. For 5 persons.

DATES IN BREAKFAST FOOD AND DESSERT.—(Miss Emilia Lundberg, Coronado.) Many dry breakfast foods to be eaten with milk or cream may be made more palatable by addition of dates from which stones have been removed. Many people avoid use of dates because of tough skins. If boiling water is turned over them these skins may be removed without difficulty. Rice and dates make a pleasing dessert. Cook cup rice in double boiler with pint milk and pint water until soft. Sweeten to taste and flavor with vanilla. Have cup prepared dates, turn rice in center of dish and lay dates around it. Serve with milk or cream. When dates are chopped and added to ice cream they give a pleasant variety. They may be used in ordinary custard and blancmange. A nice dessert can be made from boiled mush left from breakfast, adding generous quantity of shredded dates. Mold it in cups and serve cold with cream or pure maple syrup.

STUFFED DATES AND WHIPPED CREAM.—(Mrs. Charles C. Bell, R. R., No. 2, Norwalk.) Seed about 1 pound fine dates; fill vacant spaces with finely-chopped walnut or pecan meats, and press into original shape. Stew until tender in little hot water; add last sugar and little lemon juice. Whip cup double cream with 1 cup milk with whip churn. Remove froth, drain and pile in pretty dish with dates around it. Serve cold.

STUFFED DATES WITH WHIPPED CREAM.—(Mrs. Alice Watson, No. 133 Hill street.) Remove seeds from choice dates. Fill with English walnut or pecan nut meats, and press into original shape. Stew until tender in little hot water, adding last sugar and lemon juice. Whip cup double cream and cup milk with whip churn. Remove froth, drain, and serve with dates around it.

DESSERT CALIFORNIA.—(Miss Emilia Lundberg, Coronado.) Take 4 equalized oranges, remove peel and divide in eighths, being careful not to break delicate membrane. Prepare sugar syrup of ½ cup sugar and 2 tablespoons water and boil until little dropped into cold water will crack. Butter inside of cake pan about 4 inches in height, dip orange sections in syrup and line sides of pan, taking care that they overlap, so sugar will make them adhere to each other and form solid ring. When they are set, slightly warm tin by wrapping cloth wrung out of hot water around it, remove ring and place on low, flat fancy dish and fill with macaroon cream, made as follows: Whip pint cream to stiff froth, sweeten to taste, flavor with almond extract, add dessert spoon granulated gelatine, softened in 2 tablespoons cold water and dissolved over hot water, and heaping cup macaroon crumbs, finely crushed and sifted. When partly stiffened, fill orange ring and set in cold place to become solid.

DUCHESS CREAM.—(Mrs. Minnie Hazel, Imperial.) Soak 1 cup large tapioca over night in cold water. Drain thoroughly, then merely cover with hot water, and set on stove to simmer, stirring until clear. When cold, add to tapioca 1 large can pineapple, either grated or sliced fine, 1 large cup sugar, juice of 2 lemons. Beat whites of 2 eggs to stiff froth. Whip in when ready to serve. Serve in glasses. Large spoonful of whipped cream on top is nice with this. Must be served cold.

The Power of Water.

Nothing is softer than water, yet nothing is more powerful, when properly applied. It is only by practical experiment that some people can be convinced of its potent force.

At a recent entertainment in Leavenworth a wager was made that the strongest man present could not stand a quart of water, dropped into his open hand, drop by drop, from a height of three feet. A strong, manly fellow eagerly accepted the bet, thinking that to stand the force of such a small quantity of water was mere child's play.

Before 500 drops had fallen into his hand, he almost cried with pain and said he had enough. After a little water had fallen, each drop seemed to crush his hand and a blister in the center of it was the result. This is a very practical illustration of the old adage that constant dropping wears away stones.

Like Usual Expert Testimony.

A mountaineer intimated that he knew a great deal about a moonshiner on trial in a Kentucky court, and thereby got free transportation to Louisville to testify for the State.

"What can you tell us about this man?" asked the District Attorney.

"Waal," he answered, swelling with importance, "I seen this feller riding along the road in the het of a hot day on a pacing roan nag, and a-waving of a flag and a blowing of a horn; and I ax him if that war a Blue Grass horse or a Chitterling breed, and he said it war."—[Harper's Weekly.

Champagne an Income Test.

"Why," asked the young doctor, "do you always order champagne for every new patient that comes in?" "Because, my boy," replied the old practitioner, "I can judge by what the patient says whether or not he can afford it. That helps me when I come to make out my bill."—[Dundee Advertiser.

The Sign of Power.

It is the greatest manifestation of power to be calm. It is easy to be active. Let the reins go, and the horses will drag you down. Any one can do that; but he who can stop the plunging horses is the strong man. Which requires the greater strength—letting go, or restraining? The calm man is not the man who is dull. You must not mistake calmness for dullness or laziness. . . . Activity is the manifestation of the lower strength, calmness of the superior strength—[Swami Vivekananda.

AT REST.

THOUSANDS HONOR THE SLAIN CAPTAIN.

Cities Far and Near Unite in Last Tribute to Martyred Officer.

Rich and Poor Attend Impressive Masonic Funeral. Magnificent Mass of Flowers from Organizations and Individuals—Grief of Family Pitiful—Faithful Chinese Friend Assists in Bearing Casket.

SURROUNDED by thousands of sorrowing friends the body of the late Walter H. Auble, captain of police, who was murdered by Carl D. Sutherland, a burglar, was interred in the Inglewood Park Cemetery, yesterday afternoon. The cortege was one of the largest ever seen in Los Angeles. At least 3000 persons were turned away from the Scottish Rite Cathedral, in which the service was held, and twenty-one cars were needed to convey those who wished to attend the service at the grave.

The body was taken to the cathedral at 1:30 o'clock and fifteen minutes later the city officials escorted the immediate family from the residence at No. 1817 South Hope street to the assembly room of the cathedral.

An immense crowd had gathered at the doors and after those who were invited to attend the service were seated, 1100 more were admitted, but the most of the people were forced to remain outside.

The interior of the funeral hall presented a magnificent, yet solemn, appearance. In the center of the stage, which was set with a cathedral scene, was the coffin, at each corner of which stood a guard of honor at attention. Around this central group were the settings for the officers of a Masonic lodge, the seat of the master in the east.

In front, and on both sides of the platform was the floral display, a remarkable collection of blossoms even for Southern California. There were about 150 designs and nearly as many casket bouquets.

The gallery was thrown open to the public, but the ground floor was reserved for members of the police and fire departments, Scottish Rite Masons, members of the West Gate Lodge, No. 335, of which Capt. Auble was a member, and others specially invited.

IMPRESSIVE MASONIC RITUAL.

The service was conducted according to the Masonic ritual by West Gate Lodge, with Rev. Will A. Knighten acting as chaplain. As soon as the family was seated, the officers of the lodge took their places around the bier on the platform. These officers were H. W. Louis, Worshipful Master; J. Jacobs, Senior Warden; Frank J. Edwards, Junior Warden; August Wackenbarth, Secretary, and the Chaplain.

Music was rendered by a choir under the direction of J. J. Falls, organist of the cathedral. The singers included Miss Willie Smyser, Miss Kie Julie Cristin, John Douglass Walker and F. B. McComas. The selections rendered were "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," "There is a Friend in the Homeland," and "Safe in the Arms of Jesus."

Earl Auble, son of the late captain, fainted during the prayer by Rev. Mr. Knighten, and it was necessary to remove him to an ante-room.

At the close of the service every one was requested to remain seated until the funeral cortege had left the hall.

MANY TOWNS REPRESENTED.

Representatives from the police departments of nearly all of the near-by towns and from some a long distance away attended the service. The visitors included twelve members of the Pasadena police department, under command of Chief Favour; Chief of Police William T. Ely of San Diego, and W. Tusler, C. T. Ford and E. F. Hughes of the Oakland police department.

On Hope street, in front of the cathedral, the various civic bodies formed in line for the march to Washington street and Grand avenue, where cars were waiting to convey them to Inglewood.

Two hundred police, under command of Lieut. Williams, led the procession. Lieut. Lenhausen acted as marshal. One of the most striking figures in the line was Capt. W. C. Roberts (retired,) who is now 69 years old. Patrolman Banks was color bearer for the police.

After the officers came thirty firemen, headed by Assistant Chief O'Donnel, Battalion Chief Todd, and Capt. Martin Brueflat. Following, were members of the health department in uniform; Mayor Harper, Chief of Police Kern, and representatives from the Council, Fire, Police and Park commissions, and West Gate Lodge.

Behind the hearse marched the active pallbearers, who were Capt. P. E. Flammer, Capt. T. H. Broadhead, Lieut. C. E. Dixon, Lieut. A. W. Murray, Detectives Moffatt, Hawley and McKenzie, and Officer R. H. Hilf.

The honorary pallbearers were Sergt. W. H. McKeag, Detectives Talamantes and Ritch, and Officers H. C. Walker, C. L. Johnson, J. H. McGraw, J. M. Harrison and William Matuskiwiz.

Mrs. Auble, her daughters, Julia and Gladys, and son, Earl, and Matron Gilbert of the police department, were in one carriage.

The line of march was south on Hope street to Washington, thence east to Grand avenue, where were the cars donated by H. E. Huntington.

COLLEGE FLAG LOWERED.

While the people were boarding the cars, Father Glass had the flag at St. Vincent's College lowered to half-mast and the bell in the church was tolled.

At the cemetery the body was interred with Masonic ceremonies, in a grave midway down a hill that faces the southwest.

An appropriate memorial entry was made in the log book of the Thirty-second Degree Masons, referring to the late captain as "a brave officer, a good citizen, a loving friend, a true Mason." It was signed by C. S. Walton, E. P. Northmore, John Bloeser, Jr., Thomas W. Reilly and H. H. Henderson.

Prior to the funeral the body of Capt. Auble lay in state at Bresee Brother's Chapel for three hours. During this time a continuous stream of people of every station in life passed by the bier to take a last look at the face of the faithful official.

The casket was placed at the entrance of the chapel and was surmounted by a mass of flowers, prominent among which was the bouquet of red roses sent by Julia Auble, in remembrance of the many pictures of red roses painted by her for her father, that being his favorite flower.

At each corner of the bier stood patrolmen in full uniform, at attention. These officers were Richards, McCain, Burch and Miller, who had served many years under the man whose body they were guarding. Around the room floral offerings were piled tier on tier.

Among those who came to look and mourn were many of the prominent men of the city, and many poor who remembered some kind word or deed of the captain. There were few dry eyes.

Chin Wing, the faithful friend of the police officer was there and when it came time to put the coffin in the hearse, he said:

"I am sick within. I must help." He put his hands under the coffin and assisted in carrying it, tears streaming down his face.

MASSES OF FLOWERS.

Among the floral tributes was a wreath and star from the police department, made of roses and ferns. The Sheriff's office sent a broken wheel of lilies and carnations; H. E. Huntington, a wreath of bay leaves and roses; Mayor Harper, a standing wreath of lilies and carnations; the Park Commission, a pillow of lilies and carnations; the Police Commission, a wreath of roses and ferns; the Fire Commission, a wreath of roses and ferns; the Receiving Hospital, an anchor of white and pink carnations; City Hall employés, two wreaths of carnations; the Japanese of Los Angeles, a wreath of carnations, roses and tiger lilies; Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Sepulveda, a cross of carnations and tea roses; Capt. and Mrs. Paul Flammer, bouquet of tea roses; Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, pillow of pink and white roses; A. Hamburger & Sons., star of carnations and lavender centurias; Liberal Alliance, anchor of white carnations and lavender centurias; William A. and Allen Pinkerton, wreath of white carnations and roses; W.C.T.U., bouquet of carnations; Founders' and Employés' Association, pillow of carnations; Capt. and Mrs. Broadhead, bouquet of roses; Los Angeles Gas and Electric Company, pillow of tiger lilies, roses and carnations; Mrs. Herman W. Hellman, anchor of daisies; Chief of Police and Mrs. Kern, bouquet of roses; Mrs. Walter B. Cline, wreath of roses and carnations; officers of United States Courts, harp of roses and lilies; Pasadena police department, crown of white roses and ferns; Newmark Brothers, wreath of lavender centurias and white carnations; Fred and Edward Maier, wreath of carnations and centurias; Los Angeles Brewing Company, wreath of carnations and roses; Mr. and Mrs. Byron Erkenbrecher, harp of carnations; Charley, the vegetable boy, cross of tiger lilies.

FAMILY OVERCOME.

Before the funeral, the state of the family of the late official was pitiful. Earl Auble went from one fainting fit into another. His sister, Julia, was in about the same condition. Mrs. Auble tried her best to keep up, but was unable to do so, and it was necessary for Dr. Quint to be in attendance most of the morning.

Mrs. Auble had received an unusually severe shock on the day of the murder. When she learned that her husband had been shot, she went to the Receiving Hospital. The scene that confronted her might have killed some women. Her husband had been placed under an anesthetic and the surgeons were cutting him open.

Gladys Auble, the youngest daughter, showed splendid fortitude. Just before the body was removed from the home, she went to the coffin and pinned a white carnation on the lapel of the dead man's coat.

CHINAMAN'S GREAT GRIEF.

One of the most pathetic things in connection with the funeral was the grief of Chin Wing. Early yesterday morning he visited the Auble home, bearing two magnificent floral offerings. Then he went to Bresee Brothers' chapel. As he looked on the face of the departed, he repeated the prayer to the dead, according to the faith of his fathers. As he passed out, his hatred of the murderer blazed forth.

"He should be burned, and his ashes cast in the vile places of the earth," he shouted. "I would like to tear his flesh with my teeth."

CIRCUMNAVIGATING THE GLOBE.

After having spent nearly half a year in a tour of the Orient, O. A. Dicks and Harold L. Hayman, both of London, arrived yesterday at the Lankershim, and will remain about a week, while visiting points of interest in this vicinity. Mr. Dicks is a wealthy merchant, and has taken to travel as a hobby. "Our long journey through China and all of the more important Asiatic countries was very interesting," he said, "and afforded us great insight into the difference in the mode of life between the people of that continent and those of Europe or America. We will travel leisurely across the United States, with our objective point New York, and from that port to old London, where we will have completed an entire circumnavigation of the world."

VACATION FOR WILLIAMS.

Fred J. Williams, chief deputy in the Coroner's office, will take a needed vacation, beginning Tuesday or Wednesday, and lasting about a month Mr. Williams will visit Chicago, going thence to Ohio and back to Minnesota, and will return by way of the Canadian Pacific Railroad. COLORADO RIVER LANDS

BLYTHE RANCH

THE OPPORTUNITY OF TO-DAY

RICH LANDS ON THE COLORADO RIVER $35 UP INCLUDING WATER RIGHTS EASY TERMS

Blythe Ranch lies in the zone of the greatest agricultural activity of the day. The eyes of the nation are on this promising section of the Great Southwest. Ever since Pres. Roosevelt in his message to Congress pointed out the great agricultural possibilities in the rich valleys tributary to the Colorado River, and made the startling prophecy that this is destined to become the richest and most thickly settled agricultural section in the United States, the attention of the settler from every part of the nation has turned to this new field for settlement.

The richest agricultural communities of the world are former desert lands, which have been reclaimed by irrigation. Within the banks of the Colorado River (The American Nile) flows abundant water to reclaim and fully develop this vast empire of agricultural resources.

The great productive power of these rich lands will eventually make them worth from $500 to $1500 per acre. With intensive methods of cultivation and a high state of development these lands will become the highest priced in the United States.

Blythe Ranch opens up a profitable field for the homeseeker and the investor. The same advantages which induced Thos. Blythe nearly 40 years ago to select Blythe Rancho in preference to all other lands along the Colorado, appeal to those who investigate its wonderful resources today. Its elevation (above sea level), its pure drinking water, clear titles, established water rights, its strategic location, with regard to the water situation, give it decided advantages over the lower valleys of the Colorado. The soil is equal to that of the best Imperial Valley lands. The water situation is without an equal in the Southwest. Its location between two great trans-continental systems insures adequate transportation facilities. The climate meets every requirement for health and prosperity of the settler.

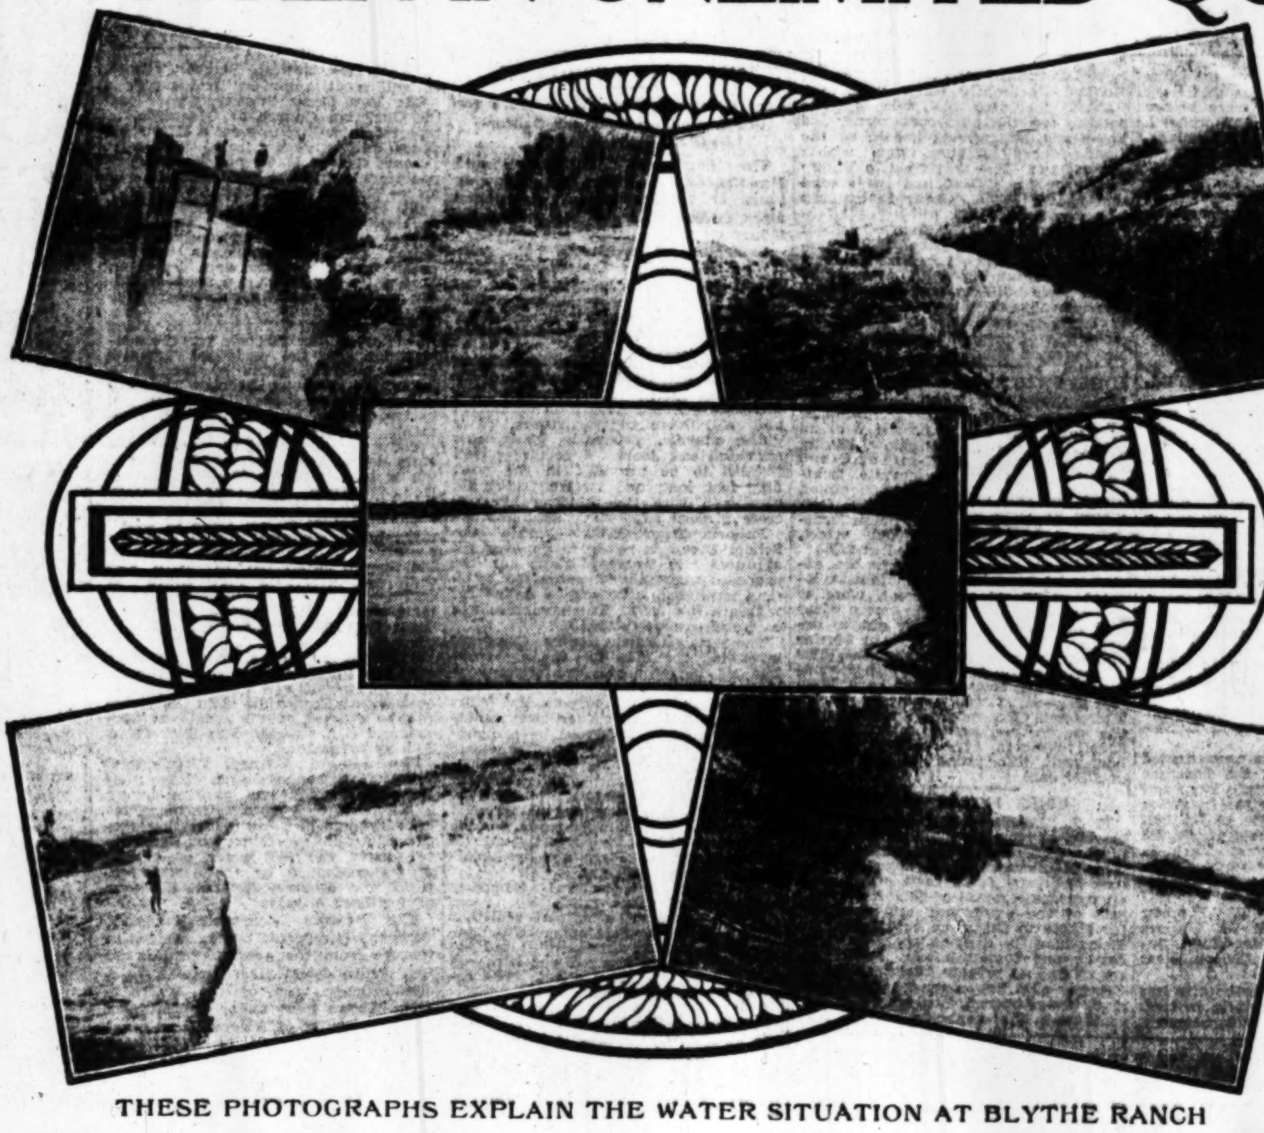
WATER IN UNLIMITED QUANTITIES

No Dry Years

There is no danger of a shortage in the water supply at Blythe Ranch. Water rights, sufficient to provide for the irrigation of 100,000 acres, have been appropriated direct from the flow of the Colorado River under the laws of California.

Water is the crying need of the California rancher. With an unlimited water supply at his disposal, the success of the Blythe rancher is made certain.

The Government has shown its faith in this section by the expenditure of three millions on the Laguna Dam Project just below Blythe Ranch. Water rights, under government irrigation, will cost $35 per acre. You can buy Blythe Ranch lands at $35 up INCLUDING WATER RIGHTS. You have no water rights to buy or water to develop at Blythe Ranch—the water is there in unlimited quantities, ready to be turned on the land.



THESE PHOTOGRAPHS EXPLAIN THE WATER SITUATION AT BLYTHE RANCH

No Worn Out Farms

The soil at Blythe Ranch will never wear out. It is a rich alluvial deposit, constantly renewed and enriched by the regenerating waters of the Colorado.

The practical farmer who knows good soil when he sees it realizes that there will never be any "worn out" farms at Blythe Ranch—that with a soil rich in chemical constituents and an abundant supply of fertilizing water the most severe cropping will not exhaust the great producing qualities of these lands.

No fertilizing will ever be necessary at Blythe Ranch. It is estimated that the fertilizer brought in by the waters of the Colorado River each year has a commercial value of $8.50 per acre. The farmer who has lived in a community where whole farms are bought over and over again by the cost of fertilizing can appreciate this valuable feature of Blythe Ranch.

No Crop Failures

Crops are certain at Blythe Ranch. With an inexhaustible soil, an unfailing water supply and a good growing climate, intelligent farming methods are sure to bring success.

The growing season begins early at Blythe Ranch and continues almost the year round without interruption. Crops in this section mature early—6 to 8 weeks in advance of other localities, and are ready for the high prices commanded by the early market.

A ready market will continue to exist for Blythe Ranch products. The rich mining districts and the incoming settlers will afford a strong home market, and extended transportation facilities in the near future will give a convenient outlet to the markets of the world.

Clear Titles

There is no uncertainty about titles at Blythe Ranch. Titles are derived from the State of California and the United States government and are free from all possible contentions. An absolute title is guaranteed the purchaser of Blythe Ranch lands.

NO "HARD TIMES."

Local Realty Firm Reviews Its Business for Last Six Months and Does Not Complain.

Reviewing business for the past six months, the Burck-Gwynn Company do not complain of the so-called hard times. During the period mentioned, the firm has established two new thriving communities in places where six months ago there was nothing except the attractive locations on which the present communities are situated.

The first is Lawrence Burck's Cottage Home tract on Western avenue, Fifty-fifth and Fifty-sixth streets, where fifty or more nice bungalows were built and are now occupied by the following families: John T. Drewett, William Hegner, Paul Goetsch, Agnes E. Seydel, Emma Diederich, L. H. Diederich, E. F. Brownell, C. C. Henry, F. T. Shipman, William Orchard, R. D. Magee, J. H. Burke, Charles Clutter, J. S. Smith, J. C. Donoghue, Nelson P. Young, A. N. Roberts, L. E. Brownell, C. H. West, Ida M. Barnes, J. T. Hudgens, C. A. Bunker, F. A. Sheldon, O. H. Goetsch, David Jones, Ethel M. Carmichael, T. H. Moore, Willard Taylor, C. L. Howe, Harvey L. Sims, R. V. Ober, C. F. Lundin, G. M. Van Stenis, G. E. Cota, F. J. Hawk, Calla M. Glore, D. M. Wright, C. W. Berry, J. H. Ibe, C. H. Gahan, W. G. Kelly, Samuel Fox, E. F. Campbell, W. R. Colby, Jr., G. H. Cornelsin, C. M. Stevenson, L. L. Fanning and Walter T. Fahrnkopf.

This community has its own store, substation postoffice, fire house and apparatus, and has formed a community improvement association, which has secured for their section almost everything they desired.

The second new community built up by the firm is located on Huntington Drive, the new and beautiful boulevard between Los Angeles and Pasadena on the four-track Short Line electric railway, and now shows thirty or more very attractive bungalows, where only a few short months ago there was nothing but the beautiful open valley. This community also boasts of its own stores and other community improvements of all kinds. The homes were built for the following people: Edward M. Young, Aloysius Leppert, A. J. Roberts, G. L. Baxter, E. J. Seyfried, Carlotta Jennings, H. L. Miller, Margaret Condon, H. L. Blake and Anders Peterson, Edward W. Martin, A. C. Munson, C. N. Hughes, Louise B. Duerr, Dick Gamble, Bennett Ferry, H. C. Broderson, Shirley L. Thomas, John P. Mott, H. J. Foster, E. K. Smith, Absalom Anderson, R. T. Lamb, C. J. Fadley, L. H. Fadley, Estelle Warner.

In addition to the buildings, the following sales of lots were made in this tract, the official name of which is the Los Angeles-Pasadena Boulevard tract: To Paul Blades, M. M. Cartwright, William Neller, E. H. Whittaker, D. C. Condon, Lucy A. Warriner, G. W. Beals, E. M. Young, Carlotta Jennings (two.) R. T. Lamb and C. O. Washburn. The firm has built three bungalows for Paul H. Blades.

In addition to these two special points of activity, the firm has built six very handsome bungalows in Upper Rampart Heights, situated on West First street, Coronado street and Rampart boulevard. These houses were built for the following people: Otto Steinen, J. P. Mott, Mrs. Francis T. Graham, D. B. Rose, J. C. Gardner and Willie V. Camp. During the same period, the firm sold lots in this tract which will be improved with homes later on to the following: Horace C. Kellogg, Belle Margaret Hutchings, P. J. Horsch, Jr., Esther J. Scott, C. A. Gibbs and A. E. Senseney.

In the Southwest, the firm is part owner and selling agent for the beautiful property south of Adams street, known as Burck's Golden Tract, between Vermont avenue and Hoover street, from Fifty-first and Fifty-ninth streets. Sales in this tract for the period have been made of from one to ten lots each, to the following people: Charles H. Easton, Lottie M. Fritz, E. W. Chaney, Oscar Thonell, A. L. Cerro, R. M. Cook, George S. Welch, J. S. Best, T. T. Todd, L. A. Bailey, May N. Heady, Fred E. Edmison and James A. Majonnier.

This community is building up very fast indeed, twelve or fifteen bungalows having been built in the tract already. The section has its community improvement association, which has lately succeeded in securing many favors from the city fathers in the nature of schools, fire protection, better mail service and other things.

During the last few weeks, or since about the middle of August, the firm has secured another property on Long Beach avenue, near Fifty-eighth street. Car service there is good, bringing passengers from the tract into the business portion of the city in twelve to fifteen minutes. At this point, the firm has lately sold lots and contracted to build cottages as follows: For J. P. Conn, Joseph Pencini, Will Taylor, O. A. Miller, James McSherry, E. L. Stevens and J. W. Baxter.

While these activities in concentrated sections were going on, the firm has built residences running into large and high priced buildings for the following persons: George H. Chase, at No. 2842 Orange street, Lee Phillips, at No. 123 South Bunker Hill avenue, Mary L. Stringfellow, South Pasadena, Mrs. Bird B. Loomis, at No. 2893 Orange street, Mrs. Julia Tryon at No. 2627 Harvard boulevard, F. W. Hughes, Walnut Lawn, James R. H. Wagner on the Cudahy Ranch, Mr. Wood, Cudahy Ranch and P. A. Wilcox, East Hollywood.

During the same period, the firm has had unusual success, or luck, in their down-town business sales department, in which the actual total of sales for the last six months run a little over $1,250,000 including the sale of the building on the northeast corner of Third and Hill streets known as the Pacific Mutual building, twice within ninety days. The first time to Phillip L. Wilson for $543,000 and the second time to the W. H. Obear Investment Company for $600,000.

All branches of the firm's business has been active and steadily increasing and Mr. Burck states that if money could be obtained easily, at nominal rates, their building operations would be tripled. In other words, the amount of business done is only limited by the supply of money obtainable at nominal rates of interest.

REPORTS TWO EXCHANGES.

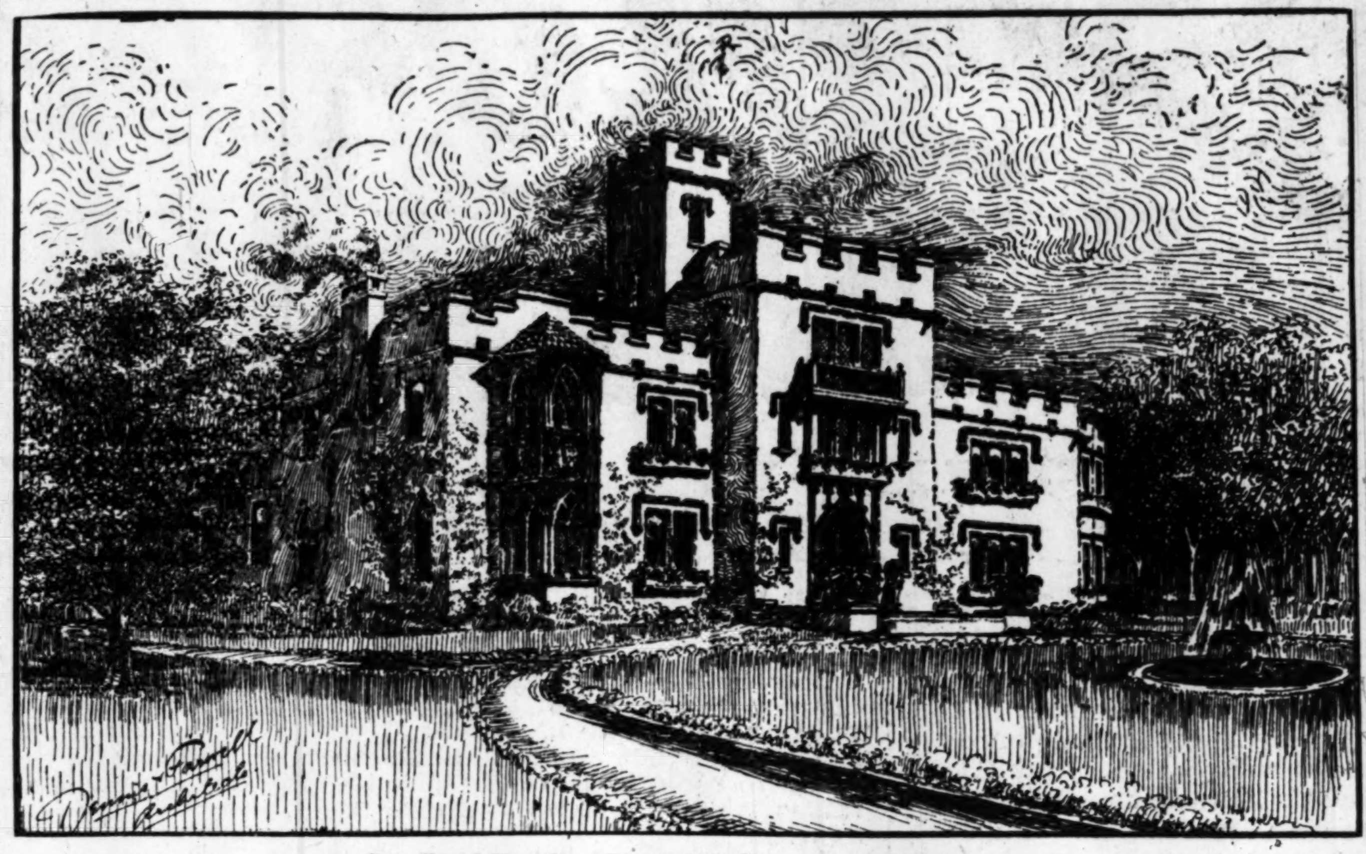
The Horace G. Hamilton Company reports the exchange for E. Standefer of a lot 40x130 feet, improved with an attractive six room bungalow, having hard wood floors, built-in buffet and all other modern improvements, located at No. 2252 West Thirtieth street, valued at $5000, for a lot 66x100 feet, improved with a ten-room house located at No. 173 North Front street, Grand Rapids, Mich., valued at $3500.

The same firm also reports the exchange of five acres at Montebello, located on Washington street, close to the schoolhouse. A little more than half of the ranch is set out to oranges and the balance is in berries and other fruits for family use. The property is also improved with a modern five room cottage, large barn, lawn and flowers. It was owned by W. H. McDougall. He received in exchange the grocery and hardware business of J. M. Wollam, at No. 2170 Sunset boulevard. The properties are valued at $7500 each.

LONG HOTEL LEASE.

F. J. Nicholson & Co. reports the leasing of the Hotel Heinzeman, at Sixth and Grand avenue, for Mrs. Antonio Heinzeman to the Hotel Heinzeman Company for a term of years at an aggregate rental of $35,000; also the sale of the equipment and furniture for $18,000 to the same company. The Heinzeman is one of the high-class family and tourist hotels. It has 100 rooms and 40 private baths. Fred M. George, who has managed the house since it was opened, two years ago, will continue in that capacity.

REPLICA OF SCOTTISH BARONIAL CASTLE TO BE BUILT AT HOLLYWOOD.



Castellated Dwelling Planned for Dr. A. G. Schloesser, Northeast corner Grand View and Franklin avenues, Hollywood.

The new home of Dr. A. G. Schloesser, at the northeast corner of Franklin and Grand View avenues, Hollywood, will be a modified reproduction of the ancestral castle of Mrs. Schloesser, near Invenness, Scotland, and will be one of the most novel dwellings in Southern California. It will be named "Glengarry." It will be in a beautiful park, with spacious lawns. The building is the forerunner of a larger and more magnificent structure. Dr. Schloesser is planning in the same locality, which will be a replica, on a reduced scale, of the Castle Rheinstein, which overlooks the Rhein, in Germany. This will occupy a magnificent block of land a little farther along on Franklin avenue, in Hollywood. The castle will be begun as soon as the one now being built is completed. Dennis & Farwell are the architects of both houses.

The one now being erected will contain a dozen large rooms. It will be 60x70 feet in dimensions, with several extensions for large bay windows, etc. It will be of heavy frame construction with the exterior of hard waterproof plaster.

A medieval reception, or entrance hall, is the first room entered through the deep-set portal. This will be an imposing room, with a huge baronial fireplace, with deep-recessed bays and seats. Heavy-beamed ceilings, and high wainscotted walls, with numerous shields, and suits of armor will carry out the style of the period intended to be represented. The walls above the wainscotting will be finished with beautiful art tapestries, depicting battle scenes. The lighting effect will be novel, in that electric bulbs will almost be hidden in old bronze torches, collected by the owner in extensive European travels.

To the left of the hall will be a home-like sitting-room, with large French windows opening upon a patio in the rear. Still farther to the left, at the northern end of the house, will be the dining-room, to be finished in the Flemish style, with high Gothic wainscotting, mantle, and built-in buffet, all in keeping with the style of the period. Several rare stained art-glass windows purchased in Europe will be features of the completed room. Antique oak will be the finish. The kitchen, buttery and servants' quarters will be in the rear.

A large French renaissance drawing-room will be on the right-hand side of the reception hall, on the south of the building. It will be finished in white and gold, a deep recessed bay window adding to the comfort and beautiful effect.

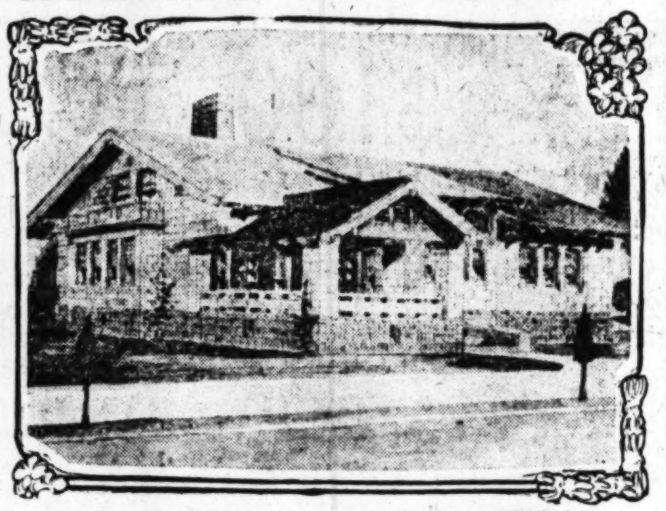
A staircase will lead from one side of the hall to the second floor, a landing half-way affording use for a magnificent old Gothic window, representing Emperor Maximillian, in a complete suit of armor. The window looks on to the patio in the rear, in which will be a beautiful Italian fountain and rare plants. The upper hall also will be lighted from this window the light filtering through a chapel-like cloistered ceiling.

Five commodious bedrooms, with baths in connection, and several guest rooms, with American disappearing beds, fitted to writing desk, and bookcase fronts, occupy the greater part of the second floor. A den and billiard-room will be built in the tower.

Provision has been made in the basement for a gas furnace, and the usual storage rooms.

Flanking the entrance will be two Carrara marble lions of large size, which for 144 years stood guard at the entrance of a cardinal's home.

BUILDING BUNGALOWS OF CONCRETE BLOCKS.



Artistic Dwelling of Concrete Blocks at Whittier.

This is the latest in building construction. It is the dawn of a new era in building the homes of the people. With wood becoming so scarce and high priced this is the natural result of the application of cement in all building operations. Concrete dwellings are fireproof, and should be popular on that score alone. The L. B. Valk Architectural Company has designed two concrete block houses, one for Whittier, and one for Hollywood, and work of construction is progressing rapidly. The cost is $2600 and $2800 respectively. As the photograph shows, the building is similar in size and style with the best and medium priced wooden structures. Each bungalow will contain a living-room 14x14½ feet, dining-room 15x15½ feet, kitchen 11x12, a bedroom 12x13½, bathroom, screen porch, front veranda on the first floor, while on the second story are two bedrooms, one at each end, which are 11x14 each. All modern conveniences are installed. These are the first of a series of similar houses designed by this firm.

It is reported that the plans of the Masonic Temple, to be erected on the lot purchased by the order are about completed. The plans call for a structure two stories high, built of pressed brick with heavy reinforced concrete columns at the corners. The front arch is to be marble. There are to be large oak doors with the glass in the shape of a keystone, emblematic of the order. The building is to be devoted almost exclusively to the use of the masons. The second floor will have a large lodge hall, clubrooms, social rooms and various ante rooms. In the rear of the first floor will be the large banquet room. The building will cost approximately $30,000.

Chairman Julius Wagenheim of the Building Committee of the La Jolla Biological Association has notified the Board of Public Works of San Diego that the association is ready to commence building its contemplated structure as soon as a water pipe line is laid. Pipe is now on its way to La Jolla.

Since I have had the Southern California agency—a period of little less than a year, Kissel has secured and it still holds the Los Angeles-Victorville record, the Los Angeles-Newhall record, and the Los Angeles-Bakersfield record. It also won both the events in which it was entered in that severe test, the Pasadena-Altadena hill climb.

BIG BALLOON RACE ACROSS CONTINENT.

Lieut. Lahm's Famous "United States" and the "American" to Be Sent from Los Angeles After the World's Record by Dick Ferris.

PLANS for record-breaking balloon trip:

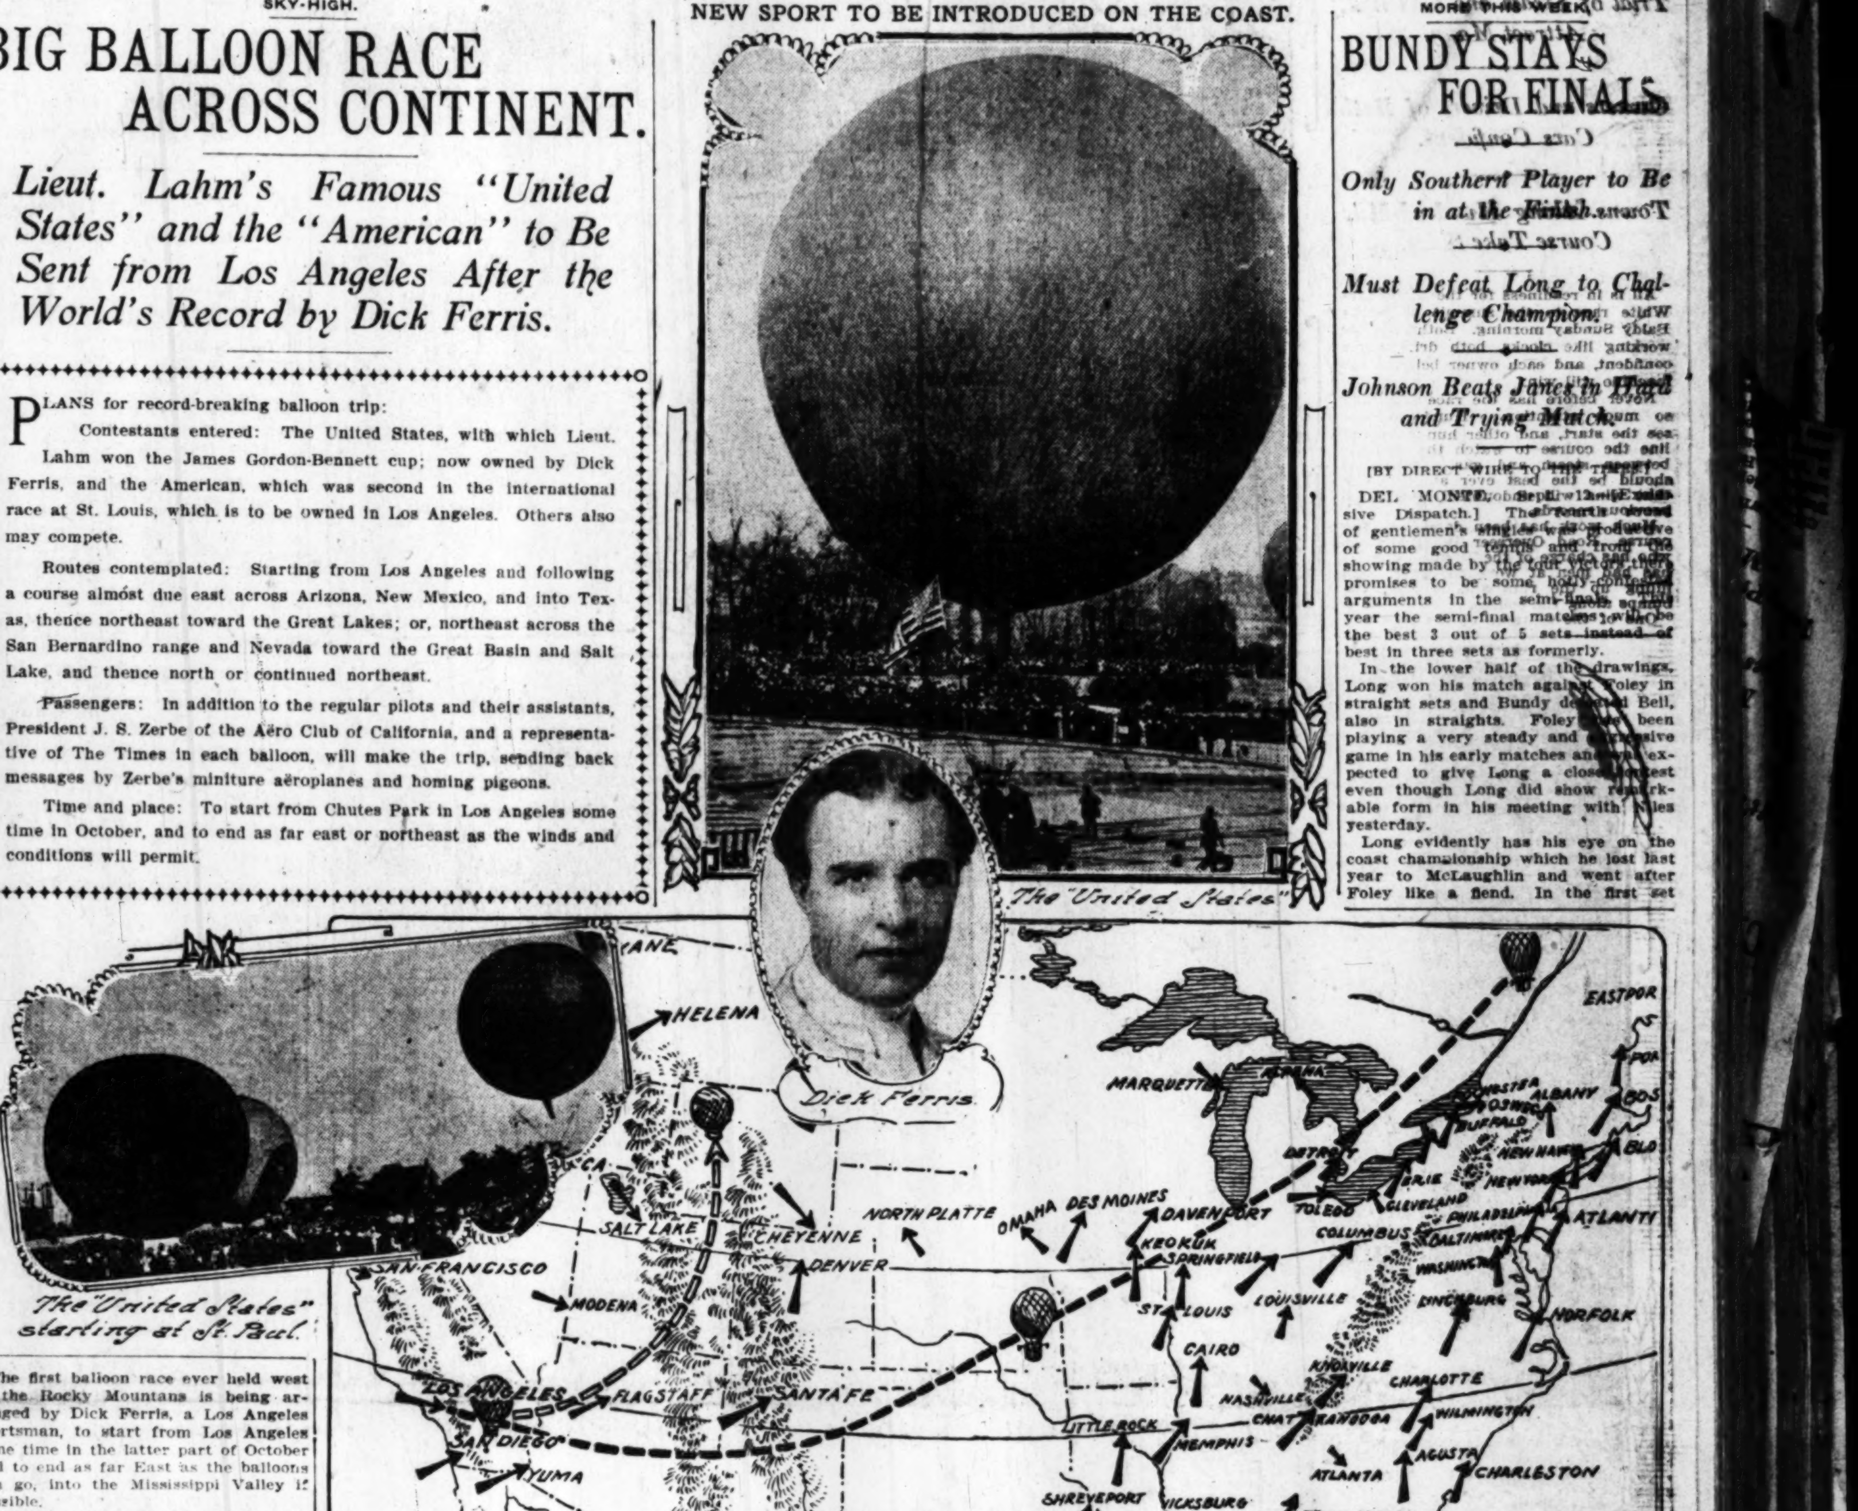
Contestants entered: The United States, with which Lieut. Lahm won the James Gordon-Bennett cup; now owned by Dick Ferris, and the American, which was second in the international race at St. Louis, which is to be owned in Los Angeles. Others also may compete.

Routes contemplated: Starting from Los Angeles and following a course almost due east across Arizona, New Mexico, and into Texas, thence northeast toward the Great Lakes; or, northeast across the San Bernardino range and Nevada toward the Great Basin and Salt Lake, and thence north or continued northeast.

Passengers: In addition to the regular pilots and their assistants, President J. S. Zerbe of the Aëro Club of California, and a representative of The Times in each balloon, will make the trip, sending back messages by Zerbe's miniture aëroplanes and homing pigeons.

Time and place: To start from Chutes Park in Los Angeles some time in October, and to end as far east or northeast as the winds and conditions will permit.

NEW SPORT TO BE INTRODUCED ON THE COAST.



Lieut Lahm, and Maj. Hersey

Notables and Scenes in Big Balloon Race.
In the basket below are Mrs. L. M. Scott; in the foreground, Mrs. Dick Ferris, Col. L. M. Scott and Dick Ferris. The chart shows direction of winds as furnished by the Weather Bureau, and probably routes of balloons.

The first balloon race ever held west of the Rocky Mountains is being arranged by Dick Ferris, a Los Angeles sportsman, to start from Los Angeles some time in the latter part of October and to end as far East as the balloons can go, into the Mississippi Valley if possible.

Ferris recently purchased the "United States," formerly owned by Lieut. Frank Lahm, and with it has issued a challenge to any balloonist for a long-distance race starting from Los Angeles. The "American," which was second in the big international contest at St. Louis, now owned by Col. L. M. Scott of St. Paul, is being negotiated for by a Los Angeles party who expects to accept the challenge as soon as the purchase is completed.

It is the object of Ferris to make a world's record for distance and he bases belief in his ability to do so on the geographical position of Los Angeles, the prevailing trend of the air currents, and the scientific reasons of weather bureau officers and balloon experts who have studied the conditions closely.

Although the business features are to be controlled by Mr. Ferris and his associates, the Aëro Club of California has been invited to take honorary charge of the flight and to study the scientific features and note the results. Every opportunity will be given the club members to learn all they can, and courtesies will be extended them in every way. The club as a body has been offered the courtesy of officially conducting the flight and reaping the scientific honors therefrom as, for instance, a world's record being made under its auspices.

ZERBE TO TAKE TRIP.

President J. S. Zerbe of the club has accepted an invitation to make the trip in one of the balloons and a representative of The Times will go in each balloon.

Mr. Zerbe proposes to construct a number of miniature aëroplanes on a principle which he has worked out and every half hour he will launch one of these containing a message to The Times of the progress and conditions of the balloon. When these aëroplanes reach the earth the persons finding them are to telegraph or telephone the message thereon to The Times, and the finder is to keep the little machine as a souvenir.

To send other messages The Times representatives will take with them a number of homing pigeons which will carry "flimsies" back to Los Angeles.

Two experienced pilots, one of whom is expected to be Capt. Mueller, are to be engaged to conduct the flight and take full charge of the actual operations.

Arrangements have been completed with Manager J. B. Lehigh of Chutes Park to start the race from the baseball field. As soon as the balloons arrive they will be taken to the big barn at the Chutes, where Knabenshue built his dirigible balloon, and be thoroughly overhauled in preparation for the big journey. They will then be taken to the center of the ball park for inflation, the gas-geenrating plant being located in another part and the gas piped to the balloons.

GOOD CONDITIONS.

It is believed that the balloons can be placed in the path of a westerly current of air and carried over the mountains and across the desert into the great Mississippi Valley, where it would be only a question of the ability of the balloons to stay up while they glide down the mountain slopes and across the plains as far as possible.

Because of the dryness of the air, the buoyancy of the atmosphere, the steadiness of the prevailing winds, and freedom from storms, with almost limitless area free from great bodies of water, it is calculated that flights made from Los Angeles will be the FINEST IN THE WORLD.

LOS ANGELES GIVES BEST OPPORTUNITIES.

BY J. S. ZERBE,
President Aero Club of California.

LOS ANGELES is the one available point in the United States from which to initiate long-distance flights.

There is no place on the Atlantic Coast which affords an opportunity of this character, as all the upper air currents have an easterly trend. In the northern hemisphere the trade winds all move to the east and north, hence the longest flights, which afford landing places within the United States, even though the starting places should be as far west as Omaha, would be less than one thousand miles. Since the record made at St. Louis last October was 872 miles on the Atlantic Coast, it is obvious that for safety and assurance of distance the course must be initiated farther west.

It is believed that the great trade wind which sweeps easterly from Los Angeles will afford a magnificent opportunity to make the record flight of the world. The range of mountains which rises abruptly from the plains, would be the direct agency to sweep the balloons upwardly into the great current, and, as shown by the observations and records of the weather bureau, the currents from the north from Salt Lake to Pike's Peak would effectually prevent a landing in the Rockies, thus assuring a flight toward Kansas City or St. Louis, and probably south of those points.

San Francisco is too far north and in too close proximity to the Sierra Nevada range of mountains which stretches to the east and north over a course fully equal to 800 miles, and if a balloon should once clear the mountains it would undoubtedly find a resting place somewhere in Western Canada.

The last race from Chicago proves that the proximity of the Great Lakes is dangerous and that the city is not on the proper place on the map for balloon races.

Count de la Vaulx's flight of 1200 miles from Paris to Russia was re-

REASONS FOR GOOD FLIGHT.

SCIENTIFIC DATA AND DEDUCTIONS FAVOR PROJECT.

Weather Bureau Reports and Statistics Show That Record-breaking Flights Are More Than Possible. Atmospheric Conditions Are Exceptionally Favorable.

That long-distance balloon races or tests could be most advantageously made from Los Angeles as a starting point seems proven by the best attainable records, and the deductions to be made from experiences reported by the aëronauts engaged in recent contests.

An assured start with a strong sea breeze should put them over the mountains beyond San Bernardino with several hours of daylight remaining in which to adjust their progress according to the more problematical currents above the desert, which once crossed should enable the pilots to find the prevailing westerly winds at some height and thus make their way across the continental divide and into the southwesterly winds of the Mississippi Valley, which at some seasons of the year blow from Texas to Labrador.

With balloons equipped for sufficiently extended flights, such a start and course would practically add two thousand miles to the distance achieved in the race from St. Louis last year, when the competition was shortened by compulsory descent on the Atlantic Coast.

The general trend of upper air currents from west to east in the latitude of the United States is undoubted, and the existence of average west and southwest surface winds at certain seasons over the route suggested is proved by the accompanying table, furnished by the courtesy of the Los Angeles Weather Bureau, and from which the map shown herewith has been compiled.

Balloons launched at Los Angeles have invaraibly headed directly up the San Gabriel Valley toward the east. Over the desert, the hot air would tend to prevent the condensation of gas which usually occurs during the cool night hours, and would probably sustain the airships at sufficient height to pass the great Arizona plateau at about 4000 feet elevation. This accomplished, the

BUNDY STAYS FOR FINALS.

Only Southern Player to Be in at the Finish.

Must Defeat Long to Challenge Champion.

Johnson Beats Janes in Hard and Trying Match.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DEL MONTE, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The fourth round of gentlemen's singles was productive of some good tennis and from the showing made by the four victors there promises to be some hotly-contested arguments in the semi-finals. This year the semi-final matches will be the best 3 out of 5 sets instead of best in three sets as formerly.

In the lower half of the drawings, Long won his match against Foley in straight sets and Bundy defeated Bell, also in straights. Foley has been playing a very steady and aggressive game in his early matches and was expected to give Long a close contest even though Long did show remarkable form in his meeting with Niles yesterday.

Long evidently has his eye on the coast championship which he lost last year to McLaughlin and went after Foley like a fiend. In the first set Foley was only able to pull out one game, Long's accuracy and side-line drives being too much for him. Even though he improved a great deal in the second set, Foley only succeeded in forcing Long to a closer score, Long taking the second set and match by a score of 6-1, 6-3.

In his match with Bell in the morning Bundy played his usual careful game while Bell was very much off form, Bundy winning in straight sets by a one-sided score of 6-3, 6-0. Bundy is the only southern man left in the tournament and has to meet Melville Long in the semi-finals.

In the upper half of the drawings, Irving Wright had little difficulty in disposing of Hunter in straight sets, 6-4, 6-2. Wright, so far, has had a very easy road to travel but will find a hard man awaiting him when he meets Johnson in the semi-final match.

Johnson is the other easterner who qualified for the semi-finals by his defeat of George Janes this afternoon. In his match with Janes he was forced to play his best tennis to win.

Janes is always a hard worker and a very hard hitter. If his pounding drives are coming in he is one of the hardest men on the Coast to defeat but in his match with Johnson he was not pulling off his drives with any accuracy.

Johnson plays a deep side-line chop almost entirely. The ball bounds very low and is difficult to handle with a driving stroke. Janes failed to follow in his serve, endeavoring to beat Johnson at his own game, from the back court. Had Janes forced the net throughout the match he would have stood a much better chance of winning.

In the first set Janes led at 5-4, again at 6-5, each time hanging back and letting Johnson do the aggressive work resulting in a pull out in each case for Johnson. The easterner finally pulled out the first set, 8-6.

In the second set Johnson quickly ran out two games, Janes took two, Johnson the fifth, Janes the sixth. Johnson then ran out two games and led at 5-3. At this point Janes took another brace and won the ninth game, only to lose the tenth and match by a score of 6-8, 4-6. Johnson is a very clever and cool-headed player, but his strokes are easy to anticipate and a fast net player should be able to run him off his feet as he seldom takes the net himself.

The result of today's matches leaves four men in the tournament, two easterners, one northerner and one southerner. Wright and Johnson will dispute the semi-final match in the upper half while Long and Bundy will fight it out in the lower half.

There is a very likely chance of the winner of the tournament being successful in the challenge match as the present champion, Maurice McLaugh-

WAITING.

READY TO RUN TO OLD BALDY.

Trial of Steam and Gas Will Attract Many.

Owners and Drivers of Both Cars Confident.

Towns Along Hundred-Mile Course Take Sides.

All is in readiness for the Kisselkar-White race to the summit of North Baldy Sunday morning. Both cars are working like clocks, both drivers are confident, and each owner believes his machine will win.

Never before has the race attracted so much attention. Hundreds will see the start, and other hundreds will line the course to watch the struggle between steam and gas. The time should be the best ever and the car that wins will undoubtedly break all previous records.

Much work has been done on the course. Road Overseer W. F. Erwin, who has charge of the Newhall district has had men at work the past week filling up the ruts and leveling the bumps along the course.

One of the features of the race will be the keen interest of the farmers and townspeople along the course. Residents of Palmdale, almost to a man, are anxious for the White car to win. In Newhall and at Acton the Kisselkar has a majority of rooters who want the gasoline entry to annex all the honors.

Speaking of the race Fenner said yesterday: "It seems strange to me that after making my challenge open to all the world, to any priced car or make, to any driver, in fact to "anything," that only one should respond when the makers of other cars claim so much for their machines. The $1000 entry fee certainly should not keep them out. I am using an ordinary stock machine, stripped, as I have in the previous races over this course, and not a specially built one."

Shettler declares he is confident his car will win. He said: "I only hope the White car has no trouble on the race. My car will make the top of the hill in three hours and thirty minutes or better. In mentioning that time I allow for twenty or thirty minutes' trouble on the course."

On Thursday, according to Shettler, the Kisselkar was driven from The Times office to the end of the course in three hours and thirty-one minutes. Latham's orders were not to hammer the car too hard over the road. He was accompanied by King, who will ride with him on Sunday morning.

The time which Shettler claims his Kisselkar made is forty-seven minutes better than the record. He will keep the car on the course all this week, and will bring it back Sunday night in time for the start at daylight Sunday morning.

At the White garage is a feeling of confidence which equals that at the Kisselkar headquarters. The "White Mercury," the car that will race the gasoline entry, has been put into almost perfect condition since the Turlock accident.

H. D. Ryus, who is to drive the White entry, returned to Los Angeles Wednesday. He has twice carried the White to victory over this course, and all agree that Fenner acted wisely in allowing none but Ryus to handle his car. There is not a turn nor a bump on the course that Ryus does not know.

In speaking of the race, Capt. Ryus said: "The White steamer will be there with the goods this year, as it has been before. I drove the racer that we will use here, while in the north, and she has certainly got the speed and can undergo the terrible abuse of that course. There is probably no other race course that offers such a severe endurance test, but with the flexibility and reliability of our car we cannot help but win.

"I will make numerous trial trips this week over the course with Mercury and Black Bess. H. C. Guild will accompany me on the trips, and I consider him a fine mechanician."

Like a general mapping out a plan of campaign Shettler will go into the contest prepared to win. He will be represented at the start by W. D. Newerf and at every available point along the course his henchmen will see that the gasoline car is warned of any danger.

At Burbank F. E. Haighler will see to it that Latham and King get all the news possible. F. G. Bierlein will encourage the racing gasoline car at San Fernando, D. B. Rose will lend encouragement at Newhall, A. P. Worthington at Lancaster, W. E. Bush will be stationed on the Newhall grade, Andrew Smith, who lost the last race, at Acton, L. George Thompson at Palmdale, N. B. Blanchard at Little Rock, and R. C. Hamlin at Shoemaker's ranch.

In addition to these there will be a man at the Broadway tunnel, another on the Buena Vista-street bridge, five men at the Saugus cut, two men at the junction of the Mint and Soledad cañons and five men in the Soledad cañon.

The Southern Pacific officials have promised to have the railroad crossings along the course kept clear during the hours of the race. The sand at Ravenna is to be put into better shape for travel.

C. T. Covell, who has for the past two years been sales manager for the local Premier agency, has entered the employ of L. T. Shettler. He will act as outside salesman among the Reo and Kisselkar agencies in Southern California, Nevada and Arizona.

WANTS NEW RECORD.

Fernando Nelson May Try to Lower San Francisco-Los Angeles Mark in Stoddard-Dayton.

Fernando Nelson, who now holds the Los Angeles-San Franciso automobile record, having made the dash down the coast in seventeen hours and seventeen minutes has purchased a Stoddard-Dayton roadster. He is so pleased with the speed and power shown by this car that he is planning to lower his own record in this machine.

He is one of the best-known motorists on the Pacific Coast and is prominent in all motoring events. No race or hill climb in the Bay City is complete without his presence. He has a unique method of purchasing a car. When he gets ready to buy he calls all the members of his family together and they vote on a car. No matter what Nelson may like the majority rules and in the last car election the Stoddard led by a majority.

STEEP HILLS NO OBSTACLE.

Auto Blazes Path Into Wild Sylvan Retreat.

H. O. Harrison Drives Oldsmobile Into Gold Creek.

Motor Car Makes Initial Trip on Heavy Grade.

That an automobile may be driven into the heart of the Tejunga range and over one of the steepest grades in Los Angeles county has just been proven. A route winding for fifteen miles along the mountainsides, to drop again into beautiful valleys, and again rearing itself on a 20 per cent. grade to an altitude of several thousand feet takes the automobilist over a new road just opened into Gold Creek Cañon, one of the most beautiful spots near Los Angeles.

On Friday, for the first time, an automobile was driven over this new road, when H. O. Harrison sent his four-cylinder Oldsmobile touring car up the grade. Only once as the machine climbed the steep hills did the engine hesitate and then only when the motor failed to get the necessary amount of gasoline.

An extra tube leading from the cap of the gasoline tank did the trick. Air pressure sent a quantity of gas to the carbureter and the motor took life again. At times the rear wheels could not find traction, but with a passenger on the footboard the car settled down to work and the steepest portion of the new road was passed.

Once on the summit it was a question whether the car could be driven down the incline. After examining his brakes carefully Harrison sent the machine over places where it would be certain death to make one wrong turn, and the touring car was driven safely to the narrows at the foot of the climb.

When a party of Angeleños secured the right to a quantity of land at the head of Gold Creek the problem of transportation became acute. Burros could reach the camp, but there was no road. With a splendid faith in the automobile Edward D. Silent, Frank Thomas and others, all of them enthusiastic motorists, laid plans for beautifying the camp among the hills.

Though they did not know that an automobile would ever be able to reach the pretty little resort nestling against the base of the Tejunga range they built a garage. Fifteen miles from the nearest point ever reached by a motor car they erected their summer homes.

Stylish bungalows went up. The wild beauty of the retreat was preserved as far as possible. Even the houses are rustic affairs with rough wooden bridges leading from one to the other. It is a retreat far from the madding throng, and the owners are happy. They have builded well, but the lumber had been hauled by an almost superhuman effort. Regular communication with the outside world must be had to make the retreat ideal. A mountain reared itself between the snug little camp and civilization.

An automobile was to solve the difficult problem. Both Thomas and Silent declared that the motor car could reach the garage. Acting according to their faith the road was built. It was impossible to eliminate the sharp 20 per cent. grade which rises directly from the jaws of the narrow pass which is scarcely wide enough to allow the passage of a touring car.

The grade was built and the challenge laid down. H. O. Harrison was asked to make the drive. Before attempting the climb he walked over every foot of the steep hill, examining the road surface. It was well that he did.

Satisfied that the car could conquer the hill, Harrison climbed into the seat, and with Roy Silent blowing down a tube into the gasoline tank, the test was on. There is a difficult turn in the grade, which gave the onlookers an anxious thrill. For the fraction of a second the car hesitated and seemed about to roll backward over the steep precipice.

Shouting an order to the man beside him, Harrison turned the wheel at an angle and continued the climb. Churning the dust into fine clouds, the car took hold, and foot by foot began the conquest, which ended at the top of the grade.

Now that the car has demonstrated itself to such an extent, Silent will use it on regular trips. When the rains come the grade will be in better condition, and the extra effort of Friday may not be necessary.

There is no more beautiful scenery to be found anywhere in Los Angeles county than in the vicinity of Gold Creek. Only thirty miles from Los Angeles, the retreat among the hills is one of the most delightful summer residences.

Satisfied that he can reach the camp with his motor car, Mr. Silent is proceeding with his improvements. Besides the three summer cottages, a winter abode is being erected. This cosy house has a handsome stone chimney built of the boulders found in the bed of Gold Creek.

A camp fire site, with places beneath huge trees for the hanging of hammocks, is one of the attractions. Food in plenty will be brought into the hills, and both the Silent and Thomas families will enjoy themselves as if they were only a few miles from home, for in the garage below the camp will be stored two automobiles, which can whisk the party back to town within an hour and thirty minutes.

The automobile road leading into Gold Creek is to be further improved. Rocks and bumps are to be removed. In the narrows, where jagged boulders defy night riding, a wider way is to be made. The road itself is good for many miles. It will be made good all the way.

For almost the entire distance it has been thrown open to the public. The drive to the mouth of Gold Creek is one of the most interesting hereabouts. Leaving Los Angeles by way of the San Fernando road, the autoist passes Tropico and Burbank and then turns aside at Roscoe for a dive into the blue hills.

PEACE NEEDED.

AUTO WAR GOES ON SPIRITEDLY.

DRIVERS HESITATE FOR FEAR OF DISQUALIFICATION.

Entries for Vanderbilt Cup Race not Very Plentiful, but Foreign Advices Indicate That There Will Be a Score or More of European Cars at Savannah.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Prominent and influential members of both the great societies of automobile manufacturers—the A.M.C.M.A. and the N. A.A.M.—are continuing their efforts to patch up a peace between the American Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of America, but so far their efforts have not had any result. The greater part of their efforts have been to devise some compromise by which they can induce Chairman Morrell of the A.C.A. to lift the ban from the Vanderbilt cup race. How fruitless they have been so far is indicated by the statement of Mr. Morrell that from his point of view the position of the club relative to the Vanderbilt race is one from which it cannot recede, and one which has been irrevocably fixed.

Thus the merry war of disqualification goes on. The A.A.A. has announced that Robert Graves has secured Emile Stricker to drive his Mercedes in the Vanderbilt race, and now it seems that Stricker has applied to W. S. Hogan, European representative of the A.C.A., asking if the A.C.A. would disqualify him if he drove. He took the position that as the car he is to drive is an old Mercedes privately owned by a man not connected with the factory, he should be free to drive. Mr. Hogan told him that he would be disqualified. Stricker was formerly a demonstrator of Rochet-Schneider cars in this city. He was Louis Strang's tutor, and drove a Porthos in the Grand Prix this year.

Louis Strang has been approached by A. B. Cordner and Welton H. Flinn, who have entered an Acme for the Vanderbilt race. He states that he has declined to drive the car, as he does not wish to be kept from competing in international races abroad.

As far as entries go, there are many wild rumors floating around. From Paris comes the statement that in addition to the Mercedes of Robert Graves, there will be seen in the contest a Hotchkiss entered by Jefferson De Mont Thompson, chairman of the Vanderbilt Cup Commission; a Fiat entered by Lewis Speare, and a Benz entered by Louis Bergdoll, the Philadelphia agent for the German car. There is no confirmation for these entries here.

It is also reported along gasoline row that W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., has purchased two touring car chasses each of the Fiat, Renault and Isotta-Fraschini makes, and that they will be fitted with racing bodies and entered in the Vanderbilt cup race. Mr. Thompson refuses either to affirm or deny the report.

One thing else has happened to dim further the luster of the A.A.A. race. The Chalmers-Detroit entry has been withdrawn, the reason given being that there is such a rush of work at the factory that it is impossible to spare the time to tune a cup racer, even if a stock chassis.

On the other hand, the reports of entries for the Savannah Grand Prize race are encouraging. Hardly had the lists been opened in Paris when three Fiats were entered. Wagner and TEN MILES AN HOUR.

Motorist Makes Trip from San Francisco to Seattle Over Every Kind of Road in Ninety Hours.

A. H. Merritt made a trip from San Francisco to Seattle last week in his White steamer. His actual running time was ninety hours, spent in covering 1013 miles of highway of every description from the smoothest boulevards of cities to the roughest corduroy roads of the timber belt through which he passed. The motorist reports that the worst strip of road encountered on the trip was between Redding and Dunsmuir. The twenty-two miles of corduroy road in Oregon meant slow running, but he accomplished this packing portion of the journey without the slighest injury to the car.

At Portland the machine was shipped to Kelso and from that point the party again took the road for Seattle. The car arrived in such fine order that the return journey could have been started at once without any adjustments. Merritt reports that with less dangerous roads over the Siskiyou Mountains auto tourists would find this trip one of the most delightful tours in the United States.

OFF FOR LAGUNA BEACH.

Los Angeles Motorcycle Club Will Hold Run to Ocean and Return. To Be Strictly Stag Affair.

The regular semi-monthly club run of the Los Angeles Motorcycle Club, scheduled for today, will be a strictly stag affair. The run will be to Laguna Beach and return, and the distance is thought too great to take any of the women members of the club. The start will be at 7 o'clock this morning, from the clubhouse on the corner of San Pedro and Twenty-second street.

On the last club run to Redondo there were over one hundred persons in attendance, and when stretched out along the road, the column of motorcycles was two miles long. Harry Lightcap, who is captain of the club, is trying to get out an even greater number for today's run. The club is now the largest in the United States, and not only gives more runs than any other organization, but has larger attendance at them.

CHANGE IN POLICY.

Maxwell-Briscoe Company Will Maintain Both Wholesale and Retail Depots in Los Angeles.

President John W. Willcox of the Maxwell distributing house for the Southwest, the Maxwell-Briscoe-Willcox Company, will wind up the affairs of that corporation on September 30, because of the important change in the selling policy of the Maxwell factories.

The future plan of the Maxwell-Briscoe Motor Company, the parent corporation at Tarrytown, N. Y., is to have a wholesale depot in this city for the big Southwest territory, using the present plant of the Maxwell-Briscoe-Willcox Company for that purpose and doing no retail business in this city, having a retail agency here as in other centers.

President Briscoe and Mr. Maxwell, the most active directors in the $25,000,000 corporation, are anxious to have Mr. Willcox remain in charge of this territory, though the latter has not decided upon this matter yet as he has other excellent propositions offered him. Sooner or later there will be a Maxwell assembling plant or factory on this Coast and such a factory may be located here, as was first intended. President Benjamin Briscoe, the most active worker in all the Maxwell organizations, will visit this city soon as will John D. Maxwell, the designer of the Maxwell cars, who was here a few months ago.

GRAND PRIX CARS ON TRACK.

Special Event of Hundred Kilometers for Racing Cars of Dieppe Contest to Be Run to Brooklands.

Word comes from London that Grand Prix racers will have an opportunity of showing their ability on the track in a race that has been specially designed for them at Brooklands, on Saturday, October 3. The general conditions as regards engine sizes, weights, replenishments, tire changes and colors are the same as those for the French 1908 Grand Prix. The distance will be about a hundred kilometers, or sixty-two miles. Eight cars of non-British origin must be entered, or the Executive Committee will have the right to declare the race void.

The sporting commission of the French club has been invited to appoint three stewards to adjudicate on the race in conjunction with the British representatives, and the club of each country having made an entry is invited to appoint a representative. Entries close on September 25, the fee being $200 a car, of which $160 will be returned if the car starts.

For American Conditions.

The Renault Frères Company, has designed a special chassis for this country, the first model of which has just been received in New York. It weighs under 2000 pounds, has the regular 20-30 motor, which is of four-inch bore and five and three-quarter inch stroke. It has ten-inch clearance, which is obtained by the use of higher axles, and has reinforced springs, tilted wheel, short levers, suitable for either runabout or baby tonneau body. The radiator is wider than in the standard chassis, having greater capacity, and a lower bonnet is used. The chassis itself is lighter, shorter and narrower than the standard type. This is one of the first foreign chasses which have been especially constructed for American road conditions.

Delayed Peerless Arrives.

The much talked of 1909 Peerless, which has been expected for a month past has arrived and was seen by many interested motorists, yesterday afternoon. The car has been over a month getting here from the Peerless factory at Cleveland, going astray between Chicago and Denver. The new car has all the features which have distinguished the Peerless in the past, but the change in fenders and the additional room in the front seat and tonneau gives it a larger and more stylish appearance. The new model is known as the "Peerless Thirty" and is a seven-passenger car.

Worcester, Mass., now has an automobile dog catcher. Two motors cars are used in New York City for the Bert Latham returned from a trial run to the Fenner mine on North Baldy Friday and left yesterday for another spin over the course.

A number of wagers have been laid on the result of the Kisselkar-White race to the Fenner mine Sunday morning. In every instance the bets are even money.

T. E. Nelson of this city purchased the last 1908 Cadillac touring car to be sold on the Pacific Coast on Friday. The car was shipped from San Francisco to the Lee Motor Car Company here.

Tod Ford of Pasadena has purchased a Peerless limousine. He expects the car to be one of the handsomest machines in the West. The car will be delivered the last of October. Mr. Ford is one of the best known motorists in Southern California and has owned fourteen cars of many makes. This is the fifteenth car he has owned.

W. B. Summerfield of Pasadena has ordered a six-cylinder ninety-horse-power Stearns from W. J. Batchelder.

C. Z. Lalling will be sales manager of the W. J. Batchelder Company. He is an enthusiastic Stearns man.

Charles Howard, the Buick agent in San Francisco, was in Los Angeles last week. Howard has placed over two hundred of the little four-cylinder Buicks in San Francisco. At the Santa Rosa races he entered a car which made miles in 1:03 on the track and he is expecting to make a clean-up in the San Francisco races, September 20.

Ed Stimson and John Cline made one of the longest trips of the season, driving to Portland and return in their Packards.

Mr. Blanchard has ordered twenty-five Reos and twenty Kisselkars to be delivered between Septemtem 1, 1908, and September 1, 1909. This is one of the largest local agency deals ever made in the West.

LADY'S CALLING CARRIAGE.

Overland Factory Turns Out Unique Car Which Will Be Sent to Los Angeles Soon.

One of the novel features in the new 1909 cars will be seen in the Overland roadster for next year. The machine will be equipped with two bodies so that it will be possible to make of it a handsome roadster, or a lady's calling carriage. The Overland has scored a decided innovation in this new departure. P. A. Renton, the local agent, will soon receive a consignment of the newly designed cars. The Overland has a 105-inch wheel base, a high-tension magneto, full equipment of lamps. It has a four-cylinder thirty-horse-power motor.

The Overland factory will also send Renton a consignment of four-cylinder thirty-horse-power touring cars. These have a wheel base of 110 inches, a selective type transmission, nickel steel axles and gears.

In addition to their line of roadsters, touring cars and ladies' runabouts the Overland factory will also send several of their six-cylinder cars which have a 118-inch wheel base and are declared to be all that can be desired in the larger type of machines which are sold at a low price. The wheels of this car are thirty-four inches, and the machine can be ordered either with touring car or road-lin, is not playing up to his usual stadard.

The only match played in ladies' singles was between Mrs. Bruce and Mrs. Farquhar, the former winning in straight sets, 6-4, 6-2.

From a spectator's standpoint it was a very slow and uninteresting match. Both players played a get-back game, neither trying for an ace at any time. Mrs. Bruce ran the first set up to 5 love before her opponent annexed a game, then Mrs. Farquhar steadied down and pulled the score up to 4-5, at which point Mrs. Bruce was a little steadier and won by Mrs. Farquhar beating herself. It was strictly a match of ping-pong until one or the other should make an error, neither player risking anything.

The second set was a duplication of the first except for score, Mrs. Bruce winning this set, 6-2.

The mixed doubles, junior singles and junior doubles will begin on Monday.

BARLEY FLATS HOME OF DEER.

HUBBS AND OSTRANDER SHOOT BUCK IN THE BRUSH.

Dense Undergrowth and Other Obstructions Make It Hard to Get Sight of Game—New Government Trail Being Built to Camping Ground Back of Mt. Wilson.

C. B. Hubbs shot a buck weighing 175 pounds on the mountainside north of Barley Flats last week. In company with A. D. Ostrander, secretary of the Southern California Rifles, Hubbs, who is also a member, camped ten days on the Flats, and reports that while deer signs were plentiful in the brush, the game was hard to locate on account of the dense undergrowth on the hills and in the cañons.

A number of does and fawns were seen on the top of the ridges. Ostrander got a glimpse of a buck and Hubbs shot at another. Large coveys of mountain quail were stirred up from the brush, and the cañons were thick with tree squirrels.

Barley Flats is a ridge covered with wild barley and long leaf pines, located directly behind Mt. Wilson. It is in the San Gabriel Forest Reserve, and is reached by the Sturtevant trail from Sierra Madre, thence by the government trail to West Fork, and northwest along the ridges—in all about twenty-five miles from Sierra Madre. Packing is done on burros, as the trail is too narrow to accommodate a wagon. The altitude of Barley Flats is about 5500 feet.

It is expected that this place will become a popular camping resort when the government trail that is being built from Mt. Wilson is completed.

PLAYGROUNDS MEETING.

Youths Arranging Big Contests for Wednesday Afternoon at Echo Park Field.

The third annual field meet of the city playgrounds is to be held at the Echo Park playgrounds next Wednesday afternoon. Superintendent C. B. Raitt has made the arrangements for the field day, and it is to be participated in by about five hundred children from the Violet-street, Echo Park, Fourteenth-street, Castelar, Utah-street and Holley and St. John-streets playgrounds.

The meet is scheduled to begin at 1:30 o'clock, and twelve events, composed of various kinds of relay races, are on the programme. There will be sack races, potato races, flag races, basketball races and many other kinds, for both boys and girls. For children under 10 years of age there are to be thirty-yard dashes, in which teams from all the schools will be entered.

The use of a special car has been donated for the purpose of carrying the children to and from the Echo Park playground. The following are to act as judges: C. H. Price, Los Angeles Y.M.C.A.; K. Hamilton, Harvard School; F. H. Boren, Harvard School; C. Richmond, Pasadena.

TO HAVE THEIR CHOICE.

High School Students not to Be Forced to Take up Rugby Game This Season.

The students of Los Angeles High School probably will be given an opportunity in the near future to decide whether or not they wish to substitute Rugby for the old-style game of football.

While it is not likely that the English game would be forced upon the High School boys, at a meeting of the principals and assistants of the local high schools yesterday it was suggested that it might be a good idea if Rugby was introduced and played by the students who were interested in that style of play, and not interfere with the old game.

From the experiences of the last two seasons it has been made quite evident that two styles of football cannot be played by the same school at the same time without causing a division of interest that proves a serious drawback to success in either game. If the school authorities are bent on introducing Rugby into High School sports, either with a view toward replacing the old game with it or playing it in conjunction with the old game, the students probably will be reluctant to adopt it.

Trout Spawn for Riverside County.

RIVERSIDE, Sept. 12.—W. A. Correll, president of the Riverside County Game and Fish Protective Association, has received assurance from Charles H. Vogelsang, chief deputy of the State Fish and Game Commission, that a good supply of fish will be forwarded soon to stock Riverside county streams, where conditions are favorable. The streams that will probably receive these fish are Strawberry Creek, Snow Creek, Banning Creek and Whitewater River. The fish will come in a special fish distributing car, which will make its first trip to Southern California about the first of October.

Brooks Don't Know.

There were no developments in the local racing situation yesterday, other than a denial by J. W. Brooks that he knew anything about his alleged appointment as manager for Arcadia the coming season.

Who Can Guess Why?

It is reported that some eastern big league team has bought or drafted Catcher Killifer of the San Francisco

NEW COACH AND FRESH MATERIAL CHEER STUDENTS.

Effort to Be Made to Resume High Standing of Former Years in Athletics—Wieman and Conrad to Be Nucleus of Football Team—Few Veterans Are Lost.

F. H. Gorton, who will coach the Occidental College athletic teams this year, is scheduled to arrive in this city Tuesday, and he will immediately begin preparations for the football season.

The new term of the Presbyterian college will open Wednesday and it is the intention of Manager Goodell and Capt. Wieman to call the squad together on the same day and begin operations at once.

The prospects for a winning Presbyterian team are brighter than they have been for years. The average weight of the team probably will be over 170 pounds, and all the members of last year's eleven with the exception of four will be back to school and will turn out for the team. Bruce Merrill, left halfback; ex-Capt. Raymond Crane, right tackle; "Jim" McClung, left end, and Watson Murt, right guard, will be missing from the 'varsity, and while they were strong men, it is expected that their places will be filled without difficulty.

McDermont, Kenneth Kellogg and Henry Thomson played in the line last year and will try for Burt's position at guard and Crane's place at tackle. There is no one in sight for McClung's place as yet, but it is expected that a new man can be developed from the freshman material.

"Speedy" Rush may again be at quarterback, although a weak knee may keep him out of the game. He was forced to quit last year before the end of the season on account of injuries. "Buster" Brower, who filled Rush's place after he dropped out, probably will not return to Occidental, and a new understudy will have to be unearthed for the place. With Fred Thomson and Collins in the back field, the Presbyterians will have a pair of backs that will average close to 190 pounds in weight.

Conrad, All-Southern California center last year, will again hold down his old position for the Presbyterians, and as this will be his last year at the game it is expected that he will tear things up. Last year Conrad frequently got down the field ahead of the ends and was in every play.

Patterson will again hold down the position on the right side of Conrad. He has been on the 'varsity four years and knows the game thoroughly. The position at left guard will have to be filled. Capt. Wieman will play his usual position at left tackle and will do the punting. Last year he was tried at fullback, but it was found that his place was in the line and he will be kept there. His ability to advance the ball from his line position is remarkable, and he probably will be the strongest individual player on the team. The filling of the other tackle position, which has been left vacant by the graduation of Raymond Crane, promises to bring forth keen competition among last year's line substitutes and the new material. McDermont seems to be the most promising of the known candidates.

Johnson will again play an end position. He got into the game at this position for the first time last year and showed promise of developing into one of the best ends that Occidental has ever turned out. The other end position has been left vacant by the withdrawal of "Jim" McClung from school and this place probably will be the hardest vacancy to fill.

The Presbyterian gridiron is being put into shape for the season, the equipment is being brought out from its summer quarters, and when the students get back for the new term everything will be in readiness for immediate practice. Manager Goodell has been at the college during the summer and has made full preparations for a prompt and decisive opening of the season.

COMING THEIR WAY.

RUGBY IS EASY FOR BEGINNERS.

GREAT CARDINAL SQUAD TURNS OUT FOR PRACTICE.

Circumstances Rounding Out Nicely for Stanford Where Only Bad Luck Was Expected—Southern California Men Making Good in Football—Coaches Pleased.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Sept. 12.—So great an aptitude for the game of Rugby has been shown by the freshman candidates for positions on the team that the men are already going through regular scrimmages against the 'varsity squads, although practice has been under way less than a week. Such unusual progress in mastering the rudiments of the game has been especially gratifying to the coaches, and it is expected that the intercollegiate freshman contest this year will be a much better exhibition of the English game than has been the case in the previous matches.

The immense squad that turned out for practice has been divided into four squads, which are drilled under the supervision of Coach Lanagan, Field Coach Presley, and their two assistants, ex-Capt. Koerner and Mow Mitchell of Los Angeles. The first-year men devote considerable time each day to practice in the rudimentary formations of the game, and then the different squads are drilled in kicking for touch, passing rushes, rucking and line-out formations and punting.

The candidates from the three upper classes have been divided into fifteens, and from now on there will be regular scrimmages between these teams and the four teams which constitute the freshman squad. Short preliminary matches began this afternoon, and the regular series of interclass matches will begin in the course of a few weeks. In this series the sophomores are to meet the freshmen, while the juniors are to play the seniors, the winners of these two contests to play for the championship.

The 'varsity rubbing list was instituted this afternoon; at present but fourteen men have been selected, in the main being the players who were on former 'varsity teams. This list will be enlarged as the men develop better form, and a separate list of the first-year men will be started as soon as the coaches are able to select the first freshman fifteen. This probably will be accomplished after the game with the Barbarian team on Saturday. Those who are now on the rubbing list are: Capt. Crawford, Koerner, Terrill, Minturn, Pemberton, Cheda, Thorpe, Miller, Heinley, Mitchell, Ganong, Cook, Holman and Reynolds.

With such a nucleus for a 'varsity fifteen, the prospects for a successful season do not appear nearly so gloomy as at the opening of the semester. The decision of the Scholarship Committee to permit Crawford to play was a powerful factor in restoring confidence among the players that another Cardinal victory will be added to the list when the Stanford team meets California in November.

The return of John O. Miller, the man who ran the half mile in 1m. 58 2-5s. at the conference meet this summer, also adds a strong man to the group of husky forwards who will ruck the ball out to the Cardinal back field. Pemberton, better known as "Big Bill," who is Miller's partner at side rank, has also changed his decision to remain out of athletics and is practicing regularly with the 'varsity squad. Cheda, the heavy front rank man who played such a star game on the 'varsity in his freshman year two seasons ago, is playing the same irresistible game that characterized his work that year and will undoubtedly be Koerner's partner in the front rank. The ex-captain is of double value, for besides filling his old place on the team, he is a great aid to the coaches in drilling the large squad of freshman candidates for forward positions in the rudiments of the game.

Ralph Reynolds of Los Angeles, a substitute in the game last year, seems sure of a position on the 'varsity this season, as his previous training gives him a decided advantage over the new candidates, and his work on the crew last spring has strengthened him materially. Minturn and Thorpe of Ivamosa complete the list of forwards, though there is some doubt as to whether or not they will play throughout the season.

No one as yet has been selected to play the wing forward position, but the chances are strong that J. R. Pemberton, a brother of the veteran forward, will fill this place.

The greatest concern to the coaches will be to secure a man to fill the place at half formerly played by the invincible "Kenny" Fenton. Heinley, the substitute last year, is now filling the place, but many think that Lee Scott, the baseball player and pole vaulter, will eventually prove his superior qualifications for the position, though he is now a new man at the game.

In the back field Mitchell and Ganong will again play five-eighths, while Cook, a substitute wing last year, is being tried out at center. Holman will fill his old wing position and it is not unlikely that the other place may go to some one of the entering class. Tom Sanborn of Redlands is showing up well in this position on the freshman squad and his previous knowledge of the game gives him an advantage for the 'varsity team. Fullback is also an uncertain quantity as yet as there have not been any suitable candidates tried out for the position.

SHERMAN BUCKS PREPARE TO EAT UP PALEFACES.

Dates Arranged With Occidental, Pomona, and St. Vincent's With Other Games Being Sought—Coach Warner Expects to Have Good Football Team This Year.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

RIVERSIDE, Sept. 11.—Coach Warner of Sherman Institute announces that three football matches have been scheduled thus far:

Sherman against Occidental, in Riverside, October 17.

Sherman against Pomona, at Pomona, November 7.

Sherman against St. Vincent's, Los Angeles, November 26.

Efforts are being made to arrange dates with a number of other Southern California college elevens. Coach Warner expects to arrange games with the University of Southern California, the Los Angeles High School, Whittier, San Diego Normal School, and Selma, and hopes to get several of these contests played in Riverside.

The first football game of the season will be played September 26, when two picked teams from Sherman Institute will be matched against each other. Within the last week the football squad has been strengthened by some promising new material. Crawford Coleman, a husky Indian weighing 185 pounds, is one of the new men. He is a brother of Henry Coleman, one of Warner's stars of 1904, and is not only weighty, but speedy as well. Benito Amigo has just arrived and promises to make good. A young redskin named Spencer, who is a speedy runner is trying out for tackle. He weighs 160 pounds.

Warner is well pleased with the outlook for a good team, and is giving his men hard daily practice. The Indians are on training table. From now to the end of the season their diet will be regulated according to scientific rule.

AERONAUTICS

Inventors and builders of aëroplanes and other types of heavier than air flying machines are jubilant over the announcement by the Aëro Club of America that the club will furnish free suitable motors for all members who have built machines that give promise of soaring in the air. There are about twenty members of the club who have perfected machines to the point where only a motor is necessary to make the final test, but the motors are the most expensive part of the apparatus, and for want of them their work has been at a standstill.

A score or so of flying machine inventors were recently hoodwinked by a story in a New York paper to the effect that a motor car hater had bequeathed his fortune for the building of a perfect airship "so there will be less running about the streets and more flying in the air." The aërial testator and his fortune proved a myth.

America has drawn the honor of starting first in the international balloon race, in Berlin, October 11, for the Bennett cup, and the leader of the twenty-three contestants for the trophy will be J. C. McCoy, who finished fourth last year. Mr. McCoy will use his new balloon, America II, which

SLUGGINGNESS.

PICATO WILL FIGHT TWICE.

Agrees to Meet Two Scrappers in Three Days.

Carsey Has Fair Chance to Defeat Welsh.

San Pedro to Entertain With Punch Card Friday.

Frank Picato decided, yesterday, he would try the novelty of fighting two battles in one week and consequently he is down to take Stone's place in a six-round preliminary with Charley Anslinger at the McCarey pavilion next Tuesday night. He will fight a twenty-round main event with Jake Arnold at San Pedro next Friday night. Norman Stone was to have gone on with Anslinger, but he has developed a "Charley horse" and his doctor has ordered him to lay off for a month. Picato was to have boxed Anslinger at last week's show and had to decline on account of illness, but is now ready for anything.

Freddie Welsh and Frank Carsey will furnish the main event and as they are to fight at catchweights, many of the sports would not be surprised to see Carsey get the better of Welsh. He is a very strong boy and willing to mix things and as he can punch harder than Welsh, he has a royal chance if he tears in. Brock was intended for Welsh, for he beat Carsey in their recent match, but after that Brock decided that his right ear was too sore to stand Welsh's punches and Carsey was substituted.

Carsey and Welsh went through their usual stunts yesterday, Welsh working with Jack Redmond, both on the road and in the boxing. Walter Fisher, who will be one of the prelims., is at [illegible] with Welsh. Anslinger and Lucca are at Ascot.

The boys who will take part in the three preliminaries are getting into condition and promise to be ready when the time comes. They are actually training, for Manager McCarey has issued an ultimatum to the effect that the pugs that do not train cannot fight him. As all of them hope to get another chance they say they will be in.

The card will consist of two six-round and one ten-round prelim., and the main event of ten rounds between Welsh and Carsey. The curtain raiser will be between Picato and Anslinger and then will come Kid Murray and Walter Fisher for six rounds. After that Charley Lucca and Jack Redmond will go for ten rounds and after that the main event. All the bouts will be at catchweights.

Jim Barry, who is matched with Battling Johnson at the McCarey club on September 25, may train at Venice, but will not decide until the arrival here of Paddy Murphy, who left Chicago Sunday. Barry thinks Venice is a lucky mascot, as it has turned out a long string of victors recently. Bat Johnson has gone on his hunting trip to the Azusa country, and will remain until Wednesday, and then return to his training. Both Barry and Johnson are anxious to meet Kaufman and Barry declares that if he can beat Johnson and Kaufman he will tackle Sam Langford again. He is one of the few big fellows not afraid of this black man.

SAN PEDRO CARD.

The sports at San Pedro have a card of fights marked out for them Friday night and in all probability a delegation of local fight bugs will go down from this city. The main event will be twenty rounds between Jake Arnold and Frank Picato, the weight to be 133 pounds. Kid Adams and Kid Martin will go six rounds at [illegible] pounds and Mickey Shea and Young Johnson, six rounds at 155 pounds. The bouts will be under the auspices of the San Pedro Athletic Club.

LONG SAYS NIX.

WITH BILLY PAPKE.

The fight at the Jeffries club between Papke and Hugo Kelly, which was set for October 14, is off. Papke seems to have quit, and it can't be on account of the money [illegible] the fight either, for Hugo Kelly is one of the real live wires of the middleweight game, and has as good a record as Papke, if not a better one.

Manager Long of the Jeffries club stated last night that both Papke and his manager have flunked on their own account. A week before the Ketchel fight, Long says, Papke's manager, Jones, expected to lose. Long and Jones discussed a Papke-Kelly fight, and it was agreed they should meet [illegible]. Later on it was postponed to October 12, and again put off to October 14, because Jones had the usual superstition of all fighters that 13 was a hoodoo number. Jones [illegible] to sign articles a number of times, but kept back his signature, saying that his agreement to fight was as good as signed articles. [illegible] stood with Long to fight [illegible], but Jones has telephoned from San Francisco that Papke refused unless he was guaranteed $5000. [illegible] had agreed to give the pugs a fat [illegible] of the receipts and put up [illegible] 15 per cent. bonus. Papke has now refused all of these things, and sends word from San Francisco that he has signed an agreement there not to fight again before he meets Ketchel Thanksgiving eve.

As the Thunderbolt's reputation does not stack up as high as a $5000 guarantee for his end, Long passes Billy by.

Concerning a fight with Langford, Long says that Papke demanded $15,000, win lose or draw. This would not have left sufficient money for Langford, and the negro promptly refused the offer. Long made the black wonder a better offer and he again refused, and this was the way Papke wiggled out of a fight with Langford. After his victory over Ketchel, Papke hastily drew the color line on Langford, and the chances are that he would rather be killed out of the ring than to get in it and have Langford trim him. Sam offers to bet he can do it in three rounds.

GANS GOES MONDAY.

EX-CHAMP WELL HEELED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Joe Gans, so Benny Selig announces, will leave for Baltimore Monday. The ex-champion is said to be comfortably fixed, as his hotel property, worth $35,000, is free of encumbrances, and gives him all the income he needs. If Gans can stay away from his besetting sin of gambling, it is probable his retirement will be a positive fact.

Joe is somewhat disfigured by the beating he received, but he will be out in a few days, and as good as ever, as Nelson's blows did not hurt him. It was exhaustion from his own efforts more than Bat's blows that defeated Joe.

PRACTICE AT STANFORD.

Large Number of Husky Freshmen to Take Place of Veterans Who Are Absent.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Sept. 11.—The first two practices of the squad of 160 men, who are candidates for the 'varsity and freshman teams, have greatly encouraged the Stanford undergraduates as to the prospects for the present football season. The entering class has proven to have an unusually large proportion of husky men and most of them have already shown an aptitude for the game that augurs well for the success of the "baby" team when they meet the first year men from the University of California.

There are at present about eighty men trying for places on the freshman team, and it would appear that there will be no lack of good material from which to select the fifteen men who will wear the Cardinal on September 17.

In view of the fact that there is a game scheduled between the freshmen and the Barbarian team of San Francisco for Saturday of this week, the coaches have worked the men much harder than is the custom at the beginning of the season. While certain defeat faces the fifteen men that are selected to play against the Barbarian team on Saturday, the youngsters will gain a practical knowledge of the game that could not be reached in weeks of ordinary coaching.

The 'varsity squad has been considerably strengthened by the return of Miller, the big forward, who played such an aggressive game against California last year, and the decision of the Scholarship Committee which takes Crawford off the probation list and makes him eligible to play in the intercollegiate contest.

Dope for Fans.

The release of first baseman Danzig by McCredie of the Portland team shows that no matter how good a kid may think himself, there are always others. It is said that Danzig was very sweet on his own playing and from the way he strutted around the ball field, puffed out like a pouter pigeon, it is easy to believe he loved himself. McCredie should have put him on the bench for the remainder of the season without pay.

Seagirt Championship.

SEAGIRT (N. J.) Sept. 12.—The Seagirt championship at the shooting oturnament here today was won by Capt. Simon of Ohio. Capt. Benedict of Ohio was second. Forty-six competitors were entered. The winner will who has boxed with 500 different fighters in 300 days, a world's record.

LOT OF CLASS HERE.

TRY-OUT KID HAS CHAMPION RECORD.

IT IS all right to live in Los Angeles like Jim Jeffries and be champion of the world, even if you have to go home to maw finally because every fellow had been thrashed; but if you like this kind of fame, wouldn't you rather take the record of having fought 500 fights in 300 days, with anything from paperweight to 200-pound giants, and still be good for 500 more?

Of course you would, and while thousands of aspiring men and boys would like to be Jim Jeffries, there is a boy in this town that has him beaten ten blocks for a real fight record, and he is none other than Roy Paige, caretaker and watchman down at Tom McCarey's Naud Junction fight pavilion.

Of course these were not real matches that were recorded as knockouts or decisions, but they were battles just the same, for either contestants had a chance to be knocked out, and where this goes, the bout must be called a fight.

Paige is the original try-out kid. He was once a newsboy, and is 23 years old. He has been working at the McCarey pavilion almost two years, and during that time has boxed about three hundred days. He never boxes less than four times each week, and during his experience he has fought more than five hundred pugs, ranging from 115-pound bantams to 200-pound heavyweights, at all distances from one to six rounds. In all of these scraps he has never been knocked out yet, and modestly asserts that the only pugs he tried to put away were some negro kids who endeavored to floor him. Guess this is a bad record!

While Paige is the watchman at the fight house, the greater part of the money he makes comes from his efforts with the pugs. He rubs them, trains them, and boxes with them and has had so many bouts that he now calls himself "Professor," on the assumption that he professes to know what to do with an aspiring pug or one that has the disease seriously.

From being considered as a dub once upon a time, Paige has developed into a very fair fighter, and can box, duck, swing, side-step and clinch with the best of them. He is naturally in condition all the time and yet never trains for a regular fight. This question of being in condition got him the only two knockouts he has had in his boxing, for on about five minutes' notice he went on in preliminaries with Van Horn and the Turk and was knocked out by both, about a year ago.

Roy is a popular boy with all the pugs and he must necessarily be a "good fellow" to take all the punches that he has had to stand for from 500 scrappers of all colors and all degrees of strength and wildness. Three hundred days in which there was nothing but a rainstorm of swats, leads, jabs, clinches, swings, uppercuts and crosses would make any ordinary man pray for the weather to clear up so he could see the sun, but Roy accepts the climatic conditions as philosophically as any citizen can who is continually waiting for the expected moment when some dub will land a haymaker swing on the place where the whiskers ought to grow.

And there is never an end to these overdue haymakers, and the watchman of the fight house is easily entitled to the name of the Try-Out Kid.

Nine-tenths of the sports who attend prizefights sometimes wonder where a manager gets all his preliminary fighters and if they are made to order in some factory. As a matter of fact they are, and the factory is the Naud Junction pavilion, where George Hancock, reformed newspaper man, is general freight agent, and Prof. Roy Paige, chief baggage smasher.

Hancock has much to do with making up the cards of the Pacific Athletic Club. A large part of his duty consists in opening about a million letters a week and paying for a thousand or less telegrams from all kinds of pugs looking for fights. Some of these are from "there" champions, who might condescend to accept a $10,000 guarantee, down through the long list of those who will fight any living or dead man to the "just-drop-you-a-line-to-let-you-know-I'm-coming" kind that will arrive soon if the head brakie does not kick them off the rods.

In addition there is not a day passes but that three or four new and old pugs do not flock into the club's office looking for something to eat or a fight. Some of these say they are champions, and others think they will be, and all are put on a street car, taken to the Naud Junction pavilion, and leaned up against the Try-Out Kid for a few rounds. All look alike to the professor, and two rounds of boxing show whether or not they are worth putting on for a preliminary.

One of these "show-up" kids was the Young Harlem Coffee Cooler, whose real name is Perry Coleman. It is said he deserted the American fleet in the East, and when he arrived here he wanted to fight. He was put on with the Try-out Kid, who found him full of haymaker [illegible] the fight, it is said, the officers spotted him for desertion, and wanted to arrest him. They were coaxed into waiting until after the fight, but there was no fight, for the Cooler quit in the first round with a punch and his fame was snuffed out.

Fairbanks also showed up at the office, and the Try-Out Kid found him a hot number. On July 14 Fairbanks knocked out Konkel and later on beat the Cooler and Norman Stone. He is a good one, but will not train.

Eddie Lennon of San Francisco was another boy tried out and fought Togo, the Jap, and was knocked out in the fourth round by Mike Kutchos. Oscar Astle boxed with Paige and was later knocked out by Pacato in three rounds. Billy Morris of San Diego admitted to Paige that he was a dub, but later on he knocked out Jensen and the Turk, and was finally beaten by Tremble. Tommy Hennessey rushed in from the East one day and announced himself as the bantam champion of New England. He consented to box with the professor, and proved to be a good one, and then he demanded "that guy Webster." As a matter of fact, Webster got him, for he knocked him out twice in different fights. Tommy had frayed trousers and a dirty shirt, but was given a chance just the same.

Jimmy Spencer appeared at the pavilion one day, and was tried out and shown up as a good one, but never got a chance to fight. He had a bout promised with Montana Kid in Nevada, but it is said that Montana wanted him to agree to permit Montana to stay the limit, and when Spencer turned this down, Montana refused to box him.

Willie Mack came to the office one day, and before Mr. Hancock could say, "Good morning, Willie," the new one borrowed $2 to eat on. He was tried on Paige and in a prelim last week beat Joe Rogers. He acts like a good boy.

Kid Olesen of Chicago was tried out and sat around the ring in fighting clothes during three different fight nights, waiting to take the place of any quitter, but none of them happened to quit while he was there. Finally he became disgusted and left town.

These are but a few of hundreds who have met the Try-Out Kid, and the majority never returned to the pavilion after meeting him. Scores come and go every month, but the Try-Out Kid seems destined to be the only one to go on forever. Manager McCarey will not give him a match, for he is too valuable as a "commencer."

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Johnny Coulon of Chicago and Terry Edwards of Brooklyn, N. Y., have signed to meet in the wind-up of the Badger Club's show here September 18. Edwards will reach Chicago Monday.

BIG BALLOON RACE.

most successful of any starting point in the world.

Ferris has the balloons in St. Paul packed and ready for transportation, and yesterday telegraphed an order for their immediate shipment West.

The greatest local difference to be overcome, it is believed, is the manufacture of the proper gas for the inflation of the balloons, the article made by the gas companies from crude oil being too heavy. To overcome this it is planned to construct a small hydrogen gas plant at Chutes Park and make a special quality in quantities large enough for the purpose.

Ballooning has been a popular sport in the Middle West for the last two years and several interesting contests have been held in Chicago, St. Louis and St. Paul.

In the last balloon tournament, which was held in St. Paul, the balloons were inflated with an inferior quality of gas and the crews were unable to keep their aërial crafts in the air long enough to cover satisfactory distances. The "United States" came down after remaining up two hours and traveling 67 miles, and the "America" alighted after keeping afloat five hours and covering 68 miles.

FORMER CONTESTS.

The "United States" and the "American" have competed in several contests in the Mississippi Valley with excellent results.

The "United States is the famous balloon in which Lieut. Frank Lahm and Maj. Hersey won the James Gordon-Bennett cup at Paris two years ago, and is one of the staunchest and swiftest balloons in existence. The capacity of the "United States" is 78,500 cubic feet, and 80,000 cubic feet of gas are required to inflate the "American."

In the St. Louis race the "United States" remained in the air twenty-five hours and traveled 650 miles, landing at Hamilton, Ont. In the same race the "America" stayed in the air forty hours and covered 750 miles, alighting at Patuxent, Me., and winning second place.

Ballooning has become a science that has interested and absorbed the attention of many eminent inventors and investigators. However, the fundamental principles underlying the navigation of one of the mammoth gas ships are simple; in order to increase the altitude of the balloon, the required amount of sand is poured overboard, and to descend, some gas is permitted to escape through a valve in the top of the bag. With these two means of regulating the altitude of the balloon, it is possible to keep in the strata of air in which the favorable current of wind lies. The fewer rises and falls the balloon takes, the longer it will remain in the air, as these movements soon exhaust the supply of gas and sand, and the balloon gradually sinks to earth or rises far into the thin air.

A supply of provisions sufficient for a flight of three or four days' duration is usually carried in the endurance contests, and on account of the cramped quarters in the basket it is necessary mostly to carry condensed foods. Heavy clothing is a necessary part of the equipment, as the temperature in the high altitudes is extremely low at night.

The American distance record is 870 miles, made by the German balloon "Pommern," commanded by Dr. Julian Thomas, in the St. Louis contest.

THRILLING SPORT.

Ballooning is one of the most thrilling sports known. Wild experiences are common, and accidents have been frequent, because of adverse conditions.

In an international race held in Chicago two months ago, the "Ville de Dieppe," piloted by Capt. Mueller, came down in the middle of Lake Michigan, where the crew struggled in the water fifty-five minutes; then, throwing overboard all the ballast, they darted up into the air 7000 feet, clinging to the rigging, and afterwards descended in Canada.

In a latter contest in St. Paul the "United States" executed a drop of 8000 feet in seven minutes, the occupants effecting a stop within fifty feet of the ground by throwing overboard everything in the basket.

A passenger in the "United States," during its trip in the St. Paul race, said of his experience:

"There was no sensation of rising; it seemed to me that the earth was dropping away from us. There was a feeling of security in the basket. A large island looked like a dot of green in the silver band of the Mississippi. Fort Snelling's parade grounds seemed to be an inch square.

"We hung a barometer from the ropes. This instrument looks like a watch with one long hand. On the dial are numbers from zero to 16,000, representing the distance, in feet, from the sea level; the spaces represent fifty feet each. The hand moves, instantly, sympathetically with every rise or fall of the balloon.

"Below us was a valley. Wheat fields looked dark green; hay fields were a shade darker; barley farms were golden; buckwheat, with its flowers, seemed as blue as water; patches of corn were almost black with plowed earth showing between. And each farm seemed to be an inch square. I am unable to describe the immensity and beauty of the sight. The regularity of the immense checker board was relieved here and there by beautiful circular patches of the darkest, deepest green trees.

"Capt. Mueller called my attention to the shadow of the balloon; it covered an entire village. I looked through the ropes to the great yellow bag above us. Through the neck I could see its interior, golden in hue, because the rays of the sun were striking its sides. It reminded me of some pleasant, cool, shaded pavilion.

"As we rose higher I had a good opportunity to test the echo powers of the upper air, of which all the pilots had told me before our start.

"'Hello,' I shouted into the upper air.

"It seemed to me that I was shouting into a great cavern; from all sides I could hear the tones ring back against us.

"'Shout to the ground,' said the captain; we were then about 5000 feet high. I put all my lungs into the sentence: 'The United States is all right.' 'Wait,' said the captain, raising his finger for silence. Several seconds passed before there was borne to us from the earth below the echo of my voice, every word in the sentence inflected exactly as I had spoken it, without any phonographic rasping."

SUMNER CALLS MEETING.

Conference Colleges to Attempt to Reach General Agreement—St. Vincent's Out.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

CLAREMONT (Cal.) Sept. 12.—Prof. Sumner, chairman of the Intercollegiate Conference Executive Board, has written to the representatives of Occidental and Whittier colleges suggesting that a meeting of the board be held September 18 to discuss plans for the ensuing school year. An earlier date was not set as the schools do not open until next week and some of the representatives have not yet returned to Southern California.

Notices of the meeting were not sent to U.S.C. and St. Vincent's, as these schools are not members of the conference. However, the terms under which U.S.C. is willing to enter the conference will be considered at this meeting, and from present indications it is probable that at that time an amicable settlement of the differences that have existed among the colleges will be effected.

President Gates does not believe that there is any likelihood of St. Vincent's College entering the conference as he has understood from Coach Hempel that the Catholics were unable to meet the requirements of the conference rules.

REASONS.

"backbone of the continent might be crossed at an altitude of about 7000 feet, if the balloons have not been carried too far toward the north, and when above the great plains a favorable current would take them across the country at tremendous speed.

HIGH ALTITUDE.

The loss of ballast necessary to crossing the divide would be partly compensated by the altitude in which the most favorable current seems likely to be found, and the heavier air of the surface currents in which the balloons would eventually find themselves.

Balloons which started as far east as Columbus, Ohio, found the southern current, one contestant falling into Lake Erie on account, as stated by the young aëronaut, of the rapid condensation of gas during the night in the cold air over the lakes.

The value of a competition in which a number of balloonists would be able to observe each other's progress in searching for the best currents on a possible transcontinental route cannot be overestimated. An ample supply of gas best suited to the purpose can be especialy provided here, and with a cloudless sky for several hundred miles results never before attained should be accomplished.

In addition to the data shown in the table, late reports from the weather station at Modena, Utah, show the prevailing winds for June and October to be westerly, and a report of the same year from the Flagstaff station gives the prevailing winds for both those months as southwesterly.

In the map shown, a few local currents are indicated which run counter to the general trend. These are due to the topography of the immediate surroundings, and are not supposed to affect the stronger upper currents. It may be noted that the table shows the wind at Salt Lake to be southwest for the greater part of the year. This is the local "Wasatch." Even if drawn northward into the Great Basin, a balloon leaving Los Angeles would still have an excellent opportunity of breaking the world distance record.

Bearing directly upon the subject, the following extracts from the work of Prof. Alfred Judson Henry, entitled "Climatology of the United States," are of much interest.

CLIMATOLOGY.

Next in order in the northern hemisphere, and standing in sharp contrast to the steady trade winds, are the irregular westerly winds of middle latitudes. The surface winds of the United States belong in the main to this member of the general circulation.

The prevailing direction of the wind for each month of the year is given in the table for a number of selected stations. The values in this table were obtained by counting the number of times the various directions were recorded, and averaging them.

An analysis of the data in the table will show that on the average of the year the surface winds in the United States are from the west and northwest, the single exception being in the Florida peninsula, where from September to February, both inclusive, the prevailing winds are northeast.

In midwinter, when the interior of the continent is much colder than the adjacent water surfaces, northwesterly winds prevail uniformly over the Mississippi Valley, while in the Ohio Valley and lower Lake region the prevailing winds are mostly southwest to west. Over a limited area along the west Gulf coast, extending inland a few hundred miles (see the records for Galveston, Palestine, Shreveport and New Orleans,) the prevailing winds have a larger southerly component than elsewhere.

By June the northwest winds of midwinter have been supplanted by southerly winds over practically the whole of the country east of the Rocky Mountains. In autumn the northwest winds become more frequent, and as autumn shades into winter they gain the ascendancy in the Missouri and Mississippi valleys and the Plain States.

Observations made by employes of the Central Pacific Railway, where that road crosses the Sierra Nevada Mountains in California, show that the prevailing wind direction is west to southwest. The principal drift of the atmosphere over the high mountains of Colorado is from a westerly quarter at all seasons of the year. There is, however, a large number of northeasterly winds, particularly in July and August and in the winter months. In the Lake region, as represented by a single station at Detroit, Mich., southwest to west winds prevail throughout the year.

In New England southwest to west winds are the prevailing winds for all seasons.

In his work on Elementary Meteorology, Prof. William Morris Davis says:

CONVECTION.

Cumulus clouds are rare on deserts, for in spite of the active convections of such regions, the surface air is so dry that ascending currents are not cooled enough by the expansion of their ascent to make them cloudy.

When the dust whirls of the desert plains are carefully watched they may be seen to spread out laterally after reaching a certain height. This means that at that height their ascending air is cooled, chiefly by expansion, to the same temperature as that of the air into which it has risen; above that height it cannot go.

PREVAILING WESTERLY WINDS.

Outside of the tropical belts of high pressure, all across the temperate zone and even into the frigid regions, we find the prevailing westerly winds; the surface members blowing west-southwest in this hemisphere, west-northwest in the other.

As the upper and lower currents are here of nearly the same direction, the westerlies are of greater depth than the trades; they prevail to the summits of the highest mountains and even to the level of the loftiest clouds. They are frequently interrupted by storms, rare in the trade winds of the torrid zone; . . . The interference of mountains and continents with the westerlies of the northern hemisphere is even greater than with the trades.

The upper currents blow prevailingly from the west and with high velocity in nearly all latitudes. Observations of the loftiest clouds disclose their rapid movement and almost constant drift from some westerly point. Temporary departures from this direction in temperate latitudes are always associated with some passing cyclonic disturbance.

On Pikes Peak, over 70 per cent. of the winds recorded in ten years of observation came from some westerly point, and 36 per cent. from the southwest.

Even in the trade-wind belt, the winds on lofty peaks, the carriage of volcanic smoke and ashes, and the drift of the upper clouds indicate a steady westerly wind or anti-trade aloft as easterly below; the upper wind turning obliquely from the equator while the lower wind approaches it; and the two together undoubtedly forming compensating members of the terrestrial circulation. The anti-trades are felt on the summit of Teneriffe and on the volcanoes of the Hawaiian Islands, while clouds are seen floating in the trade winds below. But close to the equator, the upper currents are from the east.

TERRESTRIAL WINDS.

In consequence of the change in value of the poleward temperature, there is a distinct annual variation in the velocity of the prevailing westerly surface winds of middle and higher latitudes, and of the higher currents also, as determined at mountain observatiories and by observations of clouds.

Extended cloud observations at Blue Hill, Mass., indicate that the entire atmosphere, from the lowest to the highest cloud level, moves almost twice as fast in winter as in summer; the mean velocity of the highest clouds in winter being over 112 miles an hour, and the highest velocity determined being 230 miles an hour.

LOS ANGELES GIVES.

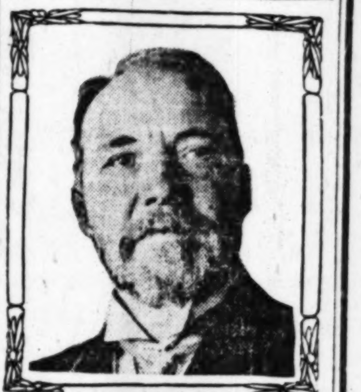
markable in the particular that it was the only instance in all the attempts made in Europe for long distance where there was a fortunate circumstance of wind and weather conditions. Usually the great trade winds of Europe go farther north or northeast and it is well known that it would be almost impossible to exceed the distance made at St. Louis, owing to the proximity of the English Channel, the North and the Baltic seas.



J. S. Zerbe,
president Aero Club of California.

For these reasons I am satisfied that Los Angeles is the only place in the world which has the proper location, and the contemplated race will prove this assertion.

The records also show that the regions of storms will not be encountered until Santa Fé is reached, so that for a distance of fully 800 miles there would be the most ideal weather conditions for balloons. The deserts of Arizona and New Mexico, with their radiating heat, would be a strong factor in maintaining a balloon in flight, especially in the night when normally condensation would take place, so that the aëronaut could conserve ballast, which is an important consideration for long distances.

During the St. Louis flight some of the balloons passed over Pittsburgh and the Connellsville coke regions, and it was found that at 4000 and 5000 feet elevation that heat from the coke ovens was sufficient to send the balloons upward, and there is no doubt that the elevations thus obtained materially aided the balloons in maintaining their flights.

From a meteorological point of view such a flight would be valuable. The upper air currents are pretty well understood east of the Mississippi, but to the west, and particularly to the southwest, where the greatest of all the trade winds originate, little is known; outside of Pike's Peak, Colorado; Mount Hamilton, near San Francisco; and Mt. Wilson in Southern California, there are no records available, and such as are obtainable do not record direction, temperatures, and speed for such altitudes as are satisfactory to the weather expert or scientist.

I hope the initial flights can be made as contemplated, and I know the Aëro Club of California will be pleased to coöperate.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

The verdict holds Operator G. A. Mitchell and Dispatcher H. J. Keeley to be criminally responsible for the death of nine men, and finds Chief Dispatcher E. M. Ringer criminally culpable. The railroad is also held liable.

A painted sign at 711 S. Main St. is attracting much attention. It contains the following words from The Times Magazine, Feb. 16, 1908:

Give the Chinaman a Chance

It was recently mentioned in The Times that Dr. Tom She Bin, one of the best-known Chinese physicians in the United States, had been charged with practicing medicine without a license. The doctor is a graduate of one of the leading colleges of medicine in China. He came to this country many years ago. En route plague broke out on the ship. The vessel's physician was unable to cope with it, but it is said that Dr. Tom She Bin saved every case. He was retained by the steamship company and served on Oriental lines for several years. He then began to practice among his countrymen in San Francisco, but after the earthquake came to Los Angeles. In view of the fact that a majority of plague cases in San Francisco have proved fatal under the care of white physicians, it might not be a bad idea to get Dr. Bin to go up there and see what he can do."

Dr. Tom She Bin can be seen at the Chinese Tea and Herb Sanitarium, 711 S. Main St. Established 1876. Why We Advertise

A certain class of family doctors contend that it is unprofessional for a to advertise. Although they themselves embrace every opportunity to own names before the public, they persistently claim that a medical however advanced he may be in the practice of his profession, is not the same privileges in advertising that are exercised by merchants and other enterprising business men. Why not? If a man has devoted to the study and practice of a special class of diseases, thereby acquiring drous wealth of medical skill and science, why should he modestly hide under a bushel? Why should he keep from other people that which their lives longer and happier? Is not such a course of conduct a sin that calls for severe censure? Listen to the language of the Rev. Henry Beecher, who said: "I am glad that the doctor cured him; I am glad doctor put in the paper that he cured him, and if any doctor is can cure such disease and does not put it in the paper, I am sorry. it would have been had this doctor, with his wealth of science and left him uncured! What a pity it would have been if the afflicted so prejudiced against advertising as to read the responsible certificate tor and yet give him the go-by! What are the newspapers for if not information? What more valuable information can a newspaper give a sick man where he can be cured? If a man has devoted his life the study of a special class of disease, the necessity of his saying the more pressing. His duty to advertise becomes imperious. lying advertisements is for honest men to tell the truth. A really able ever may be his gifts, makes a great mistake if he fails to use these want of advertising."

and a single by Zelder and Melchoir filled the bases. Williams hit one down to Miller that was sent to the plate to catch Hildebrand and relayed to first for a double play. Hardy walked two in the sixth and another Seal reached the bag on a fielder's choice. Williams fanned and Beck was out on an easy grounder to the pitcher.

ECHO PARK REPEATS.

WINS ELEVEN STRAIGHTS.

The Echo Park baseball team defeated the Title Guarantee and Trust Company yesterday afternoon, on the Echo Park grounds, by a score of 9 to 1.

The Park boys have made a splendid record this year and yesterday's game was the eleventh that they have won without a break. The game was rather one-sided, although several interesting plays were made.

McAleer of Echo Park did the best batting, making three hits out of four times at bat. Byram scored more runs than any one else for the winners, having a total of three. Martin played a good game for the losers.

PARKER PURCHASED.

PASADENA BOY MAKES GOOD.

Murray R. Parker, a former Pasadena boy, who has been pitching effective ball for the Springfield team in the Connecticut League, has been sold to the Pittsburgh club of the National League, and is to join the Pirates next spring.

Murray pitched for the Pasadena team in the winter league last fall, and coached the Pasadena High School football team, which had the most successful season in its history. Since joining the Springfield team he has won seventeen and lost three championship games, and has been largely responsible for the lead which the Springfield club has maintained in the league. In percentage of games won he ranks first among the pitchers of the Connecticut League.

At the end of the baseball season Murray expects to come to Southern California for the winter. He attributes his splendid physical condition and present success to the long tramps he was accustomed to take on the foothills, and to his work on the local diamonds. He recommends this part of the country as a winter resort for ball tossers, and several players in the Connecticut League are expected to come West with him this fall.

Four-Year Contract.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Manager Frank Chance will be a Cub for the next four years. President Harry Pulliam of the National League has announced that Manager Chance had signed a four-year contract to play baseball and manage the Chicago Cubs. The contract, promulgated by the president of the league, covers the period of 1909, 1910, 1911, 1912. So the fears of the West Side fans are relieved.

Starts Around World.

Stephen Sten, a native of Servia, but who has become a citizen of this country by long residence in the United States, will attempt what many have failed in doing in the past few years, a walk around the world. Having been long employed in the mines of California and as a fireman on one of the railroads of the State, he is well equipped in sturdiness for the venture which he will undertake. His start will be made from the postoffice on Monday morning at 10 o'clock, and he will carry semi-military equipment, including a .44-caliber rifle, blanket, cartridges and other accessories. His funds will be derived entirely from earnings on the route, and he expects to arrive in New York within six months.

Chase Foolish.

Hal Chase is a good ball player but he made a mistake in jumping the New York Americans to come to the outlaw California State League. It is said he received $4200 for a season less than six months long and this is more than twice as much as he could make at any other business, unless he turned train robber. Some boys cannot stand prosperity, however, and if he had been wise he would have played on for three wkeeks and then he could have refused to report next season. Now he is liable to the blacklist.

SPORTS AT NAPLES.

Good Hunting and Fishing Expected This Fall—Ducks Arrive in Large Numbers.

Naples sportsmen expect to have plenty of shooting and fishing this winter. Fishing is good throughout the year, and during the last few weeks has been above the average.

Harold McAllister in a short time last week, caught fifteen bass, averaging three pounds in weight, while fishing from the bulkhead on the water front. Others have made good catches from the piers and from the launches on Alamitos Bay.

Epworth Leaguers visitors on Admission Day took part in swimming contests and fishing. The Long Beach Y.M.C.A. baseball team defeated the Epworth Leaguers, 6 to 3.

A. M. and A. C. Parsons have rented the Gadwell Gun Club property for a term of five years. The preserve consists of five hundred acres about one mile north of Naples on the San Gabriel River, and is reached by launch. There is a comfortable house on the property.

The large number of sprigs that are arriving from the north and going into the gun club properties all along the San Gabriel River indicate that the game this season will be plentiful. The birds are arriving in flocks of thousands and are finding rest and plenty of feed in the marshes. The season will open October 1.

PLAN RABBIT DRIVE.

Kern County Ranchers to Exterminate Pests—Barbecue to Celebrate the Event.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

DELANO (Kern county) Sept. 12.—This town is to be the scene of a great rabbit drive October 6, such as has seldom been seen in the valley. For some time the long-eared pests have been a source of endless annoyance to farmers whose crops have suffered very heavily from them. The efforts to establish vineyards this year in particuar came to a disastrous end because of their work.

The drive will be made a big holiday occasion. Ranchers are to gather from miles around, a big barbecue will be held, and merrymaking carried on so that all will be happy except the jack rabbits.

There are hundreds of thousands of these creatures to be exterminated. A great inclosure will be prepared, and the hunters will spread out so as to form a line across country for ten miles or more and the animals will be forced ahead into the trap where they will be caught easily.

These creatures are shipped and sold to restaurants in San Francisco and Los Angeles where they are served as hare. They are said to be good. They bring a few cents in the market.

Kid Should Know.

Kid Mohler of the San Francisco team asserts that the Pacific Coast League is the strongest minor organization in the country on account of the good pitchers and that any player that can hit .250 on the Coast, always does better when he goes to another league. This goes for what it is worth but the Kid should know, for he has played in many other leagues. Sutor, Gray, Groom and Briswalter are hard to beat.

Men's Diseases

Original Methods

I depend upon nobody's theories, but treat my patients in the light of my own knowledge and experience.

I never attempt to cure at a risk of injury to the patient. I have found that risky methods are not only painful, dangerous and uncertain, but that they are entirely unnecessary in the treatment of men's diseases. Every result that other physicians strive for by the use of the knife or fiery and poisonous drugs, I accomplish by mild and harmless methods distinctly my own.

DR. TAYLOR
The Leading Specialist

Scientific Treatment

My success has come as a reward of ability and honest, earnest and scientific application of thorough understanding.

Both the treatment I employ and the cures I effect, are such as no other physician can offer. My practice has grown to its present proportions (the largest in the Pacific Southwest,) because I have positively cured the diseases that I claim to cure, and because I have exercised the utmost consideration and fairness in my dealings with patients.

My Practice Is the Largest Because I Invariably Fulfill My Promises

Stricture

Surgery is not only harsh, painful and dangerous, but is entirely unnecessary in the treatment of Stricture. I employ a painless method by which the obstructing tissue is dissolved and all the membranes of the organs involved thoroughly cleansed and restored to a healthy state.

Contracted Disorder

I have reduced the time required for curing Contracted Diseases about one-half. This is an important achievement. It replaces danger with safety. It forestalls chronic complications. It removes the infection and inflammation before that vital center, the prostate gland, can become involved. To many men it means the difference between perfect health and a lifetime of misery and functional weakness. My method is mine alone. My treatment is original; in some features it resembles the ordinary. In its chief essentials it is different. In results it is entirely different: It is safe, prompt and thorough.

"Weakness" Only a Symptom

Functional derangement, such as loss of power, etc., are a direct result of inflammation, enlargement or excessive sensitiveness of the prostate gland, brought on by early dissipation or resulting from some improperly treated Contracted Disorder. These conditions cannot possibly be removed by internal medicines, and my tonic system of treatment that stimulates activity of the functions can but result in aggravation of the real ailment. This is a scientific truth that I have ascertained by careful study and observation in hundreds of cases, and is a truth upon which my own original system of treatment is based. I employ neither tonics, stimulants nor electric belts. I treat by local methods exclusively, and my success in curing even those cases that others have failed to temporarily relieve with their tonics is conclusive evidence that my method affords the only possible means of a complete and radical cure.

Specific Blood Poison

I cure this leprous disease completely. The system is thoroughly cleansed and every poisonous taint removed. The last symptom vanishes to appear no more, and all is accomplished by the use of harmless blood-cleansing remedies.

Varicocele

This most prevalent of all diseases of men is also the most neglected, either through the dread of the harsh methods of treatment commonly employed, or through ignorance of the grave dangers that accompany the disease. As Varicocele interferes directly with the circulation and process of waste and repair, throughout the generative organs, the necessity of a prompt and thorough cure cannot be too forcibly emphasized. I cure Varicocele in one week by an absolutely painless process. My cures are thorough and absolutely permanent and are accomplished without the use of knife or caustic.

Men's Diseases Cured

The Master Specialist

My Fee for a Complete Cure Is Only $10.00
IN ANY UNCOMPLICATED AILMENT

YOU PAY FOR CURES ONLY

The methods I devised twenty years ago for treating men's diseases proved a radical step in medical science. Those methods have enabled me to cure diseases that were formerly regarded as incurable. In working out my methods I held the theory that "WEAKNESS," for instance, was not a constitutional or functional ailment, but a prostatic affection, and, therefore, merely local. I reasoned that its constitutional effects were simply the results of a tremendous waste of energy due to inflammation of the prostate gland; that this being true, a local treatment could alone effect a cure. Thereupon I devised the treatment I employ today with such marked success. Indeed, I have never known this treatment to fail to effect a complete and permanent cure in a comparatively short time.

THOROUGH CURES

Different doctors have different ideas in regard to cures. Some call a suppression of symptoms a cure. They dose for drug effects and claim that nothing more can be done. But the real ailment remains, and will bring the real symptoms back again, perhaps the same as before, but very likely leave the patient in a much worse condition. I claim that nothing less than complete eradication of disease can be a real cure. I treat to remove the disease, and not merely the symptoms. I search out every root and fiber of the ailment, and I cure to stay cured.

"WEAKNESS"

I not only cure "weakness" promptly, but I employ the only treatment that can possibly cure this disorder permanently. It is a system of local treatment entirely original with myself. This may seem a broad assertion, but it is just as substantial as it is broad. So-called "weakness" is but a symptom of local inflammation or congestion, and a radical cure is merely a matter of restoring normal conditions throughout the organic system, and this I accomplish thoroughly and with absolute certainty.

VARICOCELE CURED WITHOUT CUTTING

The time was when every other man afflicted with varicocele had no choice than to allow the disease to go on undermining his power and health or submit to a surgical operation. Now he can choose a thorough cure by painless treatment. I cure varicocele in one week, and it is seldom necessary that the patient be detained from his business even a single day. My method is original with myself and is the only safe and successful treatment for varicocele ever devised.

ADVICE AND CONSULTATION FREE

Come and have a private talk with me concerning your ailment. Even if you are not prepared to undergo treatment at this time, I can always give helpful suggestions to men who are diseased or weak. If you cannot come to Los Angeles write for particulars of my system of home treatment. Interesting literature and colored charts free if you will call.

My offices are open all day from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., and on Sundays from 9 a.m. to 12 m.

NOW'S THE CHANCE.

DOVE OF PEACE HOVERS NEAR.

Athletic Discord Is About to Be Wiped Out.

Colleges Pave Way for Reconciliation With U.S.C.

Meeting Called and Invitation Is Prepared.

After several years of athletic discord, which culminated last year in an open breach between Occidental and Pomona on one side and U.S.C. on the other, an adjustment has been practically effected, and these colleges, together with Whittier, will unite under a conference agreement that promises to insure clean sports and complete schedules throughout the various seasons of the college year.

The details of the reconciliation are to be completed next Friday when the present members of the conference—Occidental, Pomona and Whittier—will hold a meeting in this city at which President Baer of Occidental will present the application of U.S.C. for membership and urge its acceptance.

The only hitch that can arise in the proceedings is relative to the barring of students in affiliated schools from participation in intercollegiate sports. U.S.C. has agreed to subscribe to all the other requirements of the conference rules as now in effect among Occidental, Pomona and Whittier, and as Dr. Baer is willing that this clause be rendered null, it is highly probable that Pomona and Whittier also will consent to this change.

Occidental and Pomona have reserved dates in the football season for U.S.C. and the games will be arranged at the next meeting of the conference representatives. If it be impossible for St. Vincent's to enter the conference the local intercollegiate championship will fall to Pomona, U.S.C., Occidental or Whitier.

Before the end of this week the football squads of all the colleges will be on the field, and the practice for the ensuing season will be fairly under way. With U.S.C. in the conference and the recent change in the athletic department of the Methodist institution, the opening of the 1908 season is the most auspicious in recent years. As it now will be possible to ascertain the correct relative strength of the various teams from the results of games actually played instead of resorting to guesswork and the comparing of scores, it is very probable that the followers of college sports will render better support to the games, not only during the football season, but throughout the school year.

U.S.C. probably has lost a greater number of old players than either Occidental or Pomona, but as the Methodists have a larger registration of students from which to draw their players, this difficulty should not place them at a relative disadvantage. Coach Cromwell undoubtedly will meet with an encouraging response when he calls for the football squad, as the men will be anxious to again get into intercollegiate games.

Metcalf, who has been one of the most prominent figures in local football circles for the last four years, will be missing from the Pomona line-up this year. Metcalf had unusual ability as a drop-kicker, and his spectacular work in this department of the game was responsible for many Pomona victories. Other veterans will be missing from all the teams, and their work will be taken up by new men. Renneker, the Whittier half-back, who was the strongest individual player on the Quaker eleven last year, will not be in the game this season.

Occidental is fortunate this year in that all her intercollegiate games scheduled will be played on her own field. The other teams will have games at home, and on their opponents' fields, about half of the matches being scheduled to be played in this city. An effort will be made by the conference to conduct the games in better style in respect to field policing and the handling of crowds than heretofore, and these improvements, together with improved playing under more efficient coaching, should make the intercollegiate matches more attractive than in past years.

CRICKET NOTES.

The present standing of the clubs forming the Southern California Cricket League, according to the M.C.C. method of reckoning, is as follows:

	Pl.	W.	L.	D.	Pts.	Pc.
Wanderers	11	6	4	1	2	20.00
Marylebone	11	4	5	1	1	—11.11
Zingari	10	4	5	1	1	—11.11

Only two more interleague cricket matches remain to be played before the cricket season closes for this year. Tomorrow afternoon at Vineyard Station, the Marylebone and Zingari teams will meet. Wickets to be pitched at 1:30 o'clock and stumps drawn at 6 o'clock. The teams will be chosen from the following players:

MARYLEBONE—M. J. Bhumgara, J. McCombe, C. Ramsden, L. E. Nash, C. E. Packman, W. Calderbank, A. E. Mills, C. B. Webb, W. Kitchin, W. Giles, T. Brown, W. Wright, C. D. Hunt, J. Darney and A. R. Mitchell.

ZINGARI—W. Meggett, W. Morris, C. I. Sweet, G. M. Salter, T. D. Bamford, H. Y. Evans, H. Friend, E. Bird, L. R. Murden, F. Bamford, C. Constable and A. Lane.

The match between the "Gentlemen of Philadelhpia" and Grantham and District, at Grantham, England, ended in an even draw. Rain prevented further play on the last day of the match. The visitors piled up 222 runs, of which Lester made 101. Grantham scored 159 for six wickets, Thomson not out 42.

The Philadelphia Cricket Club, which is touring eastern Canada, won its opening match against Montreal by the narrow margin of thirty-six runs. The visitors went in first and hit up 150 runs, to which Montreal replied with only 62. Philadelphia completely collapsed before the magnificent trundling of Godwin and Wallace and were dismissed in their second venture for the poor total of forty-four runs. In a minority of 132, Montreal made a better showing than in their first innings, but were finally dismissed for ninty-six runs.

Ottawa was badly defeated at the hands of the Philadelphia Cricket Club by nine wickets. The home team was all out for the miserable total of thirty-nine runs. The Quakers replied with 162. Ottawa made 137 in its second innings, when Philadelphia won easily.

In the return match against Montreal the Philadelphians have scored 224 in their first innings. LeRoy, 72; Clark, 42, and Evans, 32.

Minneapolis defeated St. Paul in a one-sided game at Minneapolis by eighty-two runs. The home team scored 109 runs, to which St. Paul replied with only twenty-seven. Roe and Southern for the victors were unplayable.

COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP.

Following are the results of the English county matches for the last week:

Yorkshire defeated Gloucestershire, at Cheltenham, by 182 runs, and so made sure of the championship once more.

Kent accomplished a fine performance in defeating Leicestershire, at Canterbury, by 156 runs.

Middlesex lost to Kent, at Lord's, by 117 runs, ten minutes before the drawing of stumps.

Gloucestershire beat Surrey, at Bristol, by ten wickets.

Nettinghamshire won its match against Sussex, at Hastings, by 183 runs.

Warwickshire gained a decisive victory over Derbyshire, at Birmingham, by an innings and fifty-nine runs.

The Pembroke Cricket Club, Dublin, Ireland, were beaten by South Holland, at the Hague, by seven wickets.

The race known last year as the Gardena Handicap will this year be called the Monrovia Handicap and the distance will be increased from one and one-sixteenth miles to one and one-eighth miles.

TWO DAYS' RACES.

HANDICAPS BEING ARRANGED.

The Los Angeles Driving Club has practically decided that the matinée meeting next month shall continue two days, and the management will take advantage of the new rule that permits an admission fee to be charged without penalizing the competing horses. Under this arrangement the receipts from the sale of tickets will make possible the giving of handsome cups to the winners.

The members are enthusiastic over the handicap system, and two races at that style will be given for especially handsome trophies, one for trotters and one for pacers; the trotters will go the first day of the meeting and the pacers the following day.

These races should bring out large fields, as many of the horses now out on circuit will have returned by the latter part of October, when it is proposed to hold the matinées.

Another attraction will be the second race for the A. W. Clark, Jr., challenge cup for 2:30 trotters. The conditions governing the contests for this cup are rather unusual, and should draw large fields and create a great deal of interest. Mr. Clark appreciates the fact that there were more horses that can go from 2:30 to 2:20 than from 2:10 to 2:05, so he decided to give the trophy to the lower class. He has put a clause in his deed of gift to the effect that it could not be won in time faster than 2:20¼. Should the Speed Committee, in classifying the entrier let a horse slip in that can step a mile in 2:20 or better, and it wins a heat in that time or shows his ability to do so, the heat so won does not give him a "leg" on the cup, but bars him from future competition.

Will Durfee is still keeping up his winning streak. He won $4200 at Leadville, and captured the $1200 ten-class at Hartford with Del Coronado last week. Next year, with the handicap system in vogue, after the performances of Sweet Marie, Sonoma Girl and the Durfee combination, the eastern tracks are liable to penalize any California horse at sight.

Last week was a busy one at Agricultural Park, all the matinée horses that took part in yesterday's races getting the finishing touches put on their preparation.

W. A. Clark, Jr., has decided to send Miss Georgia and Iola, the bay 2-year- to the Lexington, Ky., sale next month and have Durfee bring Bon Voyage back in his car. Bon Voyage probably will make his next season at Sacramento, where he has a very promising crop of yearlings. The three yearlings by him that Mr. Clark has here will be turned over to a local trainer to shape for their engagements of 1909.

Miller is going slow miles with Boton de Oro and Gold Nut, preparatory to going to Phoenix. The fastest miles he drove last week were 2:17 behind the pacer and 2:24 behind Gold Nut. He and his partner, Jake Levy, have not yet found a horse to suit them for the slow trots.

Easter D., the 2-year-old filly which won her stake engagement this fall in 2:13½, is looking even better than she did when J. S. Stewart took her North to the races. Stewart's Zombro mare, Lou H., is looking and feeling well, but has trained off, and for the time being has none of the speed that enabled her to tramp miles around 2:14 with ease.

The same trainer has a black 2-year-old filly by Zombro, out of a mare by Titus, the sire of Phoenix, from which he expects great things, and she looks as if she would make good. She is being worked around 2:30, but can go close to 2:20. She trots up to a 2:40 gait, but there strikes a pace, and looks as if she never knew what it was to trot a yard.

Walter Maben received three very promising-looking animals. They are all owned by Eugene F. Binder of Riverside, and were bought by him from C. W. Williams at Galesburg, Ill., two years ago. One is Worth While, a 4-year-old bay steed of good size and excellent conformation, by the great sire Allerton, 2:09¼, dam Eoka, 2:16, she by Sphinx, 2:20½. The other two are 3-year-old bay fillies, one, named Nelda Schnell, is by Expedition, 2:15¾, dam Alphia, 2:18¼, by Constantine, 2:12½, he by Wilkes Boy. She is a thoroughbred-looking thing and full of ambition and snap; the other is bred a good deal in the same lines, as she is also by Expedition and her dam, Ava Dudley, is by St. Vincent, 2:13½, he by Wilkes Boy. She is registered under the name of Nelldra.

The annual meeting of the Los Angeles Driving Club to elect officers for the coming year will be held October 5.

Horsemen are still talking of the performance of Fire Plug, the winner of the fifty-mile "Marathon" race, and they are wondering what he could do if he was properly trained, conditioned and prepared for an endurance contest; but they are only wondering: no one can be found who would bet counterfeit money against him again, no matter what he attempted.

POLE VAULTER ENTERS.

Carus to Try for Athletic Honors at Occidental—Hollister Also Matriculates.

Clayton Carus, the champion interscholastic pole vaulter of last year, who competed under the colors of the Pasadena High School, has matriculated at Occidental College, and will prove a valuable addition to the Presbyterian track team next spring. Carus has cleared the bar at 11 feet 3 inches, a performance, the duplication of which in intercollegiate sports this year, should make him an easy point winner. Carus also competed for the Pasadena Y.M.C.A., and was one of the mainstays of the high-class team which the Crown City Association turned out.

Warner Hollister of Pasadena High School also has registered at Occidental. He should prove a valuable acquisition to the Presbyterian basketball team, as he has had considerable experience at the game under the colors of the Pasadena Y.M.C.A.

a child opens its eyes in the light of day education begins. It never stops until death those eyes. Ninety-nine out of every hun- destined to live in rather a narrow way in to spend all their time in a struggle for bread. To do this efficiently the rudiments of education are essential.

These facts circumscribe the sphere of the common schools in the work of education. The grammar school whose graduates are best instructed in the various uses of the English language and in commercial arithmetic is the best school of that grade. In these days of severe struggle for a living, stenography and typewriting might well be made part of the grammar grade of education. It is coming to be recognized by an increasing number of persons that nearly all the "ologies" would better be left out of the grammar grade. The "care of the body" should have a prominent place.

But the school of higher grade, reached by the small remnant of the youth of the country, is where the real work of education begins. The young person who has learned to use the vernacular with ease and accuracy is well equipped to go into any of the various walks of common life and seek a living, or to enter a higher school and seek an education.

At this step the whole trend of work should change sharply. For the work of higher education the first requisite is to determine what education is. The root meaning of the Latin answers the question. It is as far as the poles of the earth from the idea conveyed in the word information. Education is development. It is bringing out, not putting in. The work of the higher schools should be, primarily, teaching the pupils how to think. The natural faculties of the mind should be carefully cultivated in order to bring them to the highest point of development possible. The young person who knows well the uses of English, and whose reasoning powers are developed so that they work truly, logically, can learn anything desired without schools or teachers. As for information on any subject, scientific, historical or otherwise, the world is full of books from which all this may be obtained. The daily and periodical press is doing in our day much of the work done by professors in the universities of Europe in past days.

The average parent interested in the welfare of boys and girls does not realize how much time is wasted in some schools in piling information up before students, and how little attention is given to the real work of education, of developing the mind, of fitting men and women to weigh the value of facts, to see the correlation of facts, in a word to make proper use of the information furnished in the classroom and in more liberal quantity and of better quality in books and in the daily and periodical press.

And the logical faculty is not the only one of the mind which needs careful development. Memory is very important, and imagination is more so. They lie latent in the minds of young people and are awakened by the experiences of life. They can be stimulated to a wonderful degree by skillful, judicious education.

Many classrooms are a mere echo of past ages when the printing press was unknown and books were scarce. And while no progress is made here, the work done ages ago in the great universities in the way of mental development, the severe training done to teach the mind how to think, how to act truly according to the laws of thought, is neglected.

This developing of the mental powers, the work of bringing the reason toward perfection of action, of strengthening the memory, of awakening the imagination, should all be done to a point of high cultivation before the special work of making a doctor, a lawyer, a painter or a musician, is attempted on a broad scale.

Really many teachers and even professors are no better than a graphophone. School trustees might take a hint and practice great economy by having specialists talk lectures into machines which might be placed in the classroom, and thus "inform" the pupils. But the pupils would not be very successful in life.

A professor should be a great original thinker, as Abelard was, not a graphophone, as many of them are.

THOUGHTS ON RELIGION.

By a Layman.

REFORM.—Some wise man has said: "Is the world all wrong? Reform yourself."

The keynote of all reform is found in this suggestion, and if some of our noisy would-be reformers who love to ignorantly rail and howl, and abuse nearly everything and everybody in their mad egotistical desire to enter the limelight of discontent, would only take the hint, and truly reform themselves before attempting to reform all creation, then their aspiring efforts might not be the subject of ridicule, and their vain imaginings instead of flying around at random would be directed to the purification of their own hearts. With hearts thoroughly purged from all lust, ignorant selfishness and egotistical desires, a truly spiritual consciousness would soon manifest itself, and wisdom would quietly enter in, and dethrone the loud mouthings of a diseased imagination. A dawning light of knowledge would direct them to a greater knowledge of themselves, and their true relation to God. They would soon realize that the great wonder of life is that the universe centers in each individual; that each is an organizing center for infinity and eternity; that every human being is surrounded by a little world of other persons, to whom he is bound by invisible ties of strength, or weakness; and that every one has an inexhaustible field for service to humanity through the work of performing good deeds and sympathetically and lovingly encouraging others in their struggles to evolve from the darkness of ignorance to the progressive spiritual knowledge of God.

Of course in a quiet service of this kind there is not the excitement of being hustled from dry-goods-box rostrums, on the street corners, by cruel minions of the law whose duty compels them in the interest of the entire community to prevent the thoroughfares from being blocked by the idle and curious who are generally attracted in the hope of possible fun and amusement. There is not the excitement of posing as martyrs with a brass-band accompaniment. There is not the same oportunity to loudly and blatently proclaim some wildly-mixed theories composed of platitudes, and buncombe, which have been pieced together by some long-haired and wild-eyed individual who has not the faintest conception of what he is talking about, and does not know the first principles of self-control, and true spiritual reform. And there is not the excitement of publicly making long rambling prayers to an unknown God beseeching Him in their ignorance to put into execution their own selfish and petty conceptions of what God should do and what He should not do.

No! The reformer who has first truly reformed himself goes to work in a quiet, systematic and business-like way to learn more and more of himself and of God; to study his own characteristics and weaknesses; to wisely cultivate the garden of his heart; to pull up the rank weeds of discontent, worry, lust, and selfish jealousy and greed, and to substitute in their place bright flower plants of joy and trustfulness in God, and to further implant desires for more wisdom and knowledge of God and the universe.

Earnest and consistent spiritual cultivation of the heart garden will bring peace and content, joy and gladness to the home, the counting-house, the factory, and in fact into every human activity, business and social. In this spiritually progressive endeavor there will be no time for idle and malicious gossip, and gloating over the frailties and weaknesses of our more unfortunate brothers and sisters, who have not yet learned the lessons of life. On the contrary we will truly sympathize with them all we can, having the knowledge that all these tribulations, trials, and sufferings are largely the result of selfish ignorance, and are necessary through the evolutionary growth of human nature, to cause individuals to advance to a spiritual knowledge of themselves and the one heavenly Father of us all.

We are all traveling the same pathway of life, and our destiny is to know God. Those who have progressed to a dim knowledge of the Kingdom and Power, the Glory and Majesty of God, will unhesitatingly and unceasingly extend the hand of sympathy and good fellowship to those who have stumbled and strayed into the thorny hedges. A good kind word, a helping hand, an unselfish uplift, will work wonders in the hearts of the weary, torn, and bleeding ones, who are still toiling over the hot sands of the deserts and rocky edges of the by-ways, which all lead, through sometimes sad experience, to the one glorious highway of righteousness, divine knowledge and wisdom.

Different people in different stages of development need different experiences in life, to awaken their dormant spiritual natures to a conscious knowledge of things eternal; and when we ignorantly and heedlessly forge ahead without thought of our relation to God, we are bound to bump up hard against soul-developing experiences, until we have learned the lesson, when we can then steer clear of many breakers, and save much ignorant suffering.

The time will come in all our lives, when as we look back we will realize and fully appreciate the wisdom we have gained through these same hard knocks. This seems to be the only way some of us can gain wisdom. God in His infinite mercy, however, has sent us from time to time, greatly developed souls, who have established the great religions of the earth, to help us on our life pilgrimage, and if we will only profit by their teachings, we will save ourselves much misery.

The greatest of these spiritual masters tells us that life in this world is for the purpose of the building of our characters; that is the one thing essential; that each man must look to himself and within himself, to find his errors and weaknesses; and that therefore while on earth we are more or less the arbiters of our own destiny.

QUEER CUSTOMS.

COURTSHIP AND MARRIAGE AMONG THE SAVAGE TRIBES.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BROKEN HILL (Northwestern Rhodesia.)—Before I leave the heart of the Black Continent, to start south for the white man's Africa, that land of gold and diamonds below the Zambesi, I want to write a letter about the queer customs of our African sisters. They are an important half of this dark-complexioned world, and every nation and tribe has its own ways of treating them. I have already written of the Mohammedan maidens along the coast of the Mediterranean; they go about clad all in white or black, each having only a single eyehole in her garments to find her way along the streets. I have written of the fair-skinned Jewesses of Tunis. They dress in jackets and trousers, and a pair of their embroidered breeches often costs as much as $200. I have told you how they are fattened for marriage by special feeding and how a popular belle often weighs 300 pounds, or about as much as our own dear Secretary Taft. I have described the women of Tripoli and Egypt, where the girls cover their faces with long veils when they go out of doors, and also the dancing maidens of the Sahara, called the Ouled Nails, who have brazen, bare faces and paint their eyelids black with kohl and stain their finger nails and toe nails red with henna.

Farther down the continent I learned much about the women of the British possessions, where John Bull is now regulating the marriages, fixing the price of brides, old and young, lean and fat, good-looking and the reverse, at $3 apiece; and still farther south about the women now ruled by the Germans, who are allowed to marry as they please, according to custom. I have also notes before me gathered during my travels in Portuguese East Africa, Mashonaland, Matabeleland, and here on the edge of the Congo Free State. Indeed, the material is such that I hardly know where to begin, and I shall dip into my notes, jumping from one place to another, as the subject demands.

Adventure With a Basukuma Bride.

Let me start with the description of a wedding procession which I saw in German East Africa, on the lower edge of Victoria Nyanza. The people there are known as Basukumas. There are half a million of them and they are considered a strong race. They are Bantu negroes, who dress in cowskins and cottons and who have cattle, sheep and goats. When a young man there wants a wife, he pays her father fifty sheep for her or agrees to work for the old man a number of years. All marriage arrangements are made by go-betweens, and the matchmaker brings the bride to the groom. In the meanwhile the chief bridesmaid has arranged the groom's hut for the occasion, and a new bed is made, consisting of a framework of wood with a mattress of oxskins. The bridesmaid is paid a sheep for this work. After this she goes with the matchmaker, who might be called another bridesmaid, to the house of the bride and brings her home in great style.

It was such a procession that I stopped one morning on its way to the groom. It consisted of a score or more of women dressed in garments of cowskins and cotton, yelling and singing as they danced along about a queer-looking figure which laboriously moved in the center. At first I could not make out what it was. It looked like a woman with a gigantic hump, wrapped around with bright-figured Indian cotton. As the party came closer this figure turned sidewise. The hump then took the shape of a human form, and I could see that the woman was evidently carrying a sister or brother under her calico gown. I handed my camera to my son Jack, who was with me, and accosted the lady. She laughed, and I attempted to make out what kind of a creature she carried. I could see two little black "tootsie wootsies" sticking out at the front, and by the outline of the stretched cotton could see that it covered a lusty girl who was holding on by her arms to the woman who carried her. Her hands were clasped together over the bridesmaid's breast and the bridesmaid was also supporting her by holding her ankles, which stuck out on each side the body. I put my hand on the woman's back and the bride squirmed, but when I attempted to touch her bare feet the bridesmaid objected. All this took but a few moments, and as I stepped back, the procession went on. The second bridesmaid stood behind the bride carrier and held an umbrella over her.

As the party neared the hut of the groom a score of other women, the relatives of the groom, rushed out and scattered rice over the bride and the escorting party. I peeped into the hut just before they arrived, and thus got a look at the bridal chamber. It was a dark closet shut in by bark cloth, and the bed was of cowskin. I was told that the groom was not yet present and that he would come in and take possession after the bridesmaids had arranged everything and fitted the hut for the pair. He had already given sixty sheep to his father-in-law and one sheep to the bride's sister.

What Wives Cost.

Sixty sheep seemed to me a big price for a wife, and I asked the Germans whether many girls were not sold at reduced rates. The reply was in the affirmative, but it was added that a good, lusty woman was worth something as a worker, and that the women were the slaves of the family. They take care of the stock, cultivate the crops and also keep house. The men do little but loaf. Besides, it costs almost nothing to keep an extra wife there, as the women are not allowed to eat chickens or eggs, even the necks and the gizzards being forbidden to them. In the Kavirondo country, at the northeast of the lake, I was informed that the usual price for a wife is forty iron hoes, twenty goats and a cow, and that these articles can be paid on installments. In Uganda the government price is $3 per girl, but more is usually given for the daughter of a chief.

Among the Nandi tribes the richest men have from ten to forty wives, and the price for a good maiden of 14 is six cows. Girls are often betrothed as early as 7, and they are married at 11. The cows are often paid on installments, and if no child is born within a year after the marriage the husband may stop payment. It is among these Nandi, as with the Masai, who are found around the slopes of Mount Kilimanjaro and also on the highlands of British East Africa, that the unmarried girls dwell with the young unmarried men in the bachelor quarters, and until they are old enough to get married. A Masai man is not supposed to marry until he is 30. Among the Buvumas the price of a wife is two cows and five goats. Of these the father of the bride keeps one of the cows and a goat, the other four goats being given to the relatives.

A Tax on Wives.

Down in Rhodesia the usual price for a strong, good-looking girl is four cows, and if she is the daughter of a chief she may bring as much as five or six. The government taxes every native $5 a year for his hut and family, and this includes a tax for one wife. I more than one he is charged 10 shillings for e wife. The Kaffir girls are married at as early a a girl is often engaged at 4 or 5 years of age. gagements are made by the parents, and seve form a part of the dowry. It is a custom a Kaffirs not to allow a younger brother to m each of his older brothers has at least one wi father often helps pay for the brides.

About Lake Shire girls are often betrothed i fancy, and they are sometimes actually enga they are born. In such cases the prospective his parents are expected to clothe the girl un old enough to be married, but as the only cl her early life is a waist cloth and often not m string, the expense is not heavy. The people t from one to twenty wives according to their w in times past the chiefs had harems of as m hundred women each. As a rule, the number is decreasing all over South Africa, and wit mand for foreign goods which is gradually making the support of women more expensiv likely to be still further decrease.

Bridal Costumes.

The question of dress is not a serious on parts of Central Africa. It is different north o hara, where a pair of bridal trousers may, a stated, cost $200 and upward, and where cloth of gold are not uncommon. The lighte costume I have seen in my travels is tha

In the Soudan there are res of such tribal marks and each tribe has its own y of scarring. Mutilation of the ears is common oughout Central Africa. The Swahilis enlarge the es in the lobes until they become mere straps which l inclose a glass tumbler. These same girls have es all around the rims of their ears, which they fill h rolls of paper.

The Masai women load down their ears with jewelry, aching great weights to the holes in the lobes so that y are gradually pulled down until they flop against e shoulders.

n German East Africa there are people who wear t rings and plugs in their lower lip and in the upper as well. Such ornaments elongate the upper lip so t it extends several inches out over the mouth.

er Ways of Hair Dressing.

Until I came to Africa I thought the American girl ld put up her hair in more outlandish ways that any r maiden on earth. She has many competitors and superiors among the ebony belles of the Black nent. It is true that these African maidens in cases have to conquer the kink or corkscrew curl ch covers their pates, but nevertheless they have y creations which surpass the wonders of the marcel e, of our mighty pompadours and the other oddities ed with the aid of the rat, the curling iron or curl er. The Soudanese braid their hair in long even s, so that it hangs out like the snakes of the Medusa. e Zulus put it up in mighty towers, which often ex- d a full foot above the crown of the head, and down Natal a bridegroom goes out to court his sweetheart t a pair of real cowhorns tied upright upon his head, that they look as if they grew there.

Along the eastern coast of Africa there are many na- es who braid the hair in little windrows over the p, and farther back there are many tribes in which women shave the head close. This is so with the anda and the Masai. Many of the native women of dorman, in the Soudan, shave not only the head, but ry part of the body, and it is a common custom ng many tribes for both men and women to have mselves shaved from head to foot before marriage. ong some peoples the hair is pulled out. This is the custom among our Moros of the Philippines and ain tribes of the Amazon.

The Batoro, a tribe which inhabits the country be- en Lakes Albert and Albert Edward, shave and oil ir brides before the wedding. The girl's head is ped off by the village barber, and her own sister s the razor over the rest of the body. After this she oiled from crown to toe nail with butter and cas- oil, the stuff being well rubbed into the skin. The Sese Islanders pull out their eyelashes, and ba- s have their heads shaved shortly after birth. The Bali men and women pull out the gray hairs as they ppear, thinking that gray hair makes old age. younger women there rub red clay and oil in their hair, and they often plait it into string-like strands. When they trim their hair in Pondoland the hair dresser puts a strap around the forehead, and cuts the hair level with this by means of a knife, stopping at the strap, which protects the skin. After they are married they often train their hair into a cone-shaped mass, stiffening it with red clay and oil for the purpose.

In all African countries the native men are almost as particular as the women as to the dressing of their hair. In Zululand the married men wear rings around their heads, twining the hair over them and then smearing it with charcoal and oil so that it can be polished. It is a great insult to attempt to pull off a man's ring. In many places the men shave their heads, and up here in Rhodesia there is one tribe which puts the hair up so that a great spear shoots out right above the crown. This spear of hair is sometimes so long that the man cannot stand upright in his hut without disarranging it.

The Hotel Clerk.

HE TALKS ABOUT THE TURKISH AND OTHER DISORDERS.

By a Special Contributor.

"I'M glad I don't live in Turkey these times," said the House Detective of the St. Reckless.

"I'm glad I don't live in Turkey any time," said the Hotel Clerk. "I'm also glad I don't live in Patagonia, or New South Wales or the peninsula of Northern Michigan. To be quite frank with you, Larry, there's more'n a million places that I'm glad I don't live in 'em.

"But, if it's not a personal matter, might I ask what has suddenly embittered you against Turkey? Who asked you to live there, anyway? I didn't hear that an enthusiastic delegation from the Turkish Chamber of Commerce, the Constantinople G.A.R. Post and the Common Council had been around offering you the freedom of the city and begging you to come right along before all the choice residential villa sites are gobbled up by real estate speculators. Have you been blackballed by the Young Turks' Country and Coochie-Coochie Club, or what?"

"Well, it's the way they been carryin' on over there," said the House Detective, "shootin' and cuttin' and scrappin'. Wot ails them Turks, anyway?"

"They're merely getting a constitution," explained the Hotel Clerk. "It's always that way when a country that's never had a constitution is getting one. Babies behave the same way when they're teething. This thing of acquiring a constitution is merely drunk and disorderly conduct, assault and battery and unlawful assemblage, on a large scale. If the parties that want a constitution are there with the punch and they get the decision either on points or a knockout, they're a bunch of grand little patriots, and future generations will name third-class postoffices and race horses for them. But if the regular police force is too strong for them, they join the In Bad Society and get ninety days for resisting an officer.

"Look at the Russians, for example. It seemed to me that, as Russians go, they were doing very well, under an unlimited despotism, which is something like being under the Standard Oil only not so severe, and in their simple Russian way drinking the kerosene out of the family lamp and living on those little greasy minnows that reside in a can. But they got a Douma and the Douma got the constitution bug in their head, and, like anybody who could eat a caviar sandwich and enjoy it, they had the disposition that carries things to an extreme. But the Grand Dukes got to the Czar first and made up his mind for him the other way, it being that kind of a mind, and one snowy forenoon shortly after this time, there was a noise like rattling the trace chains on a log wagon, and persons residing along the road to Siberia looked out of the front windows and saw the leading spirits of the recent Douma starting on the first legislative junket in the history of their country.

"So now any Russian statesman who thinks his land needs a constitution and wants to make a speech on the subject, goes down in the cellar and turns out all the lights and confides his remarks to a semi-detached rat hole.

"But in Turkey from what I can gather it was the ladies that really started it. Ever since the days of the Prophet, up until quite recently, the high-caste Turkish lady had been content to stay in a harem, which is the institution on which most of our county jails in this country are modeled. She had the lower part of her face buried in a nose bag the same as a truck team at high noon, and spent her time developing a figure that helped a lot toward carrying out the comparison of a Norman horse immersed in oats. For to be a success as a Turkish lady she had to be fat. Those muscular ones you saw from time to time with the Streets of Cairo Show at an Elks' Carnival, didn't move in the best set back home. Slenderness wasn't any more popular in a harem than it is at the Chicago stock yards.

"No, sir, May Irwin wouldn't have lasted a week in Turkey. They'd 'a' kidnaped her. Some dark night there'd 'a' been a furniture van backed up at the side door of her hotel and in the morning she'd be missing, and when next you heard from her she'd be a massive but helpless prisoner immured in the seraglio of some powerful Pasha closely guarded by the same group of daring piano movers that were hired to commit the abduction. That's the way if used to be.

"But all of a sudden a wave of female independence swept through the Turkish empire. The leading ladies took off their nose bags. And the populace at large had a look. Then they had another look and became indeed desperate. They felt that the situation was one which could not be relieved by an ordinary means such as going over into the Balkans and killing off a few of the Christians, who occupy the same position in the political arrangements of that country that the Democrats do in this. So they decided to have a constitution. They are now engaged in having it. And after they have it I wonder what they'll do with it."

"The paper says the Sultan, old Abdul Humid, or wotever his foolish name is, has been ragin' like a caged lion," said the House Detective.

"Well, I don't know how a caged lion rages, but I know how a caged lion smells, and any other horrible details that you have you can keep to yourself," said the Hotel Clerk. "And, anyway, I don't blame him for raging. He's a very sick man to start with. Every paper I pick up says he's the sickest man in Europe, although none of them ever told what was the matter with him unless it was the one that stated he had four or five regular wives and barn full of deputy wives and any number of ladies-in-waiting scattered around the neighborhood. I guess he's the indisposed Ottoman Kid, all right. And then there's young Abdul Az-iz fussing around with old Abdul Az-wuz, who's either his uncle or his past participle, I forget which. The last I heard about the Sultan he'd gone into his bomb-proof and was letting the Albanian body guard do the rough outside work."

"They say them Albanian guys is the tough scrappers, all right," commented the House Detective.

"I'll have to ask them to show me," said the Hotel Clerk. "I saw a picture of a row of them. They wear a costume that's a cross between a lamp chimney and a bareback rider, and their weapons are the same kind that they sell you at the installment house to loop up the draperies of your oriental cosy corners with. I have my doubts about any man being able to fight very hard when he's got to worry all the time about the probability of his underskirts catching fire from a spark.

"Yes, I know the Turks licked the Greeks. But they took an unfair advantage. They didn't fight with the Greeks' national weapon, which is the push cart. At plaster images and banana hooks the Greeks would have had 'em out before the end of the first round. And they've also licked the women and children of Armenia several times, but give me a pistol and a gun or two and I'll guarantee to lick any Armenian child that lives, single-handed, by myself, and I'm no professional fighter at that. They might even have put it on our friends, the Chinese, here a few years back when the Chinks still entertained the notion that the proper way to affright the invader was to march out on the serried field shooting firecrackers and go through the parasol flirtation. But it only took one short summer for our other friends, the Japs, to cure them of the delusion that the fan drill was mightier than the dum-dum bullet in modern warfare, and I've a notion that if the Turks tackled the Chinese now, there'd be more widows in the rug store than in the hand laundry. And I positively shudder to think what would happen to the bloodthirsty Albanian bodyguard if it ever got snarled up with the reserves from the Police Station."

"The way I dope it out, a constitution ain't fitten for any race that's not civilized all the way up," said the House Detective.

"Quite right," said the Hotel Clerk. "There's a lot of things besides constitutions that the Turks and the rest of the uncivilized nations couldn't assimilate without a severe course of training. Now there's the Filipino head hunter. He's a poor untutored cuss that goes about dressed up in the scenario of a pair of pants and toting a spear with a head on it like one of those tools that a Masonic lodge uses when it's laying a corner stone. But he's a good sport, according to his lights. About once in so long he encases his person in a sketchy first act of a suit of clothes, made out of grass with a sea-shell waistband, and goes forth and puts a dent in his tribal foe that looks like an excavation for a new union depot. After which he harvests the other fellow's head and takes his foot in his hand and hurriedly steals away. So far, so good. There's one dark brown gentleman that's dead and another that's beating it back through the Samar high grass in the general direction of Posey county. If the friends of the deceased should happen to overtake our hero, the formalities are simple in the extreme. They merely leave part of him there and take the rest of him home with them on the end of a pole. There's another vacant bolo in Bologna and a new face, with a set smile on it, over the garden gate of the opposition village. The incident has been closed in a manner satisfactory to all concerned.

"If you should suggest to this crude savage that instead of being slaughtered on the spot he ought to enter an insanity plea, he wouldn't grasp your meaning at all. He'd think you were taking advantage of his lack of education to kid him along and he'd feel aggrieved because you didn't go ahead and edit him down with a war ax and cease your frivolous and ill-timed jesting. And if he'd carried his brother along with him to see that it was a finished job, and you as his lawyer should advise that it would be easy to prove by competent alienists that both of them went crazy together, having been seized simultaneously with the new variety of insanity known as family-group homocidal melancholia, the gentle head hunter would probably double up in an uncontrollable outburst of laughter. He'd never get it through his skull.

"You're quite right, Larry, in what you said just now. There are many things about the higher civilization that you couldn't get a savage nation to accept yet awhile, and I'm afraid they'd never believe in an up-to-date insanity defense such as we have in the more expensive murder cases.

"In fact, Larry, I never heard of anybody that would believe in 'em except some juries."

IRWIN S. COBB.

Our Near-Queens.

Some American Princesses and Duchesses.

MISS ELKINS WILL BE NEARER TO A GREAT THRONE THAN ANY OTHER AMERICAN GIRL IF SHE MARRIES THE DUKE OF ABRUZZI—A NEW ORLEANS GIRL ONCE, HOWEVER, SAT UPON A EUROPEAN THRONE—TO DATE THERE HAVE BEEN A DOZEN AMERICAN PRINCESSES AND FOURTEEN AMERICAN DUCHESSES.

By a Special Contributor.

WHEN she weds the Duke of the Abruzzi, Miss Katherine Elkins, daughter of the opulent Senator from West Virginia, will sit nearer to the throne of a great European monarchy than any American girl who has yet married a scion of old-world aristocracy. In the popular slang of the day, she might, in her probable future status, be termed a near-queen, the Duke being a member of the royal household of Italy, the first cousin of the King, the grandson of a queen, and a possible heir to the throne.

Another American girl, however, once actually won for herself a seat on one of the thrones of Europe. This was Miss Heinze, daughter of Michael Heinze, a former banker of New Orleans, who married Prince Albert, reigning sovereign of Monaco, from whom she was judicially separated some years ago. She is the only American woman who ever occupied an old-world throne, but she never bore the title of queen, and her throne was a small one, her royal husband's petty state extending little beyond the great gambling mecca of Monte Carlo.

A dozen of our women have become princesses and fourteen have become duchesses to date, but none of our princesses ranks, or has ranked, as high as some of our duchesses. Thus neither Anna Gould, in her new role of Princess de Sagan, nor any of the other American women who have married French princes, are officially recognized in France as near-queens, their titles having disappeared after the French revolution.

Husbands of other American princesses belong only to the "mediatized," or formerly reigning houses of Germany, whose thrones, crowns and scepters were confiscated by Napoleon Bonaparte, although the Congress of Vienna, by way of a balm, allowed them to retain their empty rank and titles. Last and least are our American princesses whose husbands bear title in Slavic countries like Russia, where the rank of prince is one of the least, being about equal to that of count or baron in other countries, and then in Italy titles may be purchased, there being two classes, those belonging to royalty and the nobility and those going with ancient estates, even when purchased by foreigners. But in Italy, as well as in some other continental European countries, one may be a duke and yet of higher rank than a prince of ancient lineage.

Yankee Princess of Italy.

Thus as the Duchess of the Abruzzi, Miss Elkins would have rank far above three other American women who can, or could, boast of being Italian princesses. For example, there is Miss Elizabeth Hickson Field of New York, who married Prince Salvator Brancaccio, whose title dates back to 1391 and who also bears the Spanish title Duke of Lustra. This prince, who has been a model husband, was a prime favorite with King Humbert and an attaché of his court, while the American princess used to be lady-in-waiting to Queen Margherita. Another American princess in Italy was Miss Josephine Mary Curtis, daughter of Joseph Davis Beers Curtis of New York, who at Paris, in 1885, became the third wife of Dom Emanuel, Prince of Ruspoli and of Poggio-Suasa, an Italian deputy. In 1888 the Italian Prince Camporeale, who was also Duke of Aldragana, married a New York divorcee, Mrs. Thomas Kingsland, who had been Miss Florence Binney, daughter of John Binney of Burlington, N. J., in which city the American girl became the Princess Camporeale. This prince's family as far back as the fourteenth century migrated from Bologna to Sicily, where they have since been established.

Among the other early American princesses was Miss Evelyn Julia Bryant Mackay, stepdaughter of John W. Mackay, who, at Paris, in 1885, married Prince Colonna di Galatro, a Spanish scapegrace, whose abuse and brutality caused her to leave him, and live afterward with her mother in London, keeping her three children with her. About this time, Miss Clara, daughter of Collis P. Huntington, married Prince Hatzfeldt of Germany, and Miss Winnaretta Singer, another American girl, married a Prince de Scey-Montbeliard.

Then in 1899 Miss Florence Hazard, daughter of E. C. Hazard, a millionaire catsup manufacturer of Shrewsbury, N. J., married Prince Francis Auersperg, who had been a poor physician in New York, and this international marriage might, so far as rank is concerned, have been one of the most brilliant yet made by an American girl, since this prince belonged to one of those mediatized, or formerly reigning houses of Germany, rather than to the mere nobility. But because of his marriage, he was obliged by his family to resign all of his rights and prerogatives as a member of a mediatized house, and to descend to the rank of the ordinary nobility, as in the case of the mediatized Count Poppenheim, whose countess, now divorced, was a Miss Wheeler of New York. Princess Auersperg also left her husband after a short and stormy married life.

Our Princess Elopes.

The next American princess entered upon the page of history was the wealthy but ill-fated Clara Ward of Detroit, who in 1890 married the Prince de Chimay of the old French house of that name, and who, after living with him five years, spending $300,000 in repairing his estates and bearing him two children, ran away with Rigo, a Hungarian gypsy musician, who has lately been performing in this country. The Prince, who has been described in the American prints as of irreproachable conduct, obtained a divorce in 1897, after which the ex-Princess had the noble Chimay crest tattooed upon her arm and then distributed photographs of herself adorned in this manner. The courts gave the Prince the custody of her children. She was only in her teens when she married him. Our only other French princess is Anna Gould, daughter of Jay Gould, who some months ago divorced Count Boni de Castellane and this summer married his cousin, Prince Helie de Sagan, whose mother, the former princess, was leader of the Paris smart set into which the former Countess de Castellane was ambitious to enter.

Two American women have become Russian princesses, this rank, however, as explained, being near the bottom of the list of titled Russians. One of these is Julia Dent Grant, granddaughter of President Grant, who married Prince Michael Cantacuzene of the Russian Imperial Guards, and the other is Amelie Rives, the Virginia girl who became famous for writing "The Quick or the Dead." She first married John Armstrong Chanler, who after their divorce was adjudged insane in New York State, and who has lately appeared before the courts and had his name changed to Chaloner. Twelve years ago she married the Russian Prince Troubetzkoy, a painter who has since maintained a studio in this country.

Fourteen American Duchesses.

Miss Elkins will become the fifteenth American duchess when she marries the King of Italy's cousin. Of higher rank than any of the princesses enumerated above have been the four American women who have become Duchesses of Marlborough and of Manchester. The first American Duchess of Marlborough was Mrs. Hammersley, stepmother of the present Duke. She was reputed to have inherited $7,000,000 and to have spent more than $1,000,000 upon his palace, Blenheim. After his death she married Lord William Beresford and endeavored to retain the title of duchess, but Queen Victoria insisted that she drop it and rest content with that of "Lady" Beresford. The young Duke, as we better remember, emulated his father and married an American heiress, Consuelo Vanderbilt, daughter of William K. Vanderbilt, the New York multimillionaire. The young Duchess's legal separation from her overbearing husband is fresh in the public memory. Early in her married life it was said to be her ambition to eventually marry one of her children to one of King Edward's grandchildren. The last two Duchesses of Manchester have also been American women, the former having been Consuelo Yznaga, daughter of Ontonio Yznaga of Ravenswood, La., who had married a Vanderbilt. And, oddly enough, Consuelo Vanderbilt, who married the Duke of Marlborough, was named for this kinswoman Consuelo Yznaga, who married the Duke of Manchester. The latter Duke was reckoned among the poorest dukes of England, but he had an enviable social position, and his American wife soon became a favored friend of the present Queen. The young Duke a few years back married Miss Helene, daughter of Eugene Zi Cincinnati, who rose from petty officer to commander in our navy during the Civil Wa to president of the Cincinnati, Hamilton a Railroad. His career, by the way, is simila Miss Elkins's maternal grandfather, ex-Sen Davis, who from brakeman on the Baltimo Railroad also rose to multimillionaire rail well as to coal baron.

Duke Married Two Americans.

A duke who has married two American w Grace de Dino, who as the French Marquis rand-Perigord first wedded Miss Bessie Curt of Joseph Davis Beers Curtis of New York riage, which occurred at Nice, was away and was one of our first international alli the fashionable world. Had they remained would have become a duchess, but they we and not until after the separation did he fal title of Duc de Dino. Then he made a du Adele Livingston-Sampson, daughter of Jos of New York and divorced wife of Frederic His first wife has called herself the Marquis rand-Perigord and spent her winters in New is a sister of the above-mentioned Miss Jo tis, who became the Italian Princess of R Poggio-Suasa.

Two members of the multimillionaire Sin the same which produced the Princess d beliard, mentioned above—have become These were Mrs. Isaac Singer, who married Camposelice, and Miss Isabella Singer, wh Duc de Decazes.

Other American duchesses not to be f Miss Mathilde Davis, who married the D Monfeltrio; Miss Mary E. Forbes, wife of Choiseul-Praslin, and Miss Lowry, daughter bald Lowry of Washington, who before he his title and while he was a young attaché ish legation in Washington, fell in love wi married the Duke of Arcos, who directly war with Spain, served as Spanish Minister ted States. This marriage has been a happ that of Mattie Mitchell, daughter of the Ill-f States Senator Mitchell of Oregon, who ma de Rochefoucauld.

OUT FOR A TIME AT PLAY.

The wrinkled and worn old faces,
About us every day,
Are, after all, but children,
Out for a while at play.
Careworn and gray are we
By the cares along the way,
But after all we're children,
Just out for a time at play.
Over the laughing, happy face,
We draw the veil blasé,
And forget that we're only children,
Out for a time at play.
Proud, we run the wonted race,
Wise in our human way,
Yet all the time we're children,
Just out for a time at play.
The mills of the gods grind slowly,
But they're running every day,
And some day we'll awaken,
To be with the gods at play.

OUT FOR A TIME AT PLAY.

The wrinkled and worn old faces,
About us every day,
Are, after all, but children,
Out for a while at play.

Careworn and gray are we
By the cares along the way,
But after all we're children,
Just out for a time at play.

Over the laughing, happy face,
We draw the veil blasé,
And forget that we're only children,
Out for a time at play.

Proud, we run the wonted race,
While in our human way,
Yet all the time we're children,
Just out for a time at play.

The mills of the gods grind slowly,
But they're running every day,
And some day we'll awaken,
To be with the gods at play.

A Modern Aladdin.

HARRY RIDER AND HIS WONDERFUL PATENT LAMP.

By a Special Contributor.

THE man next to the window looked up with a laugh from the letter he was reading.

"Did any of you fellers," he asked, "ever read that story about Aladdin and the wonderful lamp?"

"My friend," answered the red-headed man in the corner, "when I was a boy I used to sidle up to every brass lamp I saw, and when nobody was looking I would rub it and wait for results."

"And nothin' never happened?"

"Nothing ever happened," admitted the red-headed man with a sigh. "That is," he added, as an afterthought, "nothing that was of any benefit to me. One time, I remember, I rubbed too hard, turned the lamp over and set the house afire. Distinctly I recall that for some days thereafter I frequently rubbed—but not the lamp. Why this sudden interest in poor old Aladdin?"

"Oh, I just got a letter from a friend o' mine," replied the passenger by the window," and he says, 'I've still got my old lamp.' "

"When I put that and Aladdin together I get a strong odor of a yarn. How about it, my pilgrim friend?"

"Well, if a yarn's a lie, this ain't a yarn. It's straight facts. Anyway, I believe 'em to be facts, for the feller that wrote this letter ain't any hand to tell fairy tales. His name's Rider—Harry Rider—and he was born and raised in Indiana, same as I was. Some years back Harry went to Chicago to look for a job. He wasn't at all particular what it was, so long as it give him a start. He wasn't much more'n a kid then, 18 or 19 years old, but he had his mind made up he was goin' to be somethin' or somebody some day, and one road looked as good as another to him. He didn't find jobs growin' on peach trees, though, and he was down to his last $5 bill when he answered an ad. from a feller who wanted agents to sell lamps.

"This man had a patent lamp that was a crackajack. It had a clockwork arrangement inside which turned a fan and kept a stiff breeze goin' up through the flame. It made a light that was white as daytime, and as soft as moonshine.

" 'You pay me $2 for your sample lamp,' he says to Harry. 'That's to protect me in case you never come back. You sell the lamps for $10 apiece, $3 down and $1 a week. You get the $3 cash; I get the rest, if I can. If you can get $8 cash for a lamp, take it and give me half. See?'

"Harry thought he could see with the aid of the white light, put up his $2 for a lamp and started out. He put in his first day working on the theory that the place to get money is where there is money, so he chases up Michigan avenue, where the millionaires live, when they're at home. Of course, he didn't get a smell. They don't want brass lamps in a palace. He was pretty blue that night when he went to his lodging-house, one o' these 10-20-30 affairs, where they stack you up like cord wood. But down in the office they had a little collection of old books, and just to get his mind off his troubles, Harry picked one of 'em up. At the first crack he opened up at the story about Aladdin. He'd read it before; and it seemed mighty funny that it should bob up just then. Didn't seem like it could be just a happen-so. He thought about it awhile and then he got out his lamp, went over in a dark corner and began to rub it, pretendin' like he was just shinin' it up. He was just a boy, you know. Well, there wasn't anything doin', so he goes to bed.

"That night he has a dream. He dreams he's over among the common, everyday folks on the West Side, and he's sellin' lamps like hot cakes. He sees himself goin' into one house after another, and every place he gets an order for a lamp, sometimes two or three. Next mornin' he concludes maybe there's somethin' in it, and as soon as he gets a cup o' coffee and a sinker under his belt he hikes out for that side o' town. And that day he sold lamps, not like he did in the dream, but enough to clear him over $30. The next day he did pretty near as well, and he kept right along doin' the same thing for about three weeks. He got him a nice room and some good clothes, and was livin' on easy street. Then he struck a bad streak, and for a while it seemed like he couldn't make his grub.

"About that time he concluded he'd give the lamp another rub, and he did. He didn't dream a thing that night, but the next evenin' a feller blew into his room and he says: 'Young man, I been lookin' for you for a week. My name's Smart. I'm a real estate agent. You sold me a lamp some time back. I kind-a like the way you did it. Need a man to work off a new subdivision. Give you hundred a month and commission. What do you say?'

"Harry said 'yes' before Smart could bat his eyes. The lamp business wasn't bad, but real estate looked more like steady money, and the very next day he was into it knee-deep. He made a rattlin' good salesman, too. He went at it for keeps, and he studied the business harder than he ever studied the multiplication table. Inside of a year there wasn't nothin' about Chicago real estate he didn't know, and he was beginnin' to lay up a little pile in the bank. All the time he was keepin' his eye open for little deals on the side. He'd been workin' along this way for about two years when he saw what looked like a bully chance to make a pile. He laid the matter before his boss, but the old man had his hands full, and didn't think much of the proposition, anyway. Then Harry got out his lamp and give it a few rubs. The dream he got that night convinced him he was on the right track. So he got some fellows to back him up and went into it. It came out just as he had figured it, and put him $50,000 to the good, and him only 21. What do you think o' that?

"Well, so much luck sort o' took him off his feet. He got the notion that he was all the mustard, and he let the lamp lay over in a corner and turn green. He kept gettin' into bigger deals all the time, spreadin' himself to be a real plutocrat. First thing he knows he was in over his head and then he struck the toboggan. It was a regular shoot the chute for Harry, and he hit the bottom with a thud. All he had left was his hide and a trunk full o' glad rags, and his old brass lamp. It had been a long time since he'd done any rubbin'. While he was up in the six-cylinder class he laughed at the idea o' lamps havin' anything to do with his success. It was brains that did it. But when he butted into the rocks he began to have some doubts about the brains. Maybe the lamp did have somethin' to do with it, after all. So one day he digs it out again and rubs away at it until it shines like a lookin' glass.

"That very night he has a dream. He seemed to be away out on a prairie somewhere, but there wasn't any grass. The only thing growin' was queer-lookin' bunches o' weeds and prickly pears. Off to one side he could see some brown, bald mountains, and he thought it was most awfully hot weather. But he wasn't botherin' about the mountains or the heat. He thought he was sittin' flat on the ground and in front of him was a pile o' sand, and he was havin' a bushel o' fun diggin' up the sand with his hands an' lettin' it run through his fingers like you see kids do at the seashore. But this sand that he seen in his dream was yellow, and when it streamed down between his fingers it made him think of a waterfall o' sunshine.

"That's all there was to the dream, and when he woke up he found he was all of a sweat. It wasn't more than 2 o'clock in the mornin', but there wasn't any more sleep that night for Harry. He was sure that it meant something, but what it was he couldn't for the life of him figure out. There was only one thing he felt sure about, and that was that the sand was gold. And gold is always a pretty good sign. But where was it and how was he going to connect with it? If the dream was a tip, it was a mighty queer one. Looked like the lamp was havin' fun with him. He worried over it until 7 o'clock and then he got up and went out to breakfast.

"He sat down at a table in a little restaurant, and a girl brought him a mornin' paper to read, while he was waitin' for his fried eggs. Well, sir, the very first thing that struck his eye was a telegram on the front page, tellin' about discoveries o' gold out in Nevada. He didn't read any more.

" 'That's the answer,' he says to himself. 'The old lamp's all right, and it's me for Nevada.'

"He didn't have $10 to his name, but he had some friends left, and one of 'em was me. He came straight to my office that mornin', told me the whole story, and struck me for a loan. I laughed at him, but I let him have the money. He didn't lose any time, and the first train goin' west that night carried him along with it.

"It looks mighty funny, and I don't try to explain it at all, but it's a fact that he got into Goldfield just in time to get in on that Mohawk deal. You remember about that. How that stock was goin' beggin' at 40 and 50 cents, and then one day they broke into bonanza ore and the stock went up like a rocket until you couldn't buy it at $18. Rider didn't get there with enough money to play very heavy, but he put every cent he had on it, got about 400 shares, and he came out some $7000 to the good on an investment of a couple o' hundred. That give him a start again, and since then he's been climbin' right up, gettin' richer every minute, and if he wanted to get out in the yard and let gold sand run through his fingers, like he did in the dream, I reckon he could do it. But you can bet your sweet life he ain't lettin' any green mould collect on that brass lamp any more, and he don't go into any deals without givin' her a rub.

"But he's kicked over the traces once since he's been out there, and I'm kinda in doubts about the results. The last letter I got from him, about four months ago, he writes me, says he: 'There's a girl out here that I got sweet on some time back. I made up my mind,' says he, 'that I was goin' to marry her, but just to be polite I asked my old lamp about it. That night I had a dream like I always do when I rubs the brass,' says he. 'I thought I was out of doors on a dark night, so dark I couldn't see a thing. Any way I turned it was pitch black. I didn't know where I was nor where I wanted to go. I just stood there with my arms stretched out. Then I woke up. Now,' says he, 'what do you think of that for a nice, cheerful prospect? All the same,' he says, 'I've married the girl. The lamp's all right in business,' says he, 'but I don't believe it knows a thing about matrimony.' That's the last I heard from him until I got this letter today."

"And does he say anything about the girl in that?" asked the red-headed man.

"Not a blamed whisper."

"Beerage" and Peerage.

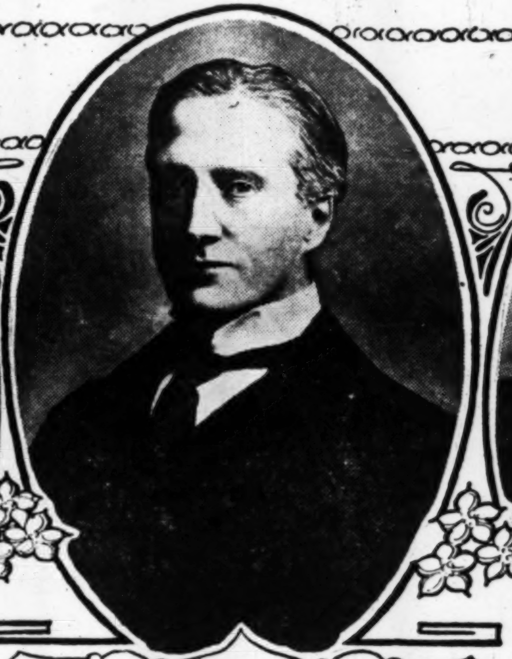
BRITISH NOBLEMEN WHO OWE THEIR TITLES TO BEER.

From a Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—There have been fortunes made in beer the world over, but there is only one country which can show a section of nobility who have to thank beer for their titles. That country is England, and the noblemen concerned are known, thanks to Labouchere, as the "Beerage" instead of the "Peerage."

Just at present its members are much to the fore. They have dropped all business matters and have united to fight the government's License Bill which aims at decreasing the number of saloons. Fewer saloons would mean smaller profits for them. Therefore, they are championing the right of the poor man to have every possible facility for getting beer.

Lord Burton (Mike Bass)



Lord Iveagh.

Hon. Ruper Guinnes

The "Beerage" proper is composed of four peers, one lady of title and half a dozen baronets and knights. One of their number, Sir John Charles Bell, Lord Mayor of London, who is chairman and one of the largest stockholders of the Wenlock Brewery Company, has just been further honored by being made a baronet. With the sons and daughters who may be entitled to the courtesy prefix of "Honorable," married as they are to other lords and ladies, the "Beerage" is swelled to fair-sized proportions. Naturally these titled husbands and wives and also their titled parents have been let in on the ground floor in brewery investments.

The oldest of the "Beer Barons," that is as regards creation of the title is concerned, is Lord Ardilaun. Americans will recognize the man quicker when I state that the Baron's name is Edward Arthur Guinness. It is just twenty-eight years ago that he was created a peer, though his father was made a baronet as long ago as 1867.

Lord Ardilaun was the eldest son, but his younger brother, Edward Cecil Guinness, has outdistanced him in the race of honors, for he was created a baronet nearly a quarter of a century ago, and six years later became a baron. Now, only a short time ago, he was raised again in the peerage and made a Viscount. That is Lord Iveagh.

Lord Burton, who takes his title from Burton-on-Trent, where most of the English beer is brewed, will be better known to Americans by his family name, which is Mike Bass. Everybody knows Bass's ale all the world over, just as they know Guinness's stout or porter and Alsopp's pale ale.

The head of the house of Alsopp is Lord Hindlip. The only titled lady brewer is Lady Meux of the famous London brewery bearing that name.

There are baronets and knights and all sorts of minor titled people connected with the "Beerage" directly such as the Worthingtons, the Whitbreads, the Gilbeys, all heads of English breweries.

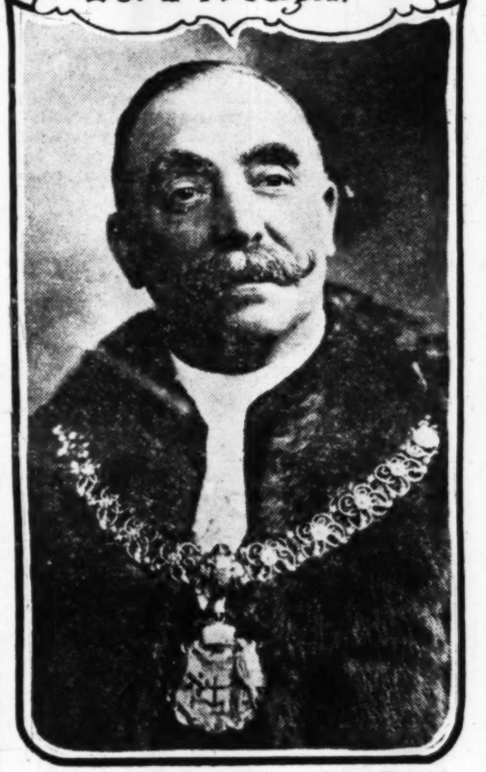
By direct connection on account of marriage and the subsequent alliance with the finances of the great breweries the following titled families come into familiar touch with the "Beerage" and all its interests: Lord Plunket, Earl of Howth, Earl of Clancarty, Lord Forester, Lord Langford, Earl of Bantry, Earl of Shaftesbury, Lord Byron, Lord Bagot, Earl of Denbigh, Lord Vaux of Harrowden, Earl of Aylesford, Lord Guernsey and the Earl of Onslow.

Place aux Dames—though there is little to be said of Lady Meux. She is quite a mystery. So far as the title is concerned she is the last holder, for it will be extinct with her death. Her maiden name was Valerie Susie Langdon, and she was on the stage in the seventies. Of course she was a beautiful and fascinating woman.

Among the wealthy young men about town in those days was the eldest son of the brewery baronet, Sir Henry Meux. Although there was much opposition the son married the footlights' favorite. Eight years later he came into the title and the estates on his father's death.

Money was spent by both Sir Henry and Lady Meux as if it was water. But then the brewery was turning out plenty of beer, and that meant money, so it made little difference how quickly they spent it. Both owned racing stables. Lady Meux ran her horses in her own name, and was very successful. Her husband died at the beginning of the century, and left her all his property. There have been no children of the marriage, and there is no heir to the title.

It was Lady Meux who leased a horse to the late William C. Whitney of New York which won the Blue Riband of the Turf, the historic Derby race, for the American. Lady Meux lives in a great marble palace in Park Lane. She has also a country seat, Theobald's Park in Hertfordshire. She goes into Bohemian society only, and has her own little circle of friends among the sporting set. Now and again little tales of tobascoesque affairs creep out. Beyond these, Lady Meux is never seen or heard about. She is wrapped in mystery so far as the public is concerned.



Sir John Charles Bell.

The Guinness family is no nouveau riche concern, I would have you realize. The first Guinness, according to the records of the family, was alive and kicking in Ireland somewhere in the thirteenth century. Only the name then was Magennis. Along about 1300 a McGuinez, squire to some valiant knight, was himself knighted on the field of battle and thereafter was known as Sir Don Guinez. Another of the family was created Viscount Magennis of Iveagh, but the title became extinct in the seventeenth century.

The fortunes of the Guinness family were laid in 1759, when Arthur Guinness, gentleman, of Dublin, bought the St. James's Gate Brewery in the Irish capital from Mark Rainsford. A couple of years later he married an heiress.

It was their son who married the greatest heiress of the day, the daughter of Benjamin Lee. In addition to barrels of money she had the blue blood of Edward III in her veins and was of the proud families of Percy, Stafford and Mortimer. They named their son and heir Benjamin Lee Guinness, and when he came into his own

As a matter of fact, none of the present

Old Bill Bass was originally a carrier,

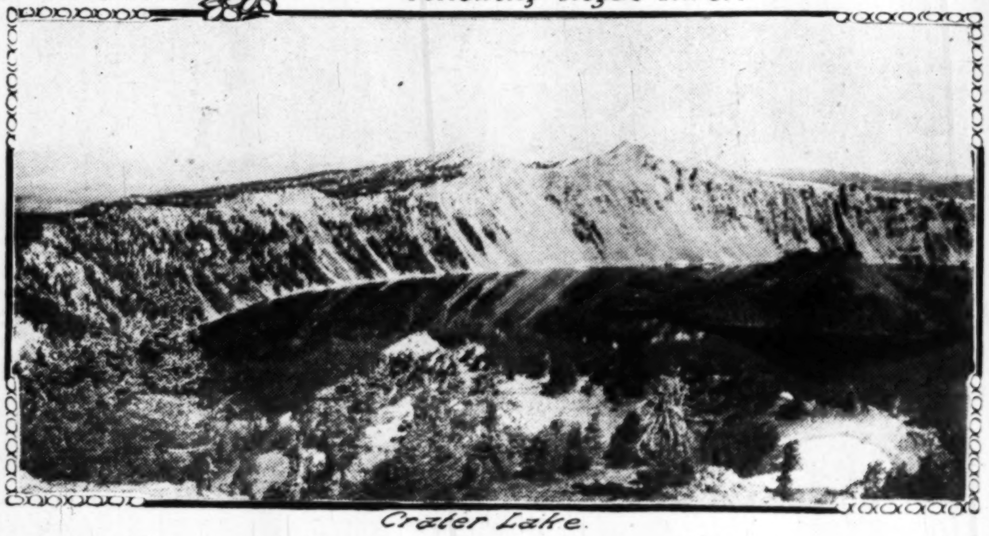
We passed the Natural Bridge, which spans the Rogue a few miles above Mills's Falls, and then came within the volcanic area surrounding Crater Lake. The character of the vegetation changed, and we found only those plants which can accommodate themselves to the high altitude and scant soil. The Rogue was now a merry brooklet, chattering merrily over boulders of pumice and lava.

The main road crosses the divide within three miles of Crater Lake, and within the limits of the park. A very fair and very steep road leads directly to the brink, and if the driver is an expert and his car a good one, he can drive it to the very edge of the ancient caldron. Here he can shut off his spark, and sit enchanted while he gazes in silent awe into the almost bottomless depths of the great crater in which the majestic lake rests serene. On arriving at the edge the motorist is struck with the fect that there is no beach—it's just a straight drop down for 2000 feet, so his brakes must be sure. At only one place can the water be reached, and that is by a zigzag trail that winds down from Eagle Rock, near the point where the road touches the brink. If one will make the steep descent, he will find the water cold and pure and sweet, and the lake itself abundantly stocked with trout. Generally, Crater Lake is described when it is said that it is a body of fresh water, six miles long and three miles wide, which fills, or partly fills the crater of an extinct volcano; its shores are almost sheer precipices, ranging in height from 1000 to 2000 feet, and with a cone-shaped island in the center that rises 845 feet above the water.



Crater Lake.

About Crater Lake there is a stretch of the wildest country in America. Turn which way we might, there was spread before us an endless array of mountains, mountains, mountains, pine-whiskered and purple-hazed, and jutted here and there with snowcaps. In the south we saw the glittering forms of Pitt and Union Peak; in the north the white hoods of Diamond, Thielson and the Three Sisters. Nearer at hand, and surrounding the lake, were Mount Scott, Castle Crag, Saddle Mountain, Round Top and The Watchman, all snow-covered. Turning to the east, the rich plains and placid lakes of Klamath were laid before us. We saw also the pumice piles and the lava beds that lie in the tracks of the molten scoria that ages ago oozed down the red-hot slopes of the old volcano.

Our camp in Crater Lake Park was just under the snowbanks, and every morning we shook the frost from our blankets, what though it was midsummer. We had venison every day, with a change now and then of trout and grouse. We broke camp and coasted a very great portion of the eighteen miles down the east slope of the Cascades to Klamath Lake. At Klamath Falls we restocked with gasoline and supplies, struck camp again for a few days, then struck the Dead Indian road for home, after covering 400 miles. We had mishaps, of course, but these only added to the interest of the trip, and the troubles were so greatly overbalanced by the enjoyments that they are not worthy of mention.

What We Eat.

The Hollander eats decayed shark, but turns with disgust from bread and butter.

The Chinese are fond of stewed dog, but consider beef unhealthful.

The Turk deems dried grasshoppers a delicacy, but an oyster fills him with abhorrence.

The English eat periwinkles, a kind of sea snail, but will have none of the French escargot—a land snail fattened on vine leaves and strawberries.

The West Indian native adores a supper of baked snake and palm worms fried in their own fat, but the very thought of stewed rabbit makes him shudder.

The African bushman eats caterpillars, but scorns limburger cheese.

Savages eat all eggs, barring none. They eat lizards' eggs, alligators' eggs, turtles' eggs, ants' eggs, snakes' eggs. But savages consider crab meat unholy.

The Ambidexterity of Fad.

The idea of ambidexterity, so popular a little while ago, is going out even faster than it came in.

"Time given to the left hand," said a school teacher, "is time taken from the right. In making the left hand more skillful, you make the right less so. An ambidextrous nation would produce no Raphaels, no Michael Angelos, no Laliques

"They used to say that Japan was ambidextrous, but that is not true. There is no more ambidexterity among the Japanese than among us.

"Do you know the only place where ambidexterity is frequent? In lunatic asylums. Idiots are nearly always ambidextrous."

No Rest in Sight.

The physician shook his head ominously.

"You," he said, "are as bad a case of overwork as I have ever seen. You must at once drop everything—everything—and take a long and perfect rest."

But with a sigh the pale patient answered:

"Alas! doctor, that is impossible. For I am a papier mache worker by profession, and I have hurry-up orders for John the Baptist heads for Salomé dancers that will keep me unavoidably busy day and night for the next six months."

"Then," said the other, "there is indeed no hope."

At a Studio Tea.

She put down her cup and rose.

"Thanks, awfully," she said, "for letting me see your Academy picture, Mr. Brush—and good-by."

He accompanied her gallantly to the door.

"And are you going to see Black's Academy picture over the way now?" he inquired.

She gave him her brightest smile.

"Oh, no!" she said sweetly. "I shall see that at the Academy, you know."

CONEY ISLAND is now at the top crest of the greatest year ever enjoyed by any pleasure park, since the days of old, when Ancient Greeks turned to groves of trees for their relaxation from the city's life, and thus started the fad.

This handful of sand fashioned into an island, and by a fortunate accident placed only half an hour from the biggest city of the new world, has never experienced such a summer as the present.

One million rides at 10 cents per day is the average of the patronage that has rewarded the most ingenious devices for the pleasure of amusement hunters that man ever yet thought out.

The Chute the Chute, the Toboggan, the Tickler, the Trip to the Moon, Merry-go-Round, Human Toboggan, Ride on the Camel and all the other hundreds of curious devices have drawn as never before. Boats and cars have carried unending processions of thousands to this wonderful place of fun, with its mile after mile of peerless beach, its strange medley of queer human activities, its astonishing mingling of noise, laughter, song and folly.

"Coney has hit its high spot this year," to put it in the language that is the vogue on the island.

And Coney's high spot is something to comment on, for the island has had a wonderful career. In a way the great success of this year is the reward of virtue, for the steady effort of the last few years to do away with all that was questionable, and permit only on the island the cleanest of fun, has converted Coney into a place where little offends, and the enterprise of private capital is so well pleased with the result that the place will never be permitted to fall back again.

Coney is a place for the production of a thousand novel sensations. It is a virtual enchanted land, where the only things that keep the visitor in touch with the practical life he has left is the boundless supply of eatables and drinkables.

The cloud-piercing towers, the sea-braving piers, the countless shifting throng, dazzling in its holiday attire, might take a man from the world he has known were it not for the frequent announcement from countless venders that frankfurters, popcorn, taffy, oysters, clams, candy, lemonade and ice-cold soft drinks were never so good or frequent.

Trolley cars, railroad trains, steamboats, launches, carriages and automobiles take their freight of pleasure hunters to Coney. The day has passed when the island is the pleasure point for the poor alone. The rich go out for a frolic, and the husband, whom business keeps in the city while his family hibernates at shore or mountains, takes his night runs out to Coney, and, in many cases has a better time than the wife and family far away.

The night scene in itself is enough to attract the crowd. All that the amazing genius of the power of electricity can do to make the place look different from anything on the terrestrial ball has been accomplished. In brilliant lines of flame the towers and buildings are dotted out against the blue of the sky.

The man who would make a round of the sensation producers has arranged an exciting evening for himself. He will need to have his nerves and heart in fine shape, for there are more hair raisers bunched here than were ever seen together at any other place.

First the "Ziz," which is a scenic railway that gallops out to sea and back, giving the rider some thrilling jolts and curves over the bosom of the ocean. Many fair riders emit that famous Coney Island scream at the prospect of being suddenly launched head first into the depths of the water below.

It is interesting to meet this scream. It makes the whole journey. It will be found everywhere, and practiced by everything feminine that makes the journey. It is a yell, partly laughter, partly fright and wholly excitement, and it makes the night scream from the first settling of darkness till the shutters have been put up, and the home-going crowd has left the island deserted.

First the "Ziz." Perhaps it has made the experimenter thirsty with its dizzy leaps. If so he can take his choice from dozens of places of liquid refreshments, and along with his drink he can have any kind of amusement he wants, for there are all kinds of cafés, and they vie with one another in getting original companies of musicians.

Next it is a ride on the camels, grave heroes of the days of antiquity, who, with serious mien, bob along carrying with perfect indifference sons and daughters of a people undreamed of in the days when Africa was already an ancient country.

More animals. Bostock is here. He has a host of thrilling, blood-curdling acts, with lions, tigers, etc., and these never fail of their liberal patronage. There are also snake charmers, without which no such place would ever dare operate, but it is not the old-fashioned serpent tamer of the old days who works here. Everything must be novel, and these snakes are made to do a host of things that wauld have been beyond the prowess of their predecessors of a decade ago.

Then comes the airship, one of the most loved of Coney's stunts because it gives the public a chance to experience for a few seconds that joy which is the ambition of man, to go through the air, to jeer at those cobwebby laws of specific gravity, and burst into a skilled imitation of a bird.

The rustic box-office of the Great Divide makes a terrific appeal to the visitor, too. It used t scenic railway man was content to give hi ride. That has satisfied them. But no l anything so primitive do. Now there mus erland, with chalets, frozen torrents, the scenes from the Spanish War, street sce Madrid, a ride through the Dragon's Gorge, Peary through the Arctic regions, a dip to of the sea; and in extreme cases the pleasure of a whirling fight through hell. This la is ferocious enough to make the most hard wish to turn over a new leaf, and start life better auspices.

Yearly the tunnels are getting longer, an some fierce grapples taking place in those d where Cupid has a chance to get in his Therein is shown the difference between the itor to Coney Island and the transient knows just when to return to propriety, but horn often miscalculates the time, and com the blinding light having a death clutch on of his girl, while his face is fairly faste But, of course, this faux pas adds to the others.

The Loop-the-Loop continues to hold many persons still remain loyal to Ju which is said to be the swiftest ride on th summer has seen an immense popularity f Roulette Wheel, also for the Rolling B somewhat similar in character.

Thousands have paid for the fun of the mysteries of the Meerschaum Pipe.

The Trip to the Moon, the Kansas Cyclo town Flood, the Mirror Maze are all patronized, and the Human Toboggan ha huge hit. The passengers on this thr taken to the top on an automatic stairca on which to ride, and a shove to start on their way down the slippery incline first, according to their preference. It scream, of torn clothing and riotous laugh

The Tickler was an absolute novelty th "knocked their brains out." It is the surprising and disconcerting of all the passengers sit in tubs, which are mou and in their descent of a high incline, and do everything calculated to make

The Tea That Cheers.

The tea looked like golden floss silk—like shredded golden satin—like the fluff of dandelions dyed gold.

"And is this tea?" said the reporter.

"This," the tea merchant answered, "is the best tea in the world, and it is worth $90 or more a pound. For this, sir, is the famous Golden TIP.

"I'll tell you why it is so costly.

"Every chest of the best $1.50 tea contains some handfuls of undeveloped leaves, of small, gold-tipped leaves, called Flowery Pekoe.

"Sort out from a chest these leaves; warp them—a handful at a time—in a square of satin; shake the satin lightly; empty the leaves back into the chest.

"Clinging to the satin remain a few golden shreds, a golden fluff, a golden lint. You brush it off carefully into a jar.

"You cull more handfuls of undeveloped leaves from another chest, and, shaking them up in the satin, you are again rewarded with some more golden fluff.

"That is Golden Tip, and by the time you have obtained in this tedious manner a pound of it, it is no wonder that the exquisite product is worth $90 or $100, is it?"

He shook the tea about in its Satsuma jar. The fluffy golden stuff shimmered like satin.

"Only emperors drink it," he said. "A cup costs more than a bottle of champagne."—[Exchange.

The Molting of the Birds.

ONE REASON WHY SO FEW ARE HEARD SINGING NOW.

By a Special Contributor.

DURING the last of August and for the greater part of September one often hears comment made upon the lack of birds where a few weeks before they had been abundant. Suddenly, as it seems, one finds the yard deserted and the lack of music is noticeable. This condition is partly because during the latter part of August the majority of our summer visitors leave for their winter quarters, and the winter visitants having not arrived, their absence is the more noticeable.

Another reason that the birds are so little in evidence during this period is that they are shedding their summer plumage preparatory to coming out in fresh array for the winter. Though the majority of our common birds spend summer and winter with us during this molting season, they sing very little and seem in every way to make themselves as inconspicuous as possible. I think we females can sympathize with them, for even for us who have no feathers to shed this time between seasons is often a trying one. With our summer clothes the worse for wear and our winter ones not yet procured we, too, feel like keeping quiet.

This molting of the feathers has some curious aspects. Though many of the birds never change the color of their garb, others there are that look entirely different in their summer and winter suits. In fact, it is hard to always recognize them as the same birds. Particularly is the change great in males having bright plumage, this being changed in the fall to the somber garb of the female. Our little goldfinches, or wild canaries, who have so much bright yellow during the summer, become modest olive birds in the winter plumage and are comparatively inconspicuous as they swing from a wayside weed devouring seeds that would otherwise become pests.

The bright suits of the male birds are their courting suits and wedding garments. When the young have been reared and the summer work is over, it is fitting that the gorgeous suit should be dispensed with. For the long journey south surely an inconspicuous garb secures better protection than does a brilliant color.

The birds that will be soon coming back to us come in their winter plumage. The Audubon warbler, for instance, is a very modestly-garbed bird as we see him all winter long, but when spring comes and he is getting on his courting robes he becomes as another bird, giving us a glimpse of the beauty he flaunts in his northern home.

Some birds do not get their bright plumage until their third year/ This is the case with many of the orioles. Often we see males that have the same inconspicuous color as the females. It is supposed that another year they will have come to their own, and wear the brilliant colors.

The white-crowned sparrows that visit us every winter have among their number many birds having brown stripes with the black ones rather than white. People often take them to be another kind of bird, but we are told that they are the young birds, and that later they will acquire the white stripes. I have myself watched them going through the change in the springtime, the brown stripes being gradually crowded out and replaced by white.

Young birds usually start out in life with the same plumage as the mother. When the feathers change usually the adult plumage is assumed and one is able to tell whether they are male or female. The baby grosbeak that I had for several weeks was getting new feathers when an accident ended his career the last of August. Enough of the bright breast feathers had come in to assure me that he was a male. There is such a difference in the plumage of the male grosbeak that I have been led to wonder if some of them, like some of the orioles, do not grow more brilliant with old age. Some male grosbeaks I have seen that were scarcely brighter than the females, and there have been others that were so bright as to easily be mistaken for orioles, as far as color was concerned.

The Heerman gulls that are abundant on our coast have beautiful plumage. In summer their heads and necks are white, their bodies dark drab, and their bills red. But the queer thing about them is that when I visited the coast at Christmas time the birds were in full summer plumage, and late in July they had mostly taken on their winter plumage, which lacks the white head and neck.

An account of a curious experiment with a male Bobolink and Scarlet Tanager is given in a "Preliminary Report of an Investigation on the Seasonal Changes of Color in Birds," by C. William Beebe, American naturalist, in July-August "Bird Lore." The scarlet tanager is a brilliant bird that many will remember in their old homes. We do not have him in California, a yellow-and-black bird with a red head taking his place. In the winter the red eastern bird changes to the olive tints of the female, and the change is said by those who have seen it to give the bird a most comical, patchwork appearance. To quote from "Bird Lore" in regard to Mr. Beebe's experiment:

"Male Scarlet Tanagers and male Bobolinks in full plumage and in full song were confined in cages where the supply of light was gradually diminished and the amount of food gradually increased. The birds began at once to gain in weight, and to lose in activity, and shortly to diminish singing, and when the time for the fall molt arrived not a feather was shed.

'From time to time a bird was gradually brought into the light for a week or two and meal worms were added to its diet. This invariably resulted in a full resumption of song. Even in the middle of winter a Tanager or a Bobolink would make the room ring with its spring notes, and with this phenomenon was correlated a slight decrease in weight."

Early the following spring Tanagers ~~and~~ Bobolinks which were gradually brought under normal conditions, molted as wild birds of the same species do, into spring breeding plumage Wild Scarlet Tanagers, however, change at this season from olive to scarlet, and male Bobolinks exchange a plumage resembling that of the female to the familiar black, white, and buff. With Mr. Beebe's birds, however, the fall molt having been suppressed, the change in the Tanager was from scarlet and black to scarlet and black, and in the Bobolink from white and buff to black, white, and buff. Mr. Beebe's experiments are still in progress, and for the present he makes no attempt to explain the significance of the results already achieved.

Though comparatively quiet, yet I found many varieties of birds about when I took a tramp through the Arroyo Seco the last of August. Of the summer visitants I found a few about, but they were not at all common. I heard, or saw, orioles, grosbeaks, phainopeplas (all of which I had seen in my own yard,) and one warbling vireo who was keeping up his jerky little song. I missed the summer warblers, wood pewees, king birds, and chats that were about earlier in the year.

Though there were many bird notes to be heard, there was little real music. The goldfinches were doing the most of it. Jolly, good-natured little fellows, not even the laying aside of bright garments could keep them quiet. The linnets, too, were doing some singing, but even these garrulous birds seemed to feel repressed. I think one reason we miss the birds so much at this time is that these linnets, when they have raised their young in our rose bushes, or any vine against the house, all depart for the fields, where weed seeds await them and where they will stay until spring again arrives.

The jays called noisily in their harsh voices; Pacific yellow throats called near-by, but sang not; wren tits were insistent in their guttural chatter, and common towhees slipped quietly about. The song sparrows, as usual, were abundant, and once a song rang out on the stillness, causing me to start at its unexpectedness.

Of migrants I saw only a large flycatcher—the olive-sided, a gray bird that nests in the mountains and simply passes through this way. Sometimes one sees many varieties of these transient birds during the fall, though never so many as in the springtime.

As I walked along the dusty roads and trails and felt the hot sun beating down upon me, I did not wonder at the lack of bird music. Later, when the rains have cleared the atmosphere, washed off the leaves, and laid the dust; when the new feathers have become properly fitted and the occupants sufficiently used to them to feel at home; when the nestlings shall have found their voices, then will the woods and fields, the arroyos and cañons, echo with bird music.

HARRIET WILLIAMS MYERS

Ingalls of Kansas.

A VIEW OF THE BRILLIANT, BUT NOT PROFOUND SENATOR.

By a Special Contributor.

IT is doubtful whether another such kaleidoscopic figure as John J. Ingalls ever found his way into the United States Senate. His brilliant chameleon changes defied all tracing. The kineoscope or the instantaneous kodak could not have caught them. Such virtues as honesty in politics he openly declared to be an "iridescent dream," and took the benefit of his skepticism. Wisely choosing the homage that vice is said to pay to virtue, most politicians lack both the courage and the frankness for such avowals. Prudent in his ordinary expression and conduct to avoid breaches with the conventional code of morals, this Kansas Senator was simply ambitious and spectacular. His disposition demanded showy activity and display. Scholarly in his instincts, he had the art and cunning in language of a Greek sophist. Aeschines himself could not have surpassed him in plausibly converting the worse into the better reason, so adroit was his employment of words and phrasing.

A Great Obituary Orator.

Without convictions of his own, he had the skill to appear interested in the thoughts and emotions which commonly affect others. When a United States Senator dies during his term of office, the perfunctory commonplaces wont to be offered by his surviving associates over his demise not infrequently add a fresh horror to death. The corpus delicti is commonly regarded as an unusual opportunity for the display of eloquence by some colleague of the honorable lamented especially gifted in elegiac oratory.

My own experience of such occasions under the Capitol dome early persuaded me that with the view of escaping such post mortem calamity, prudence would commend to the members of either house of Congress the employment of a Chinese doctor to preserve them in health and life until beyond their days of legislative service. But Ingalls's obituary efforts over deceased Senatorial comrades were exceptional and different, rising to a veritable fine art in the way of eulogy and metaphysical speculation on the ever-seductive problem of man's sempiternity. His skill in weaving the flowers of poetry and vague but seductive hopes with the somber funeral weeds of mortality lent a fascination to human dissolution, his discourses on these occasions, similar to those of Ingersoll, being like well-rounded epitaphs, splendid draperies cast over Death! They might well have made Senatorial colleagues anticipate with pleasure in life their euthanasia or passage out of it and cause them to be willing for departure, for the sake of the entertainment such felicitous disquisitions would afford their surviving comrades. Otherwise they would have been selfish; since what Ingalls lacked in his own fertile resources of attractive speech he did not scruple to borrow from the classic masters of eloquence, such as the prose poets of antiquity or the French Fenélon or Bourdelon in similar discourse, provided that he believed the literature sufficiently obscure to cover the crime of plagiarism, always selecting these excerpts with some discretion as to what might be "caviare to the general." His discretion, however, was sometimes not flawless, by reason of his underestimating the wide literacy of his public.

Victim of the Parallel Column.

The journals of Boston, the natural seat of recondite classics, were his frequent detectors, printing passages from his striking funeral discourses, side by side, with deadly parallel column from Theocritus or Bourdelon. Ingalls's dexterity, however, was nearly sufficient for this. Like the Irish maidservant with the illegitimate baby, he pleaded that the offense was venial by reason of its being such a "little thing," or he insisted upon the extraordinary tenacity of his verbal memory as being responsible for these "unconscious" wholesale appropriations.

However it might be, the aberration was characteristic and frequent and came to be fully recognized by his fellow Senators and the public as a peculiarity, if not an obliquity, in the Kansas man's make-up. His audacity and general brilliancy covered the rest.

He was given to smart sayings. So far as I am aware, he was delinquent neither in his pecuniary nor his domestic obligations, but out of mere love of unorthodoxy in expression was fond of such aphorisms as "The worst use you can put money to is to pay debts with it," "No man has the right to be the husband of the woman I love," and others similarly startling to conventional ethics. He was simply sensational and in love with the limelight.

He could assume every phase of moral speculation and metaphysical reverie. From reflections over a defunct compeer in the Senate as ornately eloquent as a sermon of Chrysostum, out of that body he could as readily betake himself to reporting a prize fight for the sporting columns of the daily newspaper.

As to his newspaper contributions, which afterward became a feature of an eastern yellow journal, Ingalls would have doubtless preferred the Senate as the wider advertising board for his scintillant lucubrations.

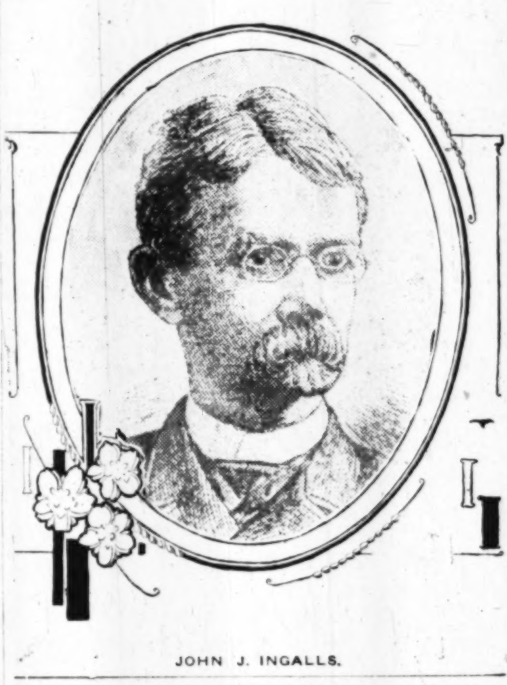
Referring once more to his obituary performances over deceased fellow-members of the Senate, a function in which, with the aid received from the eloquence of the noted French divines and other classic moralists on human destiny, he long took leading rank in that body, it is to be said that he surpassed these performances only in his frequent excoriations of the living. In this province of destructive rhetoric he won his first and chief laurels after entering the Senate; laurels, if they were such, he continued to wear, for he had in this field no Senatorial rivals, living or dead, though he was at times suspected of the ambition to become heir to the reputation and mantle of Conkling. But he needed no adventitious aid from the example or the talent of others.

An Accomplished Vivisectionist.

But in the dissection of a living victim, Ingalls would have given counters to Junius himself, or could easily have done so. His talent in this direction was akin to a malevolent genius. His spectacular exhibitions of it occasionally in the Senate gained him wide notoriety throughout the country. One of these early denunciatory demonstrations, not long after his advent in the Senate, was against the ex-Confederate Gov. Brown of Georgia, at the moment of the assault a Senator of the United States. It was in the early seventies, and the "war between States" had not yet ceased to be a vital subject in American politics, frequent violent debates springing up in both Houses of Congress between Republican representatives and the recently arrived members from our Southern States over the issues of the war—debates analagous to the sensational one between Blaine and Ben Hill over the treatment of the Andersonville prisoners, agitation concerning which for a time shook the country.

The Castigation of Brown.

Brown, a withered specimen and representative of the old-time chivalry of the South, had offended in the Senate by a violent sectional speech. The time had long passed, in the American Congress, when such utterances could be ventured by southern Representatives with impunity, or when there was possible danger, physical or otherwise, to a northern man in taking up a challenge from that section. On the contrary, it was believed that there were scores yet to be paid by the North.



JOHN J. INGALLS.

Ingalls was the man for such a breach. He had the courage of words. A loyalty, even violent, with him was ever a paying stock in the politicians' trade. His enemies sometimes quoted Dr. Johnson's definition of patriotism, as "The last refuge of a scoundrel." He assumed in the Senate the castigation of Brown. The scene that followed was vivid and attracted national attention, making Ingalls's political and other fortune. He launched upon the unhappy Georgian the full force of his effulgent rhetoric, descending even to personalities forbidden by the rules of Senatorial debate. By indirection he described Brown as a weak, vacillating hypocrite, "washing his hands with invisible soap in invisible water." Called to order for this irregularity, by the presiding officer of the Senate, he protested, "if the Senate pleased," that he was simply using against an imaginary personage, "rhetorically," a quotation from Dickens in his description of Uriah Heap, and, thus avoiding technical parliamentary inhibition, proceeded to a still more humiliating picture of the crushed Georgian, who sat helpless before him.

The scene was not soon forgotten in the Senate, and, in the then state of the public mind, wrought upon by sectional and personal issues, made Ingalls famous in a day as the pastmaster of sardonic vituperation. This triumph over the superannuated and innocuous Brown he continued to follow up with similar pyrotechnic victories over offending members of the opposing political party in the Senate, always choosing, however, his protagonists with discretion, carefully avoiding rousing to extremity those known to possess a caustic vocabulary approximating his own.

Vest a Formidable Opponent.

Such a formidable opponent was Vest, the brilliant Democratic Senator from Missouri. Occasional tilts occurred between these exponents of pungent repartee, but when the animadversions of his opponent by the Kansan had been unusually serve I have again and again seen him cross the Senate floor and offer his hand in apology to the Missourian. Danger to himself did not belong to Ingalls's tactics of war. There were calculation and infinite prudence in his methods. He would have no more personally assailed in debate one of the commanding Senators of his own party, such as Sherman or Hoar or Edmunds, or Manderson of Nebraska, than he would have offered his Twenty-seven Years Ago.

NATION AND WORLD SHOCKED BY GUITEAU'S CRIME.

By a Special Contributor.

GUITEAU, the assassin, might have killed Stanford White, and been sent to an asylum. But all of the millions of the Thaws could not have saved the life of their notorious criminal, if he had killed a President.

Guiteau was insane, but that palpable fact could not save him from the gallows.

John Wilkes Booth was insane. But, if captured, he could not have lived to face a jury. It was well for him, and well for the country, that Boston Corbett's bullet finished him.

McKinley was assassinated by an insane, weak-minded pervert; but swift retribution was too slow to suit our people.

Three Presidents of the United States have been assassinated; and each one of them fell by the hand of an insane man. But, it is now known of all men that neither insanity, nor any other excuse nor pretense of excuse, will spare the life of any man who lifts his hand against the President of the United States. He must surely die. These precedents should have deterrent influence upon any man who would entertain a similar criminal idea.

The writer was visiting in Washington on July 2, 1881, when the national capital was frenzied and the whole world startled by the news of the assassination of President Garfield, in a railroad depot. Having the friendship of the District Attorney, the narrator secured admission to the rooms at police headquarters, on Pennsylvania avenue and Four-and-a-half street. The chief fact, apparent to all, and which stands forth most clearly in memory, is that Guiteau seemed to be sane; the most sane and collected man in headquarters. He calmly asserted: "I am a prisoner of state, and should be taken to jail. You are keeping me here until a mob collects, in order that I may be dealt with unlawfully."

Thus the infamous assassin, violating the highest of laws, appealed to the law for protection. As now appears, he was an insane man, an arrogant, self-opinionated paranoaic.

Indefinite information was rife in the streets. Crowds collected, so that the police force was inadequate to keep them away from the depot; inadequate to keep them outside. Therefore President Garfield was carried upstairs and temporarily cared for there. Surgeons were summoned, but they could do nothing there. Within half an hour, there was an ambulance at the door, surrounded by mounted policemen. Thus escorted, the ambulance went careering up Pennsylvania avenue to the White House, where the first careful examination was made, and Surgeon Bliss, a veteran volunteer army surgeon, pronounced the wound to be dangerous, and probably fatal.

The first definite information printed was in an extra edition of the Evening Star, of Washington. Three other extra editions were printed within two hours. They are now before the writer, and give graphic accounts of the dastardly deed.

Fortunate, indeed, was it for Guiteau that he was captured so quickly and taken to police headquarters. The gathering crowds, unanimously on vengeance bent, did not know where he was, until after the police patrol, surrounded by mounted policemen, had taken him to the security of the jail, and that stronghold was promptly guarded by battalions of marines and artillerymen.

The first extra was headlined: "Assassination! The President Shot. Arrest of the Assassin." Then followed the news account:

"President Garfield was shot this morning at 9:30 in the ladies' room of the B. & P. depot. He had just alighted from a carriage, to take the cars for the north. Secretary Hunt and Mrs. Hunt, Secretary Windom and Mrs. Windom, Postmaster-General and Mrs. James, and the rest of the party, had taken their seats in the cars.

"The shooting occurred when the President and Secretary Blaine were walking, arm in arm, through the ladies' waiting-room. Secretary Blaine says: 'I was not going along, but came to say good-by. I heard two shots fired and saw a man running, started for him, and seeing him grabbed, came back to the President, and found him lying on the floor covered with his blood.'"

The second extra said: "Station Agent Kearney says that the President, when alighting, asked how much time they had, and he replied about ten minutes. The crowd screamed: 'He's shot the President! Arrest him!' Guiteau was making for the door when Kearney caught him between the elbows and shoulders and held him like a vise. Kearney took the pistol. Guiteau exclaimed: 'I did it. I have made Vice-President Arthur President of the United States!'"

The second extra also published a long, rambling letter which Guiteau had in his pocket, addressed to the White House, in which he said: "I had no ill will toward the President. His death was a political necessity. I am a lawyer, theologian and a politician. I am a stalwart of the stalwarts. I am going to jail." Guiteau made numerous utterances, all of them indicating that he expected immunity, by the aid of the so-called "stalwarts" who would be politically and officially benefited by his deed. These expressions caused many men to imagine and believe that Senators Conkling and Platt and Vice-President Arthur, who were engaged in political warfare on the President, had been instigators of the crime. These erroneous views were speedily dispelled.

Concerning the assassin, Guiteau, it was printed: "He is short in stature. His body is solid. His head is bald, except some light-colored hair that is still left. He wears a light mustache. He looks neat and dresses well, wearing a blue sack coat. He has no visible means of support. He gets a living by the wits of a dead beat."

During these twenty-seven years there has been plenty of time for angry, fevered blood to cool. But, remembering the frenzied anger of the individual; recalling the intense bitterness which showed on every face, and the mad resentment uttered by every citizen; recalling the political excitement which was thus accentuated; it seems almost miraculous now that mob violence was not exerted. Moreover, with all due deliberation it is now said, albeit with something of the same feeling of that day, that if ever an atrocious and merciless lynching could have been condonable, pardonable, and wholly excusable, it was on that occasion.

The grief of the people was universal, obliterating party lines. It was such a grief as seldom can come to a sane people. It was grief for Garfield, a popular idol; and it was an intensely universal grief accentuated with tearful sympathy also for the absent wife and mother, who was speeding from Elberon to Washington on a special train; and it was maternal, paternal, fraternal sympathy and grief of the whole people for little Mollie and the little boys; the universal grief of a great people for the President, for the father, the husband, the mother and for the stricken and soon-to-be bereaved little ones.

And, when the people read the faithful descriptions painted by the pencils of indignant but trustworthy news gatherers, showing the egotism, the vanity, the self-glorification of the damnable assassin, it is a wonder that the jail was not stormed and the evil spirit rent from the body of the murderer by a multitude, tearing him to atoms, to very strips and ribbons of flesh and bone.

There has been plenty of time for the blood to cool; but, the reader will thus see, in these words, the remaining intensity of the bitterness of the feeling of that day, which time has not effaced.

The wife and mother reached the bedside of the stricken President; the husband and father, about half-past 7 o'clock in the evening. She came, not to bring additional sorrow; not to bring tears and wailings; not to shock the sufferer with her own woes, her own apprehensions. She came like an angel of light, like a true heroine, like an exemplar American wife. All of her tears and emotions she left behind her as she came to the side of the stricken man who was so anxiously awaiting her, and counting the minutes of the long, long day. She came with encouragement, with hope, and with the prayer of faith, bringing faith and strength to him who needed faith and strength. And when the American people read of her magnificent heroism, her ability and capability to meet the situation thus, there was one universal acclaim of "God bless that wife and mother."

All that medical science and surgical skill could do was done. All that the wealth of the nation could do was done. The most capable physicians and surgeons of Washington, Philadelphia and New York were in constant attendance. Cooling apparatus reduced the temperature of the great White House; tons upon tons of ice being abundantly supplied. Special railroad tracks were laid in Washington and at Elberon, and all of the tracks were cleared, giving right of way to the special train; and the stricken President was taken to the seaside. The days and weeks of the long summer slowly passed away. Hope and fear succeeded each other from hour to hour. But, the end was inevitable, and on September 19, at half-past 10 o'clock at night, relief came to James A. Garfield in welcome death. Very truly, in that case, it was said: "Oh, Death, where is thy sting?"

The body of Garfield, bereft of its spirit, was brought to Washington and laid in state for two days in the rotunda of the Capitol, guarded by his comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic. Then the sacred dust was carried to the same station wherein the fatal bullet had been fired, to be taken to Ohio for its last earthly resting-place.

As the casket was taken into the depot the Marine Band played "Nearer, My God, to Thee." Before the train moved out, the tears of the sorrowing people were accentuated by a gentle rain from the seemingly sorrowing clouds. As the train slowly moved out of the depot, the band sang the song of the multitude for them:

"Safe in the arms of Jesus;
Safe on His gentle breast."

Guiteau, the assassin, was arraigned for trial on Friday, October 14. The actual trial began by the selection of a jury, November 7. Three days elapsed before twelve men were chosen. They were:

John T. Hamlin, foreman, a hotel-keeper.
Fred W. Brandenberg, tobacconist.
Henry J. Bright, a retired boot and shoe dealer.
Charles C. Stewart, a dealer in hay and feed.
Thomas H. Langley, grocer.
Michael Shehan, grocer.
Samuel F. Hobbs, plasterer.
George W. Gates, a machinist of the navy yard.
Ralph Wormly, plasterer (colored.)
William H. Brawner, grocer.
Thomas Hamline, machinist.
Ralph Prather, commission merchant.

On January 23, 1882, after a full, fair and long-drawn-out trial, a verdict of guilty was returned, and on January 25, Judge Cox sentenced the prisoner to death by hanging. The law's delays enabled the assassin to live until June 30, 1882, almost a year after the commission of the awful crime. He was hanged in the jail, in Washington, on that date. He left his curses for the jurors, all of whom have died natural deaths, excepting the foreman, John T. Hamlin, who is still living in Washington, at No. 3517 Tenth street northwest, one of the highly-respected citizens of the national capital, and for many years the incumbent of a position in the Capitol building.

Rejuvenescence of Kit.

SHE OBEYS COMMAND TO CHARGE AND SPILLS HER RIDERS.

By a Special Contributor.

> "The old peach tree by the garden wall—
> I shed no tears when I saw it fall;
> And all the boys in our end o' town
> Said 'Ain't you glad it got chopped down?' "
> —[Song of "Towhead."

SIS had the front seat on Old Kit's long back, and Fredalmy sat on Sis's skirts. Sis's brother, "Towhead," and his chum, "Dord" Norton, had invited the girls to ride Old Kit down to Kintner's Creek. Sis was so pleased with the invitation that she forgot to wonder at its unexpectedness. Fredalmy, being brotherless, was trustful.

Old Kit was string-halt, lame and more or less blind; she was sorely lacking in mane, tail and spirit; but she was beloved from the crown of her bony sorrel head to the soles of her hoofs, the left hind one of which, in her long hours of rest, she kept turned skyward as far as her crippled and cramped muscles would permit. So carefully cherished was she that only for an hour or two on the pleasantest days were the children permitted to take her out. Sis, who was timid, gave two-thirds of her rides to Towhead in return for his leading the horse for her, which was absurd. Old Kit was gentleness itself, and were she otherwise, her infirmities, ordinarily, would have rendered her innocuous.

The reason for her sheltered life and for the wealth of affection bestowed on her dated back to war times. The stripling who, years afterward, became the father of Towhead and Sis, upon recovering from the wound received at the battle of Chancellorsville was given his promotion and Old Kit—young, beautiful, gingery Kit in those days. She had borne him on many marches, through victory and disaster to victory again, and, when the war was over, home.

But I sing a different march, the march to Kintner's Creek. There had been some difficulty as to leadership, Dord proclaiming precedence as being one year older than Towhead, Towhead basing his claim upon being son and heir to Old Kit's owner.

"I spoke to papa privately about this matter"—Towhead was as fond of pomposity as a Georgia darky, and as much addicted to the use of big words of whose meaning he was often quite ignorant—"an' he said if I lived long enough—no, if Old Kit lives long enough—she'll be mine; I'll inter-herit her. The Bible says: Blessed are the meek to inter-herit.' " which settled it, Dord's good Methodist training never allowed him to argue in the face of scripture, and Towhead-the-meek basely made the most of his knowledge of that fact.

The line of march lay along a winding hillside road, thickly wooded on the upper side, and with a straggling hedge of young locusts, elderberry bushes and briars on the lower. The occasional gaps in this hedge gave glimpses of a broad hollow, skirted by a rocky bank above which lay the old cemetery. At the first gap Towhead called Dord aside, excusing himself for whispering in company with suspicious politeness; but Fredalmy had no practical knowledge of boys, and Sis, being blinded by her pride in this surprising display of good manners, forgot to be wary. There was a faint sound of giggling behind the bushes, but it passed unnoticed. When the boys reappeared Towhead gave his sister another thrill of pleased vanity by asking:

"Are you perfeckly comfor'ble now, girls? Sure?" To which Sis responded with her best air:

"Yes, thank you, sir," and Fredalmy giggled,

"Much obliged."

Both boys broke for the hedge again, and came back after a few moments very red and choked-looking. Sis observed for the first time that Towhead's pockets bulged even more than usual, and asked what he had in them.

"Fishin' tackle," was the brief response.

"Where's the poles?" asked Fredalmy.

"Aw, don't girls ast the foolishest questions!" exclaimed Dord, forgetting for a moment their exaggerated assumption of courtesy. "A boy 'u'd know they ain't no poles worth cuttin' till you get to the crick."

"Yes, 'n' who'd drag poles a whole half a mile, anyway?" put in Towhead as an additional "squelcher," and the girls subsided.

They plodded on in silence for a time, till Towhead ostentatiously stopped at one of the gaps in the hedge and looked out over the hollow, beyond the rocks, into the blue-green, melancholy pines of the cemetery. Then he turned to Dord and said in a melodramatic whisper:

"Dord! Come here an' see 'f my eyes is right! Quick, 'fore the girls see it!"

Dord ran to the gap, stared wildly, and whispered an equally mysterious and sibilant reply:

"O-h! M-y-y! Yes, I see what you see! Oh—oh! It's reg'lar scarifyin'."

"Oh, my goodness! It's them, sure, Dord. I never b'leeved in such things before, but there they are!"

"Sure's death, Johnnie! Keep awful still less they hear us. D'you reckon sperits can hear that far?"

The terror-stricken girls listened and trembled until, unable longer to control their fear, then suddenly huddled down in a heap, Sis clutching Old Kit's mane, Fredalmy's face buried in Sis's back, and both shrieking frantically.

The boys looked at each other a trifle sheepishly; they had hardly expected such a finished result. Besides, Towhead knew the sustaining power of his sister's howl.

"Oh, say—'tain't what we thought it was, Sis; don't cry. They's nothin' to be scared of. Don't be a baby now; it's only a ol' tombstone, I tell you, Sis. It's that big one of Celesty Brown leanin' on a cross, honest, Sis. Don't yell like that! Oh, gee!" desperately. "Sis, you're enough to wake the d——" he caught himself sharply——"wake the baby Sis! Oh, doggone you, stop! Say, you big cry-baby of a Fredalmy Mer'weather, if you'd stop, she would. Sis, if you don't hush up, I'll make you both get off 'n' walk! Oh, no, I won't," as the howls increased, "I didn't mean it, I didn't! Can't you take a fellow's word, Sis? Please, now, Sis dear," wheedlingly, "you're so good to a fellow, 'n' I don't want you to cry any more; it——" he glanced furtively at Dord—"it makes me nervous!"

The demonstration gradually subsided and the cavalcade moved on, Sis still teary-eyed, but with a sweet, forbearing smile on her face; Fredalmy sniffling sulkily, Towhead and Dord subdued, yet sneaking an occasional wink at each other, with a surreptitious grin and shrug of shoulder. But they were studiously polite, and refrained from referring to the late unpleasantness, which, again, was suspicious. Their chief aim now seemed to be to introduce pleasant topics of conversation, and reminiscences (at second hand) were always absorbing.

Dord began it by relating the ever-ready narrative of the circumstances attending the death of his uncle. Said uncle was a carpenter who had fallen from a church tower whose height varied from 200 to 1000 feet, as the occasion of the telling seemed to require. Especially thrilling features were the distance the groans could be heard, and the number (also varying,) of ribs broken. At this point in the present narration Fredalmy sniffed scornfully:

"H'm! Must 'a' been a 'brella fact'ry." After which remark Dord eyed her balefully.

Towhead always capped this tale with one culled from his father's war experience, likewise adorned with the enchantment lent by time and disposition, as, the time his father sat by the camp fire ministering to a smallpox-stricken negro, heroically risking his life for a poor slave. The original story ran that the negro neglected to reveal the cause of his suffering till he had been made comfortable; on receiving enlightenment, the Good Samaritan had "taken to the tall timber."

Or he told of the time that, after all the officers had been killed, his father had led a handful of men to glorious victory.

"An' papa was to 'a' been made a general only he had a gold tooth!" was the triumphant finale.

Thus the conversation led by easy stages to the achievements of Old Kit in her war days. This was a subject most stimulating to the imagination; one never knew where his own stories might lead him, and was often as much overwhelmed by the climax as was his audience.

"W'y, the firing of a cannon under her nose never feazed her," cried Towhead excitedly, "but jus' let papa say 'Charge!' an' she'd skite up a hill like a bullet. An' she alwige wanted to be gallopin' when they was firin'. W'y, old as she is, she gets just awful excited yet, Fourth o' July times. Jus' paws an' prances in the stall, so she does, when she hears the fireworks."

"She does," Sis nodded corroboratively, "an' mamma says it's 'cause she thinks it's war time again, an' she's crazy to be flyin' into the thick of it."

"Wouldn't you love to see her let loose?" Dord asked.

"Gee whiz! wouldn't I? Wouldn't it be grand to be on her back when she's flyin', Sis?"

Sis assented rather hesitatingly, but Fredalmy came out boldy:

"I'd rather be lookin' on if she was goin' to gallop, but I don't believe she could even trot, she's so old an' stiff an'——"

"What?" screamed Towhead, frantic with rage. "You jus' dare say that again, you Fredalmy Mer'weather! She can gallop your ol' head off! Jus' you wait," and he dived into his pockets for what he had called "fishin' tackle." Alas! for masculine integrity. His hands reappeared full of firecrackers.

Before their design could be suspected, Dord lit a match while Towhead swiftly knotted the fireworks into Old Kit's tail; the match was applied, and together they shouted the command:

"Charge!"

"Fizz! Bang! Sputter-s-s-s-s—bang! Old Kit's head and tail rose simultaneously; she shook loose and tried her rusty hinges and then shot madly down the road. The terrified girls clung to her, Sis's arms about her neck, Fredalmy crouching close against Sis, each expecting every moment to be her last, and each adding with all her lung power to the general din. On down the road faster and ever faster sped the limbering Kit, away from the old cemetery, past the "partridgeberry hill," beyond where Honey Run joins Kintner's Creek, down, nearer and nearer the bridge—but there Old Kit swerved aside, clattered over the steep bank—down into the water—and the race was over. In her headlong descent her riders slid over her nose into the shallow water and soft mud. Old Kit, relieved of her burden, sought the depths, and for one gasping moment all was still. Then:

"Help! Help!" "Mamma! Mamma!" "Oh, save me!" "Oh, help! I'm drownded!" "Oh, papa! Papa! Quick!" "Oh, please save me!" "Oh, I'm all drownded!" were some of the cries that assailed the ears of the two boys, who came running, hatless, breathless, and convulsed, to be in at the finish. When they had recovered breath:

"Aw dry up, you girls!" Dord shouted inconsiderately. "You ain't hurt a bit."

"No," added Towhead with a grin, "and you ain't drown-ded, either. Drownded people don't make so much noise." He leaned over, gave the sobbing Sis a hand, and dragged her to dry land. Then, rather gently, considering all that had taken place, he patted her shoulder and said in an undertone:

"Don't cry, Sis. We jus' had to show that little stuck-up smarty that Old Kit could run. You ain't a big cry-baby an' 'fraid-cat, are you? Jus' listen to her yellin'! I'd be awful 'shamed if that was you. That's a good girl; I knowed you wasn't scared truly. 'Course you had to cry a little. Oh, Dord!" raising hi

Joyous Barbara—no morbid thoughts were hers, no repining; her own little romance was so intangible, so a thing of her own girlish dreams, child of her vivid imagination, that it brought nothing of bitterness, its very charm its unreality.

On the September day with which our story has to do, no glory of gold spread the thirsty hills, there was no lilting song of mocking-bird, no saucy challenge of meadow lark. The brown hills lifted their parched faces to a brazen sky. The whole earth panted in the scorching heat.

As Barbara left the house for her afternoon tramp, her mother called to her from the doorway: "Daughter, make your tramp short today; the sky has a threatening look. And you won't forget, dear, to stop at Mrs. Parks's for the turkey eggs."

The girl, looking back with a merry laugh, assured her mother that she would not forget, for it was often that her day dreams blotted the more practical things of life completely from her memory, until Barbara's forgetfulness had become a family joke.

Waving a final good-by from the gate, she disappeared down the shaded path leading through the arroyo. Crossing this, she struck into the Mission road—the old "Camino Real."

A dull haze crept from the horizon half-way up the blue. Out of a crack in the baked earth a great brown tarantula crawled and stalked awkwardly across the path. Little eddies of dust went swirling down the road and disappeared high in air. Barbara turned from the highway; she would rather brave the rough hill path than face the choking dust of the road now that the wind was stirring. Range after range she saw the mountains disappear in the coppery murk that began to spread out from the horizon toward her. Gusts of hot wind seemed to drop out of the atmosphere. She hurried toward the higher paths, hoping to make a short cut to the cañon before the fury of the desert storm was upon her.

She had no fear and no thought of turning back, for had she not braved such storms often before? The wild confusion of the elements only filled her with the joy of battle. She must be half-way to the cañon now, but the storm had increased so rapidly familiar landmarks were already blotted out and the air was filled with bits of grass, leaves and dust. She must be higher on the hills than she had thought. Dense thickets of mustard grew on either side of the path that ran like a brown ribbon wrinkling in and out around the hills. It was hard struggling against the wind. The air was thick and close. She began to be a trifle anxious. Again and again she told herself aloud, so that she might hear the sound of her own voice, that there was nothing to fear, the storm would not last long, and the wind, although violent, was only a steady blow. She could now see only a few yards about her; it was as though the very earth itself had dropped away, leaving only the small space where she walked, and a dozen steps would bring her to the edge of the world.

There was not a sound but the roaring of the wind, now a driving gale, and the sharp snap of the mustard as she tore it aside where it checked her hurrying feet. It was higher than her head, and almost impassable, yet it served as some protection against the merciless wind. It never occurred to her that she might lose her way; but even if she should, when the storm had spent itself, as it often did in a few hours, from the hills she could see the town, the river and even her own home by the arroyo. So she climbed more slowly, doubly hindered by the dense growth of mustard and the dusky gloom of the storm.

Suddenly a new element of sound brought her to an abrupt halt, and with every nerve tense she listened. A subtle, faint commotion like the crushing of crisp stubble beneath light and hurrying feet. What could it be? She could not see, for the mustard was like a forest about her, and the gloom of the storm was in her eyes. The hurrying feet drew nearer. There was an ominous swish as of silken skirts, and the girl stood up. A face pallid as death was lifted to the frowning sky; a low moan of terror slipped from her drawn white lips, as for one brief moment she stood thus alert, intent, then seemed to shrink and crumple, a helpless, stricken figure, to the ground, her senses paralyzed for the moment by the knowledge of the awful thing hurrying to destroy her, hurrying from she knew not where, but surely drawing nearer and nearer as the sharp snap and crackle of the dry mustard marked its advance.

The love of life strong within the girl cried out, and like a wild thing she sprang to her feet, and turning to the left dashed madly up the hill. She had left the path and was running with the wind. She knew that her savage pursuer was also running with the wind, and her only hope lay in a possible clearing at the top of the hill.

Terror lent wings to her flying feet. The roar and fury of the fire pursuing her grew more distinct. The crisp dry grass and mustard burned with a fierceness and heat indescribable. Little demons of flame ran up the dry stems and licked the feathery interlacing branches with devouring tongues, and the blighting wind, gathering up the dust and smoke and blackened grass—the skeleton of things that were—hurled them in a hurricane of flame after the terror-stricken girl as she ran.

A frightened rabbit bounded across her path, and she almost fell. Quail hustled here and there, running before the fire. A meadow lark fluttered from its nest in the grass to fly before the leaping flame, for once its saucy piping stilled. But Barbara paid no heed. With bent head and fighting hands she tore her desperate way upward. Her breath came in gasps as the hill grew steeper. The wiry grass caught her feet and she stumbled often. The roar and crackle of the fire fiend behind her drew nearer and nearer. Could she go on? There might be no refuge before her. Despair hung weights to her feet. She thought of her mother watching for her in the doorway, and of her agony when she learned her fate.

The red sparks were flying over her head. She dared not look behind, but the fierce heat was like the breath of hell. Surely the mustard above her was growing thinner, or was she going mad? A red tongue of flame caught her flying skirts, but she smothered it with her bare hands and felt no hurt. She saw the clearing before her now, and hope nerved her for one more effort. Her breath came in a sharp whistle between clenched teeth. She was close to the open space, and she drew a deep breath of relief that exhaled in one long despairing cry of mortal agony, for there before her, not a dozen yards away, creeping relentlessly down the hill toward her, was a long, unbroken line of red flame. She staggered blindly forward a few paces and fell prone in the path of the merciless enemies advancing from behind her and before. Her cry above the roar of the flame and the bellow of the wind rose and thrilled like the cry of a lost soul.

The man above the upper line of fire, safe on the blackened hilltop, heard the cry. The torch by which he had made his own position safe still blazing in his grasp, he listened an instant, then flinging down the flickering wisp, he buried his face in the crook of his arm and dashed through the blazing grass straight toward the fiercest flame of the lower fire. Nor was he a moment too soon, for straining his smoke-blinded eyes through the gloom, he saw the girl lying full in the path of the racing flame. Greedy tongues were already licking her helpless feet, and something in the upturned face now blackened and lifeless brought a swift throb of memory.

With fierce strides he covered the space between them, and snatching her from the very jaws of that burning hell, he turned the piteous face to his broad breast and bore her on up the hill. He knew that she still lived, for he felt the fluttering heartbeats against his own, and a mighty joy was his. Again running the gauntlet of the upper fire, he gained the top and laid his burden tenderly down, protecting her from the wind with his heavy coat, then turned about to assure himself that his own fire would do its work.

The two blazing lines had met upon the hill in mortal combat, and there wrestled fiercely for supremacy. Towering flames leaped and twisted and shrieked as the battle raged, and while he watched, the red glare of the heavens dulled suddenly, and on the line of battle the combatants sank to a feeble flicker that hissed venomously and died, leaving the blackness of desolation under the twilight sky.

The wind had gone down with the sun. The evening star was already in the west, and far down the hill across the mesa lights shone brightly from every window of the stone house in the arroyo.

Justin Markham bent over the still unconscious girl, with a puzzled face. The herder whose flock he had saved came up the opposite side of the hill searching anxiously for the stranger whose quick wit had so helped him in his desperate need. He hurried forward with an exclamation of relief, and he, too, looked down at the girl, saying something in Spanish to the other.

Markham drew a flask from his pocket and poured a little of its contents drop by drop between the white lips, then vigorously chafing the little hands, he soon had the satisfaction of seeing her eyes open slowly and look wonderingly into his face. Then with a startled "You?" she attempted to rise. The chafing hands closed on hers with a glad, close pressure. Grave blue eyes, no longer only a memory, looked into hers for one long instant, then gathering her in his strong arms the man lifted her easily and started down the long slope toward the town.

With an inscrutable look on his sun-browned face, the herder picked up Markham's gun and the girl's basket and trudged stolidly after.

Flower Fete of Sainte Marie.

Flower sellers in Paris welcome the arrival of August 15, the fete of Sainte Marie, for it is the custom to mark saints' days by presents of bouquets, and, of course, Marie is the most usual of Christian names. Thus the various flower markets were thronged and business was particularly brisk.

The good weather, coupled with the two days' holiday, tempted thousands to the country, and most of the trains were run in two portions to cope with the rush.

It is interesting to recall that August 15 is the anniversary of many notable events in French history; under the Second Empire it was called Sainte Napoleon's Day, and exactly 102 years ago the foundation stone was laid of the Arc de Triomphe, the monument of the military glories of France.—[New York Herald's Paris Edition.

Trouble in the Air.

"What are you making that noise for?" queried the robin.

"Noise!" screeched the jay, darting at the other bird with hostile intent. "That's singing, you mean, jealous upstart!"

The robin took refuge in instant flight, and thus another rash and foolhardy exponent of the higher criticism was driven ignominiously from the field.—[Chicago Tribune.

Where Woman Rules.

HOPI WOMEN PROBABLY ORIGINAL WOMEN'S RIGHTS ADVOCATES.

By a Special Contributor.

IF the suffragettes of England and the women's rights advocates of America could only get the co-operation of the rest of the sex to a sufficient extent to enable them to follow the example set centuries ago by the women of the Hopi Indians, they could bring about the abdication of the self-appointed lords of creation in short order. Once upon a time—so runs the tradition—the women of the Hopi communities grew tired of masculine tyranny and went out on a strike, removing to a distant and almost inaccessible mesa, where they bade defiance to their erstwhile lords and masters. The men stood this unnatural separation as long as they could, and then began to negotiate for a restoration of domestic union. To propositions of this kind the women returned but one answer. They would consent to return to their homes only on condition that they be permitted to rule the household. It was a bitter pill for the men to swallow, but swallow it they did.

How many centuries have elapsed since the occurrence of this first women's rights movement of which tradition hints, no man can say. Nevertheless, the work of the Hopi suffragettes has never been undone. In these strange towns on the summits of the lofty Arizona mesas, women still rule the roost, and the men play a sorry second fiddle. Among all other tribes of American aborigines, woman is a drudge and beast of burden, trained to fetch and carry and cater to the wants of the arrogant braves with unquestioning servility. In the Hopi communities the positions of the sexes are exactly reversed. The men perform the most menial of the household tasks, mind the babies, till the fields, weave blankets and ceremonial robes, and in general do as their wives bid them. The fine art work of the Hopis—basket-making and pottery manufacture—is reserved for the women, apparently in the belief that the innate inferiority of men renders them unfit for the serious work of life. Even the most cherished prerogative of masculinity in other parts of the world, that of proposal, is here usurped by the women. Whenever a girl of marriageable age makes her choice of a husband, she goes to see the youth's mother. If the mother is willing to accept the candidate for a daughter-in-law, the business is settled on the spot, and the man in the case must make the best of it. That his wishes ought to be consulted in the matter would be considered a ridiculous proposition.

Once the question of marriage has been settled, the girl goes to work to grind meal for her future mother-in-law for a period of thirty days, while the man sets about the task of weaving the wedding garments for his bride-to-be. Some of these wedding robes are things of beauty, embroidered in a manner that few fancy-work experts of civilization could surpass.

Inevitably this relegation of the masculine sex to a secondary position has been productive of social results which the advocates of petticoat government would do well to consider. The Hopi Indians have always been notoriusly poor fighters. In the perennial warfare waged against them by the Navajos, they were always worsted. They owed their very existence to the inaccessible location of their towns upon the summits of lofty mesas. In contempt, the Navajos called them "Moki," signifying "dead men," while their proper appellation, "Hopi," means "men of peace."

The men of the Hopi communities are dwarfed and undersized. Intellectually they are as stunted as they are physically. In strange contrast with them are the muscular, robust and graceful women, with figures that Diana, the Huntress, might covet, and often with a beauty of features that is truly amazing to one accustomed to the flat-faced squaws of the plains tribes.

A close-at-hand study of the Hopi Indians, in fact, makes it quite plain that caricaturists and newspaper cartoonists, in their humorous attempts to depict the relative positions of the sexes when woman at last shall have her way, hit much closer to the mark than they have any idea. The henpecked husbands of the Hopi Amazons bear the unmistakable mark of physical and intellectual inferiority. They are the poorest imitations of men to be found among the American aborigines; and the women tolerate them at all only for the propagation of the species. On the other hand, the women are the handsomest, the brightest and the most attractive of their race. Therefore, let the men of civilization beware of permitting the scepter to pass to the gentle hands of downtrodden femininity, lest they, too, become mere "dead men" like the despised "Moki" tribesmen of the Arizona mesas.

There are eight Hopi Indian villages, located upon three separate mesas, in Northern Arizona, with a total population of not far from 2000. Their villages may be reached from either Holbrook, Ariz., or from Gallup, N. M., the former point eighty miles and the latter 110 miles distant from the first mesa. Owing to the distance from the ordinary routes of travel, the Hopi towns are rarely visited by tourists and sightseers, indicates that the girls wearing them (known as "side-wheelers," in the lingo of the Arizona plainsmen) are in the matrimonial market. They constitute a danger signal, and many a Hopi youth has been known to take to the tall timber and remain in hiding for months on beholding this indication of matrimonial intentions upon the head of some damsel whom he had reason to suspect of designs upon his heart. Flight is the boy's only hope, as the mother rarely turns a deaf ear to any maiden's overtures, and compulsion is said to be frequently resorted to in order to bring a reluctant youth to the altar. Immediately after marriage—on the wedding day, in fact—the whorls are taken down, never again to be worn. The New York hair dresser who shall introduce the Hopi whorls into the metropolis will make his everlasting fortune. The effect is quite as amazing (but certainly no more so) as that produced by the wire "rats" affected by waitresses, shop girls and the ultra-fashionable. That the "side-wheelers" of the mesa maids will some day be counterfeited by the maids of the Great White Way is just as sure as fate and taxes.

In Keams Cañon, eleven miles from the First Mesa, is located the government school, in which an effort is made to train the Hopi children in the ways of civilization. The effort, so far, has not been a conspicuous success, but inasmuch as nearly all the people can understand English and make themselves understood, it cannot be considered a failure. To overturn a civilization that doubtless had its beginning when the Britons still wore garments made of the skins of wild beasts is a labor that may not be accomplished in a single generation, and the work accomplished by the reservation school among the Hopis has doubtless progressed as rapidly as could reasonably be expected.

On the First Mesa are three villages, Tewa, Sichumovi, and Walpi, located so close together that they might almost be considered as one. On the Second Mesa are also three villages, Shipaulovi, Mishongnovi and Shumopovi—the first two not more than a quarter of a mile apart, but the last named reached by a laborious trail extending two miles from Shipaulovi, its nearest neighbor. On the Third Mesa, thirteen miles from the Second, and nineteen miles from the First, are two villages, Oraibi and Hautevelt. This last is the most modern of Hopi towns, having been founded no longer than a year ago, as a result of rivalry between the Snake and Eagle clans of Oraibi. The long-standing jealousy of the rival clans came to a head on the question whether the children should be permitted to attend the government school at Keams Cañon. The Snake clan favored sending the children to school, while the Eagle clan counseled refusal. The dispute waxed so acrimonious that both sides resorted to arms, and for four days and nights the battle raged. As the aboriginal bow and arrow constituted the only weapons available, casualties were not as serious as might have been expected, only four men being killed, while about a score were wounded. Then troops were summoned from Fort Wingate, and the obstreperous members of the Eagle clan were carted off to Gallup and lodged in jail. As soon as they were released, they removed to a distant part of the mesa and founded a new village, refusing to have any dealings either with their own kinsmen at Oraibi or with the whites. However, their crops have so far been partial failures, and food is scarce, so that they permit their children to attend school under protest, to avert the worse calamity of starvation. Nevertheless, it is well understood that as soon as the condition of their larder will permit the children will be taken home.

Surrounding each of the three mesas are vast peach orchards and corn fields covering many thousands of acres. The corn is of a small and inferior variety that no white farmer would be bothered with, and the crops are poor and inadequate; but the Hopi husbandmen would risk starvation rather than consent to try improved kinds. What was good enough for their fathers and their fathers' fathers is quite good enough for them. To give up the old, in their estimation, constitutes the very worst impiety.

To the Hopi Indians came some of the earliest of the Franciscan missionaries, in the early days of the Spanish occupation. These planted the first of the peach trees that now yield so abundantly. These also introduced sheep, goats, burros and domestic fowls, as well as [illegible] and variety of fruits and grains. The crops introduced by the Franciscans now contribute largely to the economic welfare of the Hopis, but otherwise the footprints of the padres have been entirely obliterated. The people long ago relapsed entirely into paganism, and the old mission churches were torn down so long that no one can recall their existence. In one village on the Second Mesa the faint outlines of an ancient church may still be traced; and the observant visitor will be struck by the fact that square timbers may be seen projecting from the kivas, or underground council chambers. Inasmuch as no other square timbers are to be seen in any of the eight Hopi towns, these are [illegible] the subject of remark. It seems to be a certainty that they were the timbers used in the old mission churches, built before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth. Every timber used by the padres in the construction of the Hopi churches was cut on the slopes of the San Francisco Mountains, and laboriously packed on the patient backs of men through the seventy-five miles of intervening desert.

To write of the Hopi Indians without some reference to the Snake Dance would be a ruthless violation of all precedent. This most remarkable of all savage ceremonies has been described so often that a further attempt at its description would be a work of supererogation. It is, however, worthy of remark in this connection that in it the Hopi women are supreme. Before the Snake Dance occurs, each participant bathes in a preparation of herbs, and takes a certain quantity internally, to render him immune to the bites of the deadly rattlesnake. One woman in the Snake clan of each village knows the secret of the formula after which the "snake [illegible]" is compounded. When she feels that the time of her dissolution is approaching, she confides the secret to a successor. Of what ingredients this infallible antidote to the bite of the rattlesnake consists, no man has ever been able to discover; and even the expert chemists of the United States government are quite as much in the dark as are the most ignorant and downtrodden of the henpecked husbands of Hopiland. After this, who shall have the temerity to say that a woman cannot keep a secret?

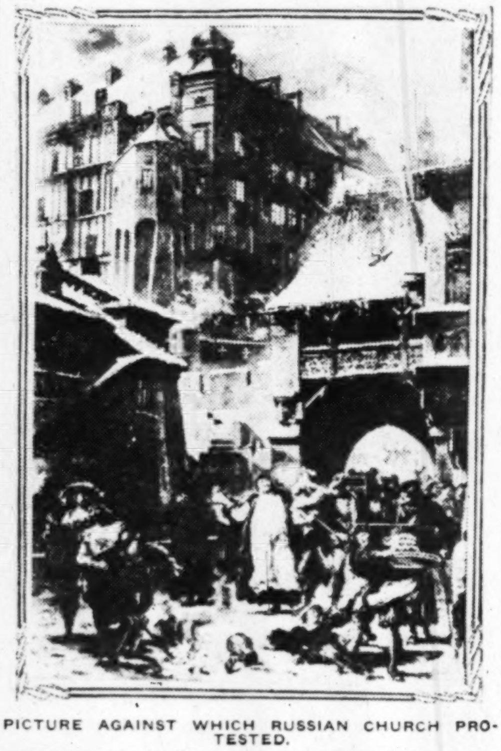
JOHN L. COWAN.

Picture of Tipsy Bishop.

IT HAS CAUSED GREAT COMMOTION IN WARSAW.

From a Special Correspondent.

WARSAW, Aug. 20.—War is waging between the Archbishop of Warsaw and the Academy of Arts and others in the same city over a masterpiece of the famous Russian historical painter, Matejko, whose pictures command very high prices on the rare occasions when they reach the public market.



PICTURE AGAINST WHICH RUSSIAN CHURCH PROTESTED.

Matejko painted on wood, during the best period of his life, a picture representing the medieval Bishop of Gniezno-Gamrat leaving the castle of Cracow after a banquet. His Lordship is in a state of hilarity, and history says that he was often in such a condition. The picture is full of life and, in the original, the effect of the torchlight upon the snow is as good and convincing as anything the great colorist, Matejko, ever produced. One feels, in looking at it, the sharp frost of the Polish winter and the general atmosphere of hilarity and good cheer with which Bishop Gamrat was wont to surround himself in the castle.

The picture has never been exhibited, though copies of it embellish history books in Poland. Its late owner, Henry Reichman, a well-known Warsaw financier, bought it direct from the artist, and left it to his widow, in whose possession it remained till that lady's death last spring. Her heirs decided to sell it, and to give the proceeds to the late Mr. Reichman's poor relatives. It is valued at between $60,000 and $80,000, and the smaller amount has already been offered for it. The heirs, wishing to get as high a price as possible, determined to have it exhibited at the Warsaw Academy of Arts.

The picture had barely been hung when one of the canons, in the name of the archbishop, requested that the picture should immediately be taken down from the walls. Mr. Krywult, one of the directors of the Academy, protested. "It all happened so long ago and everybody knows so well that Bishop Gamrat was fond of enjoying himself that the picture cannot do any harm to the church's reputation," said Mr. Krywult. But the archbishop was obdurate, and he was obliged to have the picture taken down.

Then the heirs appealed to the clergy, but with no better success. One of them even declared that the picture should be exhibited in Warsaw, no matter what the church said. "Very well," was the archbishop's reply, given through one of his canons. "We cannot get the police to interfere, but we can and do assure you that you will regret showing this picture publicly. If you do so, we shall influence all the local press not only to condemn it as an act of disrespect to the church, but, what is perhaps of more importance to you as sellers, to condemn it as the worst piece of work Matejko has ever done."

This answer has given rise to a great deal of discussion, but the heirs are quietly laying their plans for revenge. They are having "Gamrat" photographed and printed on several thousand post cards, which will be sent to every town in Poland and Austria for sale. This is being done secretly, lest the archbishop should hear of and put his veto upon it before they are ready. Once the post cards are in the shops, the heirs say they do not mind the archbishop's knowing about them, because they will have attained their object and have brought their picture to the notice of thousands who, otherwise, would never have heard of it.

THE CLOUD.

O fairy-white cloud in the blue summer sky,
  Floating slowly away and away—
Stoop low, gentle cloud! Very low, till I feel
  Thy compassing presence enfolding me round,
  And lifting me lightly away from the ground—
Away from the flint and the steel.

Thy down-soft wings, O dear cloud-angel, dip,
  Softly dip down to earth and to me;
Thy cool, soothing breast pillow all my sad heart,
  Till the quivering pulse absorbs with keen zest—
  The laboring brain feels a sense of sweet rest—
The soul stands renewed for its part.

Waft slowly, dear cloud, let me hear as we pass,
  The pure music of stars in their course;
As on, ever on through the infinite space,
  Fulfilling His mandates including their powers,
  With never a discord nor jar through the hours,
Each strictly maintaining its place.

And may I sometime as we're nearing the verge,
  Floating softly away and away—
Just peep o'er the edge—where the curtain is thin—
  And see the yon-world spreading luminous and bright,
  Encircled in glory, exultant in right,
All fair, by its freedom from sin?

. . . .

Hark! The wind bellows loud! Thy cloak is turned gray!
  Wildly streaming away and away—
Thy tresses are black on the breath of the storm;
  Fire follows thee close through the tumult and din,
  With crash that's like chaos begotten of sin,
And lashes thy beautiful form!

Low breathing as blessings from lips that are not,
  Hov'ring closely anear and away—
Came the answer sublime: "My life is His will,
  I shrink not from fire that will cleanse away dross.
  Though fiercely and widely the winds drive and toss,
Wisdom's joy is obedience still."

Then sweetly and softly she slipped back to earth,
  Gently dropping away and away—
In cool, soothing showers, freely giving her all,
  Reviving, refreshing wherever she came,
  Was regarded a blessing in that dear name
Whose love worketh good unto all.

Audubon Couldn't Sell Groceries.

It is not generally remembered that the worldwide reputation of Audubon as a naturalist, incidentally, is due to his failure to establish himself permanently as a Missouri grocery merchant and dealer in the best brands of Kentucky whiskey.

In 1810 he and Ferdinand Rozier of Ste. Genevieve, loaded a keelboat at Louisville with 310 barrels of whiskey and groceries, and started down the Ohio and Mississippi to Ste. Genevieve to open a grocery store. The trip was made during the winter, and the streams were so full of ice that the boat was drawn up against the bank and winter quarters were established just below Cape Girardeau.

When Ste. Genevieve was reached, after the opening of navigation, the firm of "Audubon & Rozier" opened its store and did a prosperous business. But the business was done by Rozier, for Audubon preferred the woods to the counter, and devoted more of his time to sketching and stuffing birds than he did to marketing the 310 barrels of good Kentucky bourbon, or any other groceries.

This led to a dissolution of the partnership. April 11, 1811, Audubon, convinced of his unfitness for business, sold out to Rozier and took up the work for which he was better fitted than any one who had lived before or who has lived since, and from a fourth-rate grocer became the great ornithologist. The grocery business which Audubon abandoned, grew until it "extended throughout all of upper Louisiana."—[Kansas City Star.

Organized Art Forgers of France.

It is not only in New York that people are imposed upon with spurious works of art. Only recently criminal proceedings at Limoges, in France, disclosed the fact that there is a fully developed, well organized industry of forgery and falsification upon the Continent. It has as many domains as there are catagories of collections, for the forgers and falsifiers long ago became specialists, and they can serve you with any class of art that you may need.

Many of their tricks are highly ingenious. They will make two semi-original, genuine works of art out of one, for example. A piece of carved wood is sawed through, making two pieces, and in each of these the missing half is replaced by a careful reproduction of the original. An authentic but only poorly painted Sévres or Meissen cup may be richly painted after a good pattern, exactly in the style required, and reburnt. A real but plain knight's armor is damasked with all the fineness of the craftsman, chased, gilded, and rendered "old" again. This necessitates cost and labor, but it pays; a thing that, genuine, was worth 500 francs may, falsified, be disposed of at 5000. There are suds and sauces and juices and varnishes that convert entirely new productions into art masterpieces of great age. Newly fabricated pieces are carried into "historical" country castles, whose owners lend themselves to the game, and the purchaser learns—for the proofs are convincing—that the rust-covered relic has been the property of an old noble family "for centuries."—[Harper's Weekly.

Making Money Fly.

THE TRAIN ROBBER AND 100,000 MEXICAN DOBIES.

By a Special Contributor.

"I SEE," said the old engineer, laying down the paper and reaching for his sack of "cut plug," "I see that young Squanderbilt just paid some slick Englishman $4000 for a screw-tailed terrier, the difference between that an' $2.50 being on account of the purp's havin' one more turn to his tail than the usual run. I'll have to admit that I've never seen the document itself, but some o' those cub millionaires sure act like there was some clause in their daddies' wills that provided for the son gittin' rid o' the old man's money faster'n the old man himself could make it.

"Speakin' of makin' money fly, did I ever tell ye about Grant Wheeler and the Mexican dobies?

"This Grant Wheeler was one o' the old style of train robbers that's been purty near cleaned out since the country's got so settled up. Sure, trains is still held up, but the fellows that do the jobs are a long ways from bein' genuine train robbers like we used to have up to a few years ago. These train robbers that crack an express car once in a while now'days ain't train robbers at all, they're nothin' but a lot of city safe crackers.

"How do I know? Say, sonny, did ye ever notice that whenever they catch any of the fellows that do a job of breakin' into an express car, they mostly catch 'em in the cities somewhere? An' besides, when they blow into a safe now'days, they usually blow off the door of the safe, take what they want, an' get out without blowin' the whole car to kingdom come. Now, the man who can blow off the door to a heavy safe without disarrangin' the furniture is an expert, he's a safe cracker, not a train robber, and he's learned his trade in the city where there's safes to l'arn on. The old style of train robber didn't know any more about blowin' a safe open than you do. He was usually a bad cow puncher, or a gambler down on his luck, or some little rancher that had it in for the company, or maybe a cattle rustler; but none of these fellows knew any more about a safe than a cow knows about a steam gauge. They used to ride into town, buy a few sticks o' dynamite, ride out down the track a piece, an' flag the train. They'd uncouple the express car, run her down the track a ways, pack enough dynamite around the safe to knock over a city block, light the fuse and skedaddle. After the disturbance was over, they'd go back and pick what money and stuff of value they could find out o' the splinters, and then vamoose to the mountains till the fuss blew over.

"A crook robbin' a train nowadays slips into the express car, half the time without stoppin' the train at all, murders the messenger, forces a little nitro-glycerine into the cracks o' the door with an air pump, and touches her off. There ain't noise enough to hear across the car, and you could stand ten feet away from the safe and not be put to any particular discomfort. The money ain't wasted like the old way. What a cow puncher didn't know about nitro-glycerine and air pumps would make a good text-book, but the old way made too much fuss, scared the passengers and tore up too much company property to last very long, an' about all o' the old school is either shut up where they can crack rocks instead of safes or planted somewhere with a bullet or two through 'em.

"This fellow Grant Wheeler was one of the old-time train robbers, a dead shot, a fine rider, didn't know what it was to be scared, and believed that it was fair game to take money from an express company or a railroad.

"In 1899 I was runnin' out o' El Paso on the Tucson Division, haulin' the Overland. Tim McGarry was firin' for me. It wasn't exactly a paradise of a country to run through, but it was an easy run in other ways. I got along with Tim first-rate, and take it all in all, I preferred that particular run to a good many others on the road.

"Of course you've been through that country, and you'll likely remember that along about Wilcox the road runs not a great ways from the Dragoon Mountains. The run we had took us into the town o' Wilcox after dark in the evening, so we would get into Tucson in time to sign off and get a fair night's snooze at the end of the run. About that time, Wilcox was a bad town. The Chiricahua Cattle Company had gone in and opened up a lot of country and stocked it with a whole raft o' cattle and every bad cow puncher, tin-horn and leave-town-in-hurry lad begin to foregather in Wilcox right away. The Espee wasn't liked any too well in that section of the country, any way, and I always felt a little more comfortable when I opened her up and we begin to roll out o' that little hell-on-earth, for fear some irresponsible, wild-eyed, half-tanked cowman would take a notion to shoot at my cab windows.

"Well, sir, one night we rolled into Wilcox, westbound. We was delayed back at Bowie about twenty minutes, and I hadn't been able to pick up a minute, by the time we got into Wilcox. As we rolled into the little burg, which is just like all of those frontier towns, one street facin' the railroad and not much else, I noticed a fellow come out of a saloon and hurry over like he intended to catch the train. 'Well,' thinks I, 'you've got on a queer sort of a riggin' for a man goin' away on a train somewhere.' He was dressed in regular cowpuncher's get-up, chaps, spurs, and all, right down to the big Colts swung to his right hip.

"We didn't stop very long at these little towns, anyhow, and that particular night, being late, we didn't much more than quit rollin' before I caught the wave of old Smith's lantern to git out again.

"It was just ten miles over to Cochise, and I reckoned on makin' that ten miles quite a little faster'n the schedule called for. I opened her up hard and we slid out o' Wilcox like we'd been sent for. Tim was havin' troubles with his fire and was leanin' down, more than goin' after it. We'd got about a mile out o' Wilcox and the old girl was leanin' right down to her work and burnin' up the rails with the dozen-odd cars stringin' after her.

"All of a sudden I heard Tim's shovel clang down on the iron gangway between the cab and the tender. I turned my head to see what ailed him. I can't say as I blamed him for bein' in a hurry to drop his shovel—he couldn't do much good with it where his hands were.

"Standin' in the coal of the tender, only a couple of steps from the cab, was a fellow dressed in a regular cow puncher's rig-out. I noticed that afterwards, I might say, what I saw first was a big .45 Colts in the stranger's hand that kept peerin' inquirin'-like from Tim to me, and then back to Tim, as though askin' which one of us preferred bein' shot first.

"Tim was standing with both of his hands in the air—well into the air, too, as Tim was a new hand at the western railroadin' game, and lookin' into the business end of a loaded gun was a new experience for him.

"I'd been in hold-ups before, but I can't say that I ever got used to it or to the point where I felt comfortable when the performance was goin' on. I always had a sort o' hauntin' fear that I might run up against some nervous amateur some day who'd lose his head and shoot when there wasn't any occasion for it; they're about the only people who ever kill anybody in a train hold-up.

"Of course my hands went up over my head quicker'n scat. The stranger climbed down into the cab, hangin' on with his free hand, as the old girl was rollin' like one o' those launches in a big sea down at Long Beach.

"'Got a gun on ye, brother?' he hollers pleasantly at me as he stepped into the cab. I shook my head. 'Better take down your lunch grabbers and tend to yer old hoss, er she'll be leavin' the trail at some o' these curves and hittin' across the desert on her own hook,' an' he grinned at me pleasantly.

"I was glad o' the chance, as I didn't think much o' runnin' fifty mile an hour through the dark and nobody at the throttle. I cut her down a bit, and turned to find the stranger standin' close by my elbow.

"'Cut her down to a little more like travelin' an' a little less like flyin',' he says, an' I closed the throttle and let her coast.

"'We'll stop just this side of the trestle across the arroyo,' he says, and leaned over me, peerin' through the cab windows for the place.

"I got a good look at him when he was leanin' over me, and if I met him today in the biggest crowd in Spring street I could pick him out, only there ain't much show o' meetin' HIM. He was rather slim-built, with thin lips and a bronzed face that nothin' but ridin' the range could give him. His eyes was the thing you'd notice first of all his looks. They were blue, and in the shadow o' his dark face they gleamed like one o' these new electric headlights. 'Scrapper' was writ all over his face, an' if I'd 'a' had seventeen guns on me I wouldn't 'a' reached for one of 'em. Yep, that sounds all right, sonny, but the company was payin' me a hundred an' twenty-five per to run my engine, and they were payin' other fellows a salary to fight the company's battles, and I don't believe in buttin' in on some other man's job. An' besides, I was too old and too fond o' livin' to have any difficulty with a man who's made up his mind to risk his life to hold up one o' the company's trains. One funny move with a man like that an' Tim would 'a' pulled the train into Tucson instead o' me.

"'Slow her down a mite more, brother,' says the stranger, an' I gave her a touch of the air. It was bright moonlight outside, an' you know what bright moonlight means in Arizona. As we coasted around a curve, ahead we could see a dark line runnin' crossways to the track.

"'Here's where we stop,' says the stranger with a snap, and he steps back so he could command the two of us. I hit the train pretty hard with the air, and I'll bet there was more than one passenger slid out o' his or her seat about that time. We come jarrin' to a full stop 200 yards farther on.

"'Git down an' uncouple the express car,' says the stranger sharply, his pleasant grin of a minute before all gone and his face like it had been chipped out o' brown rock.

"We didn't stop to argue, but we climbed down out o' the cab purty lively. The stranger got down first and stood watching us. As Tim passed his own side of the cab, he made a quick grab in the cushions, where he had a gun hid.

"'Stop that, ye dum fool,' I says to him; 'you'll wind up by gettin' us both killed!' and Tim got out of the gangway without makin' any more fool moves. Down on the ground in the moonlight stood the stranger and another hombre in the same sort of a rig-out.

"'Hurry up, boys, er we'll have some blamed fool back there makin' a gun play, and we'll be obligated to kill somebody,' says the stranger, and we hustles back to the express car. 'Cut her off,' orders the stranger, and Tim and me climbed in, broke the air couplin', uncoupled the safety chain, and then threw over the couplin' lever. The train begin to show signs of life. Old Smith had swung off the rear Pullman and was hurryin' up the long line of coaches to see what in blazes the trouble was. About every window had a head or two stickin' out, an' the two road agents were gettin' nervous.

"'Git a move on ye, boys,' orders one of 'em, an' we started back for the engine with the two hold-up artists in the rear. Old Smith by this time had got up to the smoker, not more'n a hundred and fifty feet away, an' a dozen passengers and brakemen had swung off the different coaches.

"'Blam-m-m!' went the first stranger's big Colts, and the bullet whizzed down the line of coaches.

"'Git back there, now, er the next time I'll hit somebody. Every mother's son of ye back into the train.'

"In about three seconds the desert alongside the track was as bare o' human life as it had been before pulled in, even old Smith, who had been in hold- fore, climbin' up the smoker steps in a hurry. away back at the end of the train, ten coach away, a coon porter of one of the Pullmans and began blazin' away with some sort of a that sounded like a cannon, regardless of the both me and Tim was as easy to hit as the road Of course there was more danger to the folks train from the shooting o' that coon than there us, but it was a darn fool trick just the same.

"The two strangers didn't even take the shoot back.

"'Git back in that car, you black rascal,' holle first hold-up man, 'er I'll come back there an' think a freight's run over ye.'

"Either because the coon had shot up all his because he was scared of the road agent, he back into the Pullman in a hurry, and we climbed onto the engine.

"'Let her out,' says the boss of the two, and I her up. About a quarter of a mile down the stopped, and Tim and me climbed out again and down to the express car. Away back down the could see the rest of the train standin' in the a crowd of black specks, hustlin' around like ants. All we had with us was the express car coupled next to the engine in the train make-up.

"'Tell him to open up that door,' orders the man. Charley Simonds was the express messen that run, and he was as stubborn as a mule. you'll wait a minute or two before you get in an' he did, too. 'Open up the door, Charley,' I to him.

"'Can't do it, Joe,' he calls back. 'You tell agents to amble along or they're liable to stop o' loads o' buckshot. They ain't goin' to get in

"'So,' says the boss bad man. 'Kind o' indep like, ain't he?'

"'Say, young feller,' he calls in to Charley, closed gray door of the express car, 'either that door almighty quick or else we'll put a dynamite under that old car that'll make you fell over the aidge of the Grand Cañon.'

"'Go ahead, and be damned!' hollers Charley.

"'Well, he certainly has got his nerve with him the boss, admiring-like, 'but we can get in there than by makin' all that fuss. Come on, brother, go back to the engine and see if we can't sledge somewhere.' This last was to to me, ambled back to the engine and got a sledge. me wasn't makin' any fuss, and the two hold-ups makin' any threats, but once in a while the one of those Colts would swing around casual- sort o' show that it still had us in mind as possi tims.

"We went back to the car, and the boss says break down that door,' he and his partner in the time steppin' out of the way of a possible load shot that might come through the door.

"'Don't shoot, Charley,' I yells in to him; either bust the door down or get shot.'

"'Hold on,' he yells back; 'they got me might as well open it up an' save you choppi I can't very well shoot you.' There was the a bolt slidin', and the door slid back into the car.

"'Hands up,' yells the boss road agent at Char Charley drops his pump gun and elevates his 'Climb in, boys,' invites the road agent, and we into the express car.

"'Open up that safe, sonny,' says the boss to "'Go to hell!' says Charley promptly. The road grinned.

"'Didn't suppose you would,' he chuckles; shore got your nerve with you.'

"Around the safe there was a whole stack o sacks, with some sort o' funny marks on 'em.

"'What's in the sacks?' says the head bandit ley. Charley grinned.

"'There's twenty sacks of Mexican dobies help yourselves if you're bound to have some

"The boss looked at the sacks and then walk and felt 'em.

"'Well, I'll be darned,' he says. 'What's greaser money doing up in this neck o' the wood

"A dobie, you know, sonny, is a Mexican dollar why they call it dobie I don't know, but dobie along the frontier. They're only worth about apiece in our money, and heavier'n all get out man wouldn't make a fortune even if he could away a hackload of 'em.

"'They're shippin' 'em down the branch from to some o' those minin' camps around Cana plains Charley to the boss . 'Better have some you'll never git into that safe.' I could see that was dead anxious to keep the pair from blowin' but they could see it, too, an' that only made more anxious to get into it.

"'Leave that to us,' says the boss. 'Got handy?' he says, turnin' to his pal, who was as an oyster.

"Betcha,' says the mum one, 'an' we'd better tin' out o' here or we'll be havin' a posse Cochise.'

"He scrambled off the car an' made for near the track. Lookin' sharply, I could see two tied out there, and he hurried up to one o' the fumbled around in the saddle bags. In two was back with a whole box—about two doze dynamite, under his arm.

"'I guess we won't need it all,' says the boss thoughtfully.

EDWARD C. CROSSMAN.

The Thwarted Ghost.

SHOWING THE ADVANTAGES OF OUR MODERN INVENTIONS.

From London Opinion.

THERE were just four of us left in the smoking-room—Macquoid, who believes in ghosts, and Opper, who doesn't; myself, with no settled conviction either way, and, finally, Hillaby, who has traveled so much in the United States that we always credited him with having imbibed as much of Yankee unbelief as he had adopted of Yankee ways.

As it turned out, we were wrong. Scarcely had Mac and Opper commenced the hot debate upon ghosts and ghost seeing, which infallibly breaks out whenever they touch the subject (which, again, is pretty nearly every time they meet,) when Hillaby struck in:

"Say, you fellows, just quit your wrangling for a piece, and I'll tell you the 'reallest ghost story of 'em all."

Mac brightened up at this unexpected support; Opper's lip began to curl.

"H'm!" he grunted, "I'm tired of listening to real ghost stories which are invariably told second-hand."

"Well," said Hillaby, "you're going to hear one first-hand for a change. This is one little adventure of my own. I'm not putting up any second-hand goods this trip, so if you'll just sit tight while I fix my pipe, you shall have the tale straight and no kinks."

We snuggled down into our seats, and prepared for thrills.

"I think you fellows remember my old school mate, Burbridge," Hillaby began, "but whether you do or not won't matter, because he doesn't figure to any extent in the affair. I only mention him because it was at his place—or rather his father's place down to Rimingford—that the thing happened.

"I was down there for the shooting one November, and I had barely set my foot inside the door, so to speak, when Burbridge got me in a corner and asked me if I was the least bit particular about sleeping accommodation.

"'Not a little bit,' I said, 'so long as I don't get put in a damp bed or in a rat-ridden hay loft. Just you fix up your arrangements right straight along, and give me the distinguished visitor's chamber or the top attic, as you please. I shan't mind whichever it is.'

"'Thanks, awfully,' says Burbridge. 'I was sure you wouldn't mind, old chap, but I thought I'd ask you to make sure. The fact is, we are a bit crowded, and it's necessary to put some one in what we call the haunted room. Not that I believe it's really haunted, you know,' he added hastily, 'only one or two queer things have happened there, and that's quite enough to give the room a bad name, especially in an old house like this.'

"'I see,' said I. 'What sort of queer things, might I ask? You can trust me with all the creepy details; I guess I'm ghost-proof. What's the ghost like—shrieking female, with blue fire, clanking chains, and all the usual accessories, eh?'

"Burbridge smiled at this. 'Not exactly,' said he. 'Not that kind of a ghost at all. To tell you the solid truth, I don't know that any one claims to know precisely what sort of a ghost it is. It's like this. Somewhere about ninety years ago, the pater's great uncle—a buck of the Regency, and a notoriously wild blade in his time—took it into his head to get quit of some big trouble he was in by cutting his throat in that room. Now we don't know that his ghost haunts the room—in fact, I have as strong a disbelief in ghosts as yourself—but queerly enough the only two men who have occupied the room since then have done precisely the same thing; both of them were found dead in the morning, each with his own razor gripped in his hand. Seemed almost as if each of them had made up his mind to shave, and had changed his mind half-way, and done the other thing. There you are, that's all there is to it, and if you like you can decide not to sleep there.'

"'Not a bit of it,' said I. 'Tell John, or whatever his name is, to take up my traps, and I'll begin my lease of the room right now. Say, what o'clock do you dine? I want to clean up a bit. Have I time?'

"'Oh, heaps! You've the best part of an hour; we don't dine till 8.'

"'Very well, then. John can bring me up some shaving water, and I'll give your old ghost a chance to get some further practice. He must be afraid of getting rusty.'

"We both laughed at this, and I left him to follow the boy up to my room

"I must say it was a good sort of a ghost room, the very kind of room that I should want to stay around and do my haunting in if ever I took up that line of business. I daresay you fellows know what I mean—paneled walls, old-fashioned chimney piece, four-poster, and all that sort of fitment. And what made it all the more 'haunty' was the dead stillness of it when the door was shut. You see, it lay at the end of a long corridor, away from the main body of the house.

"Now, before I say any more, I want you to know that all that ghost talk didn't bother me any. I liked the room, it suited me, and if there was anything I could have asked for, it would have been a chance to investigate something a little more authentic in the ghost line.

"Mind you, I'm not saying that it was exactly pleasant to remember that in this very room in which I stood three men had cut their throats, one after the other, and for no apparent reason. Nor was it comforting to reflect that Burbridge, for all his talk about not believing in ghosts, was probably twiddling his thumbs in a corner of the house and wondering whether I was going to be the fourth man. He's a good fellow, Burbridge, but beastly nervous and superstitious.

"Well, to go on. I unpacked my kit by the light of the candles—Burbridge's father would sooner have painted his house bright green than allow it to be desecrated by anything modern in illuminations—I unpacked and got out my shaving tackle. Then I lathered. I believe in a good long lathering, and while I was rubbing it in I fancied I felt a draught, as if the door had been suddenly opened. I turned round and found I was mistaken; door was shut as tight as I had left it.

"All right; I finished my lathering and picked up the razor. One, two, three—down the right cheek; turned to the left cheek and—there was my ghost, peering over my shoulder in the glass.

"My, it was an ugly face, I can tell you. Wicked! that's hardly the name for it. I couldn't see much of the figure, but what I did see was enough to tell me that this was the Regency Buck to whom Burbridge had referred.

"I don't mind confessing that I got all the thrills I wanted; in fact, I was too out-and-out frightened to move a muscle. I just stood in front of that glass as though I was carved in stone. Turn my head or move my arm I could not—not for my life.

"The face was shadowy at first—barely distinguishable in the candle light; then it grew and grew in distinctness—and wickedness—until I could do nothing but hold my breath and stare, petrified, into its eyes. I would have gladly given every cent I was worth to be able to turn round and face it, but I was fixed, as if I'd been a mummy.

"Then as I stood with my tongue sticking to the roof of my mouth, I saw a hand creep up to mine in the mirror—saw it creep up until it rested on that hand of mine which still held the razor. Like a flash it came into my mind how those other two poor fellows had met their death.

"Without removing his eyes from mine for an instant, the ghost began to draw my hand with his right across my throat. I could feel no actual touch—nothing but a sort of cold clamminess upon my wrist—but I could see the movement and feel the pressure of the razor upon my throat.

"For one moment I believe I tried to say prayers; the next I laughed—laughed, loud and long, while the old ghost, with a horrible glare of disappointed spite, vanished—just like a puff of smoke. And still I laughed. Oh, boys, I tell you, I lay down and laughed until I was sore."

And Hillaby laughed again at the recollection.

"But weren't you hurt? Didn't anything happen?" we asked him in bewilderment.

"Hurt? Happen?" replied Hillaby, still chuckling. "Not a little bit. Don't you see, the ghost was up against modern science. I was using a safety razor!"

EDWARD ANTON.

Passing of Isles of Shoals.

Appledore Island, Isles of Shoals, off Portsmouth, N. H., has been platted into house lots and old visitors are amazed to find the island is now simply real estate. It has always been thought that no money could buy any part of these isles, immortalized in song and story; it was thought that the name of Mrs. Celia Leighton Thaxter had sufficient charm to hold intact the island upon which she was born and died, but it has been decreed otherwise, and the shrine of that gifted authoress is doomed to be given up to the speculator and to people who seek summer homes on that marvelous pile of granite boulders and shrubbery, of which Mrs. Thaxter once wrote:

"Who shall describe that wonderful noise of sea among the rocks, the most suggestive of all sounds in nature? The little islets, the most delightful places in the world, lovely with their fringe of weeds, thistles and mullein stalks, drawn clearly against the sky at the upper end of the slope, and below their mosaic of stone and shell and sea work, tangles of kelp and driftwood—a mass of warm, neutral tints with brown, green and crimson mosses and a few golden snail shells lying on the many tinted gravel, where the ripples lapse in delicious murmur.

"To describe the foliage is impossible. The pansies, richly streaked with burning gold, the dark velvet coreopsis and the nasturtium; the larkspur, blue and brilliant as lapsis-lazuli; the sweet peas of a deep bright rose color, their odor like rich wine, too sweet almost to be borne, except when the pure fragrance of mignonette is added—such mignonette as never grows on shore. What is there on this island which so transfigures all familiar flowers with such beauty, the wild flowers, of which there are numberless varieties, the pink robert which blushes with a tint as deep as a damask rose; the wild roses as bright as red carnations, their warm blush glowing against the cool gray stones?" Already it is reported, fully 100 lots has changed ownership.—[Boston Transcript.

- Benefit of a World-Language.

The advantages of a world-language are indisputable. Without it every man must be content to express himself in his own tongue; and every man who needs to know what has been said upon the subject in which he is specially interested must of necessity master half a dozen other languages. And this is the disadvantage of the individual only; even more far-reaching and significant are the disadvantages of the several communities each of which has only the speech of its own stock. In the absence of a common tongue they may fail to understand one another and misunderstandings may lead to bickerings, and bickerings may bring them to open strife. When we see how much easier it is for the British and the Americans to understand each other than it is for the French and the Germans' we perceive at once how much the existence of a world-language would make for peace.—[Brander Mathews in the Century.

Geordie Horn's Chest.

GEORDIE HORN was a character well known among the country folk of the Scotch Highlands twenty-five years ago. He belonged to a class rather hard to classify, for he was neither a tramp nor a farm hand, although frequently following the habits of both. Wandering from farm to farm the greater part of the time he was kindly treated and hospitably entertained generally. While he was a man of unusual strength, he was mentally weak and exceedingly lazy.

"He's a gie cute chiel, though slow in the uptack" (understanding,) was the way a good many described him.

One day he arrived at his friend the doctor's and complained of a severe pain in his breast. The doctor handed him a plaster with instructions to put it on his chest without delay. Geordie gave him one of his knowing looks and took his departure. The doctor met him a few days later and inquired how he was feeling now. Geordie replied: "Nae better." "Did you do as I told you with the plaster?" the doctor went on.

"Weel, no, not exactly; I done the best I could. I didn' have a chest sae I stuck it on my bandbox" (hatbox.)

The Wrong Horse.

BRIDGET had been in America only a few months, but she believed in the principle of pretending to know what she ought to know. She had been engaged as laundry girl in a small family of well-to-do people. When asked if she understood all the details of her work, she unhesitatingly replied: "Sure I do, mam."

Her mistress was not quite satisfied, however, and while she was busy with her first washing, looked in upon her. Bridget seemed to be doing all right, and she left without offering suggestions.

Next morning the ironing was in order, and Bridget was hard at it when her mistress looked in to say: "As you get the clothes ironed, just throw them over the horse."

"All right, mam," the busy laundry girl replied without stopping to raise her eyes from her work in hand. The laundry-room was located in an out-house adjoining the barn, and occasionally the neighing of the family horse and the merry voice of Bridget resounded throughout the house.

Returning to the laundry-house a couple of hours later, the lady could scarcely believe her eyes nor restrain her mirth when she beheld the family horse, standing patiently beside Bridget, loaded down with newly-ironed sheets, pillow cases, table clothes, and lace-trimmed waists and skirts. With an anxious look on her honest face Bridget observed: "I'm glad you've come, mam, for I'll have to have another horse."

Too Much Sympathy.

DR. SIMON FLEXNER, discussing the anti-vivisectionists in New York, said that their sympathy for animals was as misplaced as the sympathy of Aurelien [illegible]'s Frenchman.

This Frenchman, he explained, unluckily bought an almanac that gave the dates of the world's chief events. From that day on he lived a life of mourning. Thus, on April 30, he had crape on his hat.

"Have you lost a relative?" a friend asked. "Not exactly," said he. "But today is a sad anniversary for the French people. On April 30, 1524, the Chevalier Bayard died." On May 2 he had the crape on again. "Still mourning Bayard?" said the friend. "No," said he; "but don't you remember that on May 2 a great and charming poet, Alfred de Musset, breathed his last?" On the 6th of the same month:

"Whom are you mourning for now?" "For an honest man, Gen. Cavaignac." On the 30th, crying terribly, he said: "Ah, Joan of Arc! On this date, in 1431, a handful of Englishmen and a miserable bishop put the gallant maid to death." On July 13 he took a bath in memory of the assassination of Marat. On the 16th Beranger's death gave him a fatal shock. On the 18th, having read of Napoleon's departure to St. Helena, he felt better, but on the 23d the bombardment of Dieppe by the English, in 1694, confined him again to his bed. He was taken with a fever and died on the 22d, muttering: "In a month, the massacre of St. Bartholomew!"

Merely a Loan.

MRS. M., whose husband is a physician in a town in New Mexico, is often called upon to assist with patients, and this she does willingly, even though the disease be smallpox, as it was in the present instance. The patient lived a few miles out into the country, and as the roads were very dusty, Mrs. M. chewed gum to relieve her mouth and throat from the stinging alkali particles which she unavoidably inhaled during the drive. At the bedside of the smallpox sufferer she was still chewing, and she wondered that the patient, who was a Mexican boy, gazed at her so longingly, until he suddenly asked in piteous tones: "Oh, please let me chew your gum awhile!".

Mrs. M. smiled, and at once surrendered the coveted morsel, being glad to afford the patient some slight comfort. When the time came for the doctor to leave, the incident had slipped her mind, but the boy had not forgotten. Carefully he twisted the gum into a wad with his tongue and, taking it out of his mouth, reluctantly reached it toward his benefactress, saying: "Many thanks, señora!"

He was allowed to keep the treasure.

A Poor Defense.

TALI ESEN MORGAN, the noted musical director of the great Ocean Grove religious festivals, said the other day that the Merry Widow waltz had been stolen from Mendelssohn's oratorio of "St. Paul."

"It is a clear case of plagiarism," said Mr. Morgan, "and Lehar in his defense only incriminates himself the more. In fact, Lehar's defense rather reminds me of the valet who was accused of drinking his master's wine.

"To this valet the master said:

"'Look here, you! I believe that you have been at this decanter of claret and then filled it up with water."

"'Oh, no, sir,' said the valet, in an aggrieved tone.

"'Well, it tastes like it,' said the master, and he set down his glass with a wry face.

"'Oh, no, sir,' said the valet excitedly. 'In the first place, sir, I never drink wine. In the second place, when I do drink it, I never think of filling the bottle up with water. And in the third place, when I do put water in, I always am very careful to add a little brandy so that the wine may not lose its strength.'"

Vivacity Misinterpreted.

CHARLES J. BONAPARTE, Attorney-General of the United States, was presiding at a meeting of the Civic Reform League in New York, May, 1905, where a sequence of long, dull papers were presented. Between papers, Mr. Bonaparte would arouse the jaded interest of the audience with humorous references and pertinent jokes. Each was punctuated with a vivacity of manner, that indicated his French ancestry, which, to those who knew his real worth and real work was nothing unusual.

But—and here hangs the story—there was one in the audience to whom Mr. Bonaparte's name and work were unknown, who contemplated these mannerisms with growing disapproval. He was a serious-minded, bespectacled man, tall and spare, with a vagrant wisp of gray hair rising from a much-rubbed and wrinkled forehead and who seemed deeply interested in the overly dull papers until Mr. Bonaparte began to enliven the dullness, when his whole attention was directed to the distinguished Cabinet officer. He glanced at his programme and then back to Mr. Bonaparte, and finally turning to his neighbor, asked: "Who is the presiding officer?"

"Ah! Bonaparte," said he reflectively upon being informed, and after further grave contemplation, addressed his neighbor thus:

"Is that his usual manner or has he been having too much dinner?"

A Career on the Stage.

A CAREER on the stage was the early ambition of Robert M. La Follette, United States Senator from Wisconsin. His choice of the equally limelight career of filibustering Congress and other sensational political stunts instead of barnstorming country audiences was due in a great measure to the highly demonstrative advice of the great tragedian, John McCullough.

In the late seventies, Mr. La Follette, then a slender undersized college youth, possessing a fine voice, a keen eye and full of nervous force, sought a hearing for his own histrionic talents before the great McCullough, whose magnificent physique peculiarly fitted him for tragic roles. Mr. McCullough graciously consented. After hearing Mr. La Follette in several recitations which he delivered with much fervor, running the gamut of the emotions from gay to grave, the great actor asked Mr. La Follette if he could give the lines of Iago to his own Othello. Mr. La Follette could. In a moment the parlor was transformed into a stage with La Follette cast for Iago and McCullough as the dark-skinned Moor.

A scene was chosen, then another, and La Follette met the great McCullough with unmistaken fervor and spirit. Then came the scene when Othello is maddened and tortured by his fears of Desdemona's faithlessness, after Iago with such cunning and fiendishness had poisoned the Moor's mind by his vile insinuations. At sight of Iago, Othello exclaims:

"Avaunt! begone! Thou hast set me on the rack!" And ending with "Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone!" Here Othello seizes Iago by the throat and says: "Villain, be sure thou prove my love is false!"

Suiting the action to the words, McCullough, magnificent of physique, seized the diminutive La Follette by the throat and as if he had been a weakling cat, to use the expression of an eyewitness, shook him until his teeth chattered. McCullough glared ferociously upon La Follette, who in helpless agony was being thrashed about the room in the merciless grip of the superb interpreter of the dark-skinned Moor, and when the friendly audience had recovered from its amazement, Mr. La Follette was emerging, very much crestfallen, from beneath the old-fashioned square piano where he had finally been thrown by the enraged Moor.

Then Mr. McCullough gave his decision.

"No, Mr. La Follette, you are too small to be an actor! In this scene, had we been acting together, the gallery gods would have cried out, with great reason: 'Oh, let up on the little duffer! Take a man of your size!' No, on the stage one must meet powerful combatants. You would but incite pity. Not for you Virginius, Macbeth, Othello, King Lear!"

Content.

CHARLES FROHMAN, who is rapidly establishing a "world theater"—a theater where the world's first playwrights and performers work on American lines under his direction—talked the other day about content.

"I don't work for money," he said. "The hardest workers never work for money. When did money bring content?

"You know the story of the satrap and the Persian physician? A certain young and profligate satrap, exhausted alike in body and in mind, sent for a famous Persian physician and said:

"'I have squandered my youth in riotous living. My frame is enfeebled like an old man's, and my mind is disordered with remorse and horror. Can you help me?'

"The Persian physician, looking gravely at the pale satrap, answered:

"'You have but one hope. Go forth and find, if there be such, a perfectly contented man. Persuade this man to exchange shirts with you, and you will be strong and happy again.'

"The satrap set out upon his search. He traveled many months in vain. But at last he heard of a cobbler who was said to be absolutely contented.

"The satrap came at last to the cobbler's door. The house was but a hovel, and on a board before it the cobbler lay asleep. Awaking him, the satrap asked if it were true that he was quite contented, and the cobbler, with a laugh, declared that it was.

"'Then,' said the satrap, 'I have a boon to ask at your hands. It is that you will exchange shirts with me. For thus, a wise physician has said, I may become strong and contented also.'

"But the cobbler shook his head.

"'Most cheerfully would I grant your request, young man,' he began, 'but——'

"'Nay, nay, deny me not!' the satrap cried. 'I will pay you any sum that you may name.'

"'I seek not your gold, youth,' said the cobbler, but—but——'

"'But what?'

"'The truth is, I have no shirt.'"

The Salome Dancer.

"I HAD the honor, in London last month, of supping at the Savoy with Maud Allan, the Salome dancer. It was a great experience."

The speaker, a young actor, sighed and resumed:

"How beautiful the Savoy supper room is. We have nothing like it here. And to see all those fair women in their superb gowns, leaning forward, smoking cigarettes, at the supper's end—how modern it makes one feel!

"Maud Allan talked to us about her Salome dance, about the kissing of the head of John the Baptist. She said she could see nothing wrong about the kissing, on the stage, of a papier maché head, when the real head is continually being kissed by the devout.

"'The real head?' said I. 'Where is the real head?'

"Then, with a laugh, Miss Allan told me a story about the Abbe de Marolles.

"This famous abbe once visited Amiens. They took him through the splendid Amiens Cathedral; then they showed him the head of John the Baptist.

"The Abbe de Marolles, devoutly pressing his lips to the relic, exclaimed:

"'Heaven be praised! This is already the fifth or sixth head of the saint that I have had the good fortune to kiss.'"

Plain but Sufficient.

THE late Josiah W. Leeds of Philadelphia was noted for his lifelong fight against immodesty. Mr. Leeds reformed the theatrical poster, he elevated painting, and in a number of cases he even succeeded in having nude statuary draped.

He loved simplicity as he loved modesty. Ostentation he abhorred—especially the ostentation at funerals and cemeteries. He used often to quote an epitaph that he had once seen in a secluded graveyard.

This epitaph, which was cut on the simplest, cheapest stone it is possible to imagine, said:

"The monument is very plain, no doubt, but all the money in the world would not have brought our poor dear father back to us again."

The House Beautiful—Its Flower Garden and Grounds.

GARDEN ACCESSORIES.

SOME SUGGESTIONS AS TO THEIR CHARACTER AND USE.

By Ernest Braunton.

THERE is far greater necessity for garden accessories in a semi-tropic clime than there is in lands of ice and snow. In a land of perpetual sunshine every garden should have a sun dial; in no country can it be so useful as in our own. Where clocks and watches fail, it is as well to have one accurate timepiece that never fails. It is best to have a very simple sun dial with nothing on the plate save the necessary figures, but in formal gardens of some pretentions, where the setting is elaborate, a motto often encircles the dial. If one is used, see that it is in plain English, that its meaning may be clear to all and not alone to those who know much or little of Latin.

In our favored land garden seats and arbors may be used at all seasons and should be in every garden in every land, for a visit to the garden must not be made a task, and there are many of the frequenters who have need of temporary rest. Every garden of any size needs at least one "summer-house," one with open sides but water-proof top, so that it may be used, if desired, during rainy weather. For perfect landscapes Southern California has dire need of more inland water, therefore a small body of water has, in local gardens, a most unusual charm, but it should be harmonious with its surroundings and never so large as to dominate the garden or landscape. If in a formal garden or close to the house or other buildings, or garden accessories of an architectural nature they may be formal in design. If removed from all this and amid more natural quietude they should be informal in outline. The same rule holds good with all garden features—a rustic moveable seat is proper in any aspect, and a fixed seat should smack of its immediate surroundings. The writer has, in his garden, a seat beneath a pine, and the back, legs, braces, etc., are from rough pine branches; one contemplated, beneath a palm, will be constructed from palm-leaf stems to the same extent. In any garden should be found, first, an air of restfulness and quietude—no striking, bizarre effects that seem to stare at and repel all visitors as intruders to their domain.

The Mexican Tulip Poppy.

One may be certain of good results with the Mexican tulip poppy (Hunnemannia) sown any or every month in the year. Why any one should waste time trying to grow the "cranky" yellow tree poppy (Dendromecon) is beyond the comprehension of the writer, for the flowers of the herbaceous plants are in every way superior to those of the bush, and for numbers will vie with any plant grown. Of the large poppy family none will keep in the house better than the Hunnemannia, and no clearer, purer yellow ever found its way into a garden.

Our Washington Palms.

According to the revising botanist, S. B. Parish, we are not to confuse the names of the Washingtonias through any change in designating our native species. The one native to this State and most common in and about Los Angeles, the thick-stemmed and shorter of those we see on every hand, is Washingtonia filifera, variety robusta. Mr. Parish writes: "If I were a gardener or seedsman I would drop the 'robusta' altogether and call it W. filifera, as we are accustomed to do, and thus avoid confusion. The varietal name (robusta) is of botanical importance only, and not worth taking up by others than technical botanists." The more slender and taller palm, known to us as W. robusta is W. gracilis, a name all should adopt at once, as it only is correct.

Our Best Palm.

Although the Canary Island palm (Phoenix Canariensis) is crammed into every place large enough to receive a year-old plant, to the great detriment of the garden and appearances in general, it is, nevertheless the best palm for universal planting of any we grow and cannot be too extensively used if intelligently placed. A grove of them provides a most delightful shade, which constantly improves with the age of the palms until both subjects and effect are well-nigh ideal. Gardens of some size should contain from three to a score or more, planted at varying distances from each other, yet in a group, to present as nearly a natural appearance as is possible in artificial surroundings.

The Madonna Lily.

The beautiful and chaste Madonna lily, Lilium candidum, should be in every garden, for there is not a more lovely flower in existence. Unfortunately in places it shows a disposition to give way in the foliage, usually due to a fungus trouble, but if it can be induced to thrive against a background of trees or shrubs, it will form a most perfect picture, its chaste white flowers with golden yellow anthers lasting well in such positions. The bulbs will be in the local market at this time, or very soon, and should be secured and planted at once. Every day they remain out of the soil, they deteriorate, and you get later and smaller flowers.

Plant Cosmos Now.

There usually are places in every garden where summer crops of flowers have been that are now bare of plants, and one is oft puzzled how best to utilize the ground until winter planting season comes. In a long list of common annuals none give better satisfaction or come to maturity in a shorter period than cosmos. The best strain comes in three colors—white, pink, and crimson, and the flowers are always of good color, texture and keeping quality whether the plants are flowered at two feet in height or at ten feet. Sown at any time during the next sixty days, given a good soil with plenty of water for one month, and they will give an excellent crop of flowers. An abundance of water produces tall; rank plants, and when water is no longer given they will flower at whatever height they are "caught." In any case, the flowers are good. The seeds are very cheap, and germinate freely with most ordinary care, and no annual gives better returns for slight care.

Kill Weeds and Loosen Soil.

Keep the weeds down, as they rob the soil and the top of the soil should be scratched over every two or three weeks. Oftener is better, as it lets in the air and keeps the soil sweet. Never allow the soil to cake over the top too long or a scum to form, or the effects of it will soon be seen in dead foliage about the base of the plants and also in a less fresh appearance of the whole. Soil should never be allowed to "cake over" in the sun or "scum over" in the shade. If the latter shows persistent green, better dust over the surface with air-slaked lime, allow it to lie a week and then work it into the surface soil.

GARDEN SEAT UNDER PINE.

A CORNER IN CATS.

ONE OF THE QUEER EXPERIENCES OF EARLY CALIFORNIA LIFE.

By a Special Contributor.

We stood waiting in the only livery stable the town afforded. The fat Mexican man-of-all-work was lazily harnessing the team. At last all was ready, and the Judge took the reins and, with a preliminary pull to test the metal of his rawboned steeds, drove out the door into the dusty road.

We were out for an inspection of a mining prospect of which good reports had reached us. It was located upon land belonging to "Old Man Johnson," who had been notified several days before to meet us at the next town and pilot us to the spot.

Old Johnson was a character in that section. The story went that he had gained title to much of his land by force rather than legal means. The fact remained that none in that section disputed his right, for good and sufficient reasons, for he was known to be handy with his gun and not over particular as to his targets.

"You'll meet an interesting character in old Johnson," said the Judge.

"I've heard some rather tough stories about him," said Frank.

"Oh, Johnson's all right when things go his way, "replied the Judge. "But it may be as well not to let him 'get it in for you.'"

Jogging along at a steady clip for the next half-hour, we hove in sight of the next town. A tall and angular old man, hearing the rattle of our vehicle, came to the door of the blacksmith shop, and waving his arm in signal, hailed us.

After curt introductions all around, and the storing of certain provender, liquid and solid, the old man climbed into the rear seat, and directing us the take, we were off.

Matters settled down to the usual small talk men met for the first time and compelled to comp ship during a ten-mile ride.

"How have you been since I saw you last, Mr. son?" asked the Judge.

"Fust rate. Longer I live the younger I git, I

PARK POLICIES.

THE NECESSITY OF PERMANENCY IN MANAGEMENT.

ALL of the noted parks in the world have been the outcome of a set scheme or policy, rigidly adhered to for a long term of years. On the Pacific Coast we have one really great park, Golden Gate, in San Francisco, and its greatness is chiefly due to the fact that one man and his policy have been predominating for more than a score of years. Superintendents of that park do not come and go with each new administration, serving a two years' apprenticeship and then away forever, as has been the case in Los Angeles.

Golden Gate is one of the finest examples of park building known, and is famous throughout the world, as the result of the continuous policy of an able superintendent. Los Angeles has one park enjoying some slight fame of late years, but for the same reason the Pacific Ocean is famous—its great extent. Expert landscape gardeners from all parts of the world visit Los Angeles, admire our wonderful development of plant life, marvel at the comparative ease with which we may grow it all, but absolutely none admire our parks. For a score of years the writer has watched our city parks under various superintendents, more in sorrow than in anger at the rank destruction of landscape beauty, the conflicting policies of these puny political appointees, and the lack of progress owing to each one succeeding to the charge being determined to pull down his predecessor's castle and erect one of his own building.

Superintendents in the past have built lawns and the next has plowed them up and planted trees, followed by a man who uproots trees and outlines his policy as believing in having lawns everywhere. One has built a park fence, the next has torn it down; the next pulled out the hedge planted and again erected a fence and the last one tampering with this particular job again planted a hedge—such is the history of "border warfare" in Eastlake Park. One man's taste has run to water, another to lawn, the next's to forestry, and still another's to immense plantations of shrubbery massing. One was inclined to formality and the next leaned toward natural landscapes; the first has built a pond on top of a small hill, like an extinct miniature volcano, and the second has made one in a mud hole so that the third has had to wall and fill the shores before the public could see and admire(?). Other equally strange things have happened, and had the writer any desire to "reopen old sores" there could be printed herein a long list of specific cases where the city authorities, people and press have engaged in two or many-sided controversies over examples of rank vandalism perpetrated in our parks by ignorant political park superintendents. This general summing up has been made for the purpose of asking the citizens of Los Angeles how long they are going to perpetuate this rank foolishness. We hope soon to vote on charter amendments that promise some remedial measures, and every interested taxpayer of Los Angeles (and all should be interested,) has a duty to perform in seeing that our parks are safeguarded from future political influence.

Very recently we have had an example of what may be accomplished under the continuous policy of one man, for our parks have of late undergone some great and good fundamental changes. The grass is no greener nor are the flowers brighter than of yore—these are mere incidentals, but roads and paths are more and lines, changes and additions have been on a broader scale with far-reaching beneficial effect, and all the work done has been fundamental—a foundation on which to base all future work. While not agreeing with the present superintendent on all things (over which wherein we are both highly pleased,) the writer [illegible] to subscribe to the fact that John G. Morley is the most able and efficient superintendent the city parks have had since the days of the lamented Tomlinson, under whom Mr. Morley was park foreman. Now that he has been tried for a number of years and found capable, and become thoroughly acquainted with the needs of our parks, we earnestly need a charter revision that will render his position safe from political influence, give both the superintendent and park commission more power and place the park department absolutely independent by granting it a certain per cent. of the city's tax income. At present the commission is simply a political "show piece," the superintendent is shorn of rightful and deserved power, and the whole department is financially starving.

The Indian Cedar.

For wide roads and avenues we have no better tree than the Indian or Incense Cedar (Cedrus deodara,) one of the only three species of true cedars in existence, and of which the famous Cedar of Lebanon is one. Where these cedars are planted, the parkway should be of sufficient width (if possible) to allow of the retention of the lower branches, clear to the ground. Intelligently planted and cared for, an avenue of Incense Cedars far surpass in beauty one of any other conifer we use for the purpose

AVENUE OF INDIAN CEDARS.

The Popular Camphor Tree.

Spite of the fact that, like nearly all trees for street planting, it has some faults, the camphor continues to be one of the most popular. Its most unusual beauty has created a strong demand for it all over Southern California both for street and home planting. If the needs of the camphor were better understood, it would be still more of a favorite for the reason that it may be made much more beautiful than it is by a generous supply of water, especially while young. In its native habitat it always receives an annual rainfall of 100 or more inches—often nearly 200. In the growing season, it can not be given too much water, yet it maintains a good standing among our drouth-resistant trees.

Make Your Village Known.

Nearly all travelers desire to know the names of the places they are passing through, and many complain that the railroad doorplates to the cities and towns in many localities are pathetically retiring in their habits, and it is puzzling to discover the reason therefor. Is it municipal pride, love of secrecy, or is it pure shiftlessness that makes it possible for a large majority of our towns to completely hush up their geographical identity and to allow this signal breach of neighborliness? An attractive civic railroad entrance, with a pleasing and visible "name plate" are for a community what a gracious manner and an artistic visiting card are to the individual. These are suggestions villages ought to carefully consider, and promptly act upon.

Organize and Improve.

An organization for civic improvement is needed in every place, both large and small. There may be places in which every person is devoted to the uplifting of the community, but even there an organization is necessary. There are many things which have to be done by united effort, or go undone, which are outside the scope of any municipal government. And it is unfortunately true that some municipal government organizations need the spur of the knowledge that another organization of citizens is watching it. Every village should have its civic organization of some kind. Some have several, and, in large places, there is room for them all. The smallest should have at least one. Individuals working alone have accomplished much in some instances, but they inevitably soon find that they need help. A community may have an organization for the purpose of securing the election of good men to office, separate from the political parties. It may have an organization for watching its municipal government, and seeing that its officers do their duty. It may have a board of trade, to look out for the business interests. It may have an improvement society, for the beautifying of the village. It may have an organization which covers all of these fields.

Flowering Street Trees.

The love of nature by those shut out from it is manifested by the attempt to bring nature to them, and there is a growing tendency to beautfy large cities not merely by architectural embellishments but by touches of nature. In London success has attended the planting of flowering trees; and, though these have so far been confined to a few favored localities, such as parks and public gardens, there seems no reason why they should not be introduced into the streets. They will stand the London atmosphere so long as their chief enemy, which is not smoke, but dust, is kept at bay; and in well-watered thoroughfares this is done. Indeed, after what one reads about the devastation of country gardens by automobile dust, one might almost expect to find the plants coming to town for protection

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

REVISION OF THE STANDARD.

PRELIMINARY WORK AT AMERICAN ASSOCIATION MEETING.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

AS all well-posted breeders know, the American poultry standard of perfection calls for a revision every five years, which is now due two years hence. For the most part, this revision has more to do with the new breeds, where peculiarities and characteristics have not become settled and defined. And since there have been a number of new breeds admitted during the past few years, and still others whose champions are clamoring for their admission, it is not at all surprising that this was the principal business before the annual meeting of the American Poultry Association just held at Niagara Falls, N. Y. A committee was appointed consisting of the following specialists in poultry culture; J. H. Drevensted, Red Bank, N. J.; Theo. Hewes, Indianapolis, Ind.; William McNiel, London, Ont.; A. C. Smith, Waltham, Mass.; J. A. Tucker, Concord, Mich.; W. J. Russell, Ottumwa, Ia.; F. J. Marshall, College Park, Ga.; T. F. McGrew, Washington, D. C.; G. M. Curtis, Buffalo, N. Y., and F. L. Kimmey, Chicago. This committee will solicit opinions and suggestions from advanced breeders in all sections of the country. Since California leads in the Mediterranean class, and is heavily interested also in the American class, The Times could have wished a few California names on this committee.

In addition to the foregoing, many other topics were discussed, chief of which, at least to our readers, must be mentioned the "White Diarrhoea." Dr. L. H. Baldwin of Ontario, Can., thought it a disease of the kidneys. He is not quite satisfied as to what was the matter, but as what is called white diarrhoea is largely responsible for the mortality of incubator chicks and developed in his incubators greatly in late years, he is sure that investigation is needed on that point. He thinks now that when he imagined he was not ventilating the incubators enough and provided for more air, he increased the mortality, and so he is working on the supposition that a certain amount of carbon dioxide is necessary, and that it can be reduced too far. He finds that it is not only given off by the egg, but is present under the sitting hen in considerable quantity. He objected to a bacterial development as the primary cause of the disease, and said that though it could be proved to be present, it no doubt obtained its hold because the chick had already been weakened by some other attack.

Dr. George B. Morse of the Agricultural Department, Washington, D. C., agreed that the disease was not properly diarrhoea, but he had found so pronounced a bacterial condition in all the chicks that he had examined after they had died of the disease that he could not escape the conclusion that the difficulty was bacterial, and that it must be fought as such. He even found that where the chick proved vigorous enough to stand the attack and perhaps grow to quite good size, it was not uncommon for it to die of it over night after appearing to be quite well for some time. He described the life of this bacterial attack, using diagrams. As a remedy he recommended extreme purging, which would throw the parasites out of the lower intestine. This treatment was suggested by a similar one for human appendicitis, and if the microbe was suspected to be present in the hen and made its way into the egg, as he believed, the same treatment should be adopted with the hen.

On motion of Prof. Horace Atwood of the West Virginia Agricultural College, Morgantown, it was voted to ask the Department of Agriculture to pursue Dr. Morse's line of investigation thoroughly and see if this scourge of the incubators could not be stopped.

Some rather caustic criticisms were made because the standard of perfection took no cognizance of egg production, a Mrs. Allen creating a plethory of words in trying to maintain the argument that fine feathers had nothing to do with egg production; a warm debate was precipitated over the question of licensing judges, thus barring out all those who are not affiliated with the national body and capable of qualifying; the matter was postponed for one year, and in the meantime placed in the hands of a committee. Though there is a California branch of the American Poultry Association, enjoying a membership of over fifty, it is a matter or regret that the State was not represented by a single name in person.

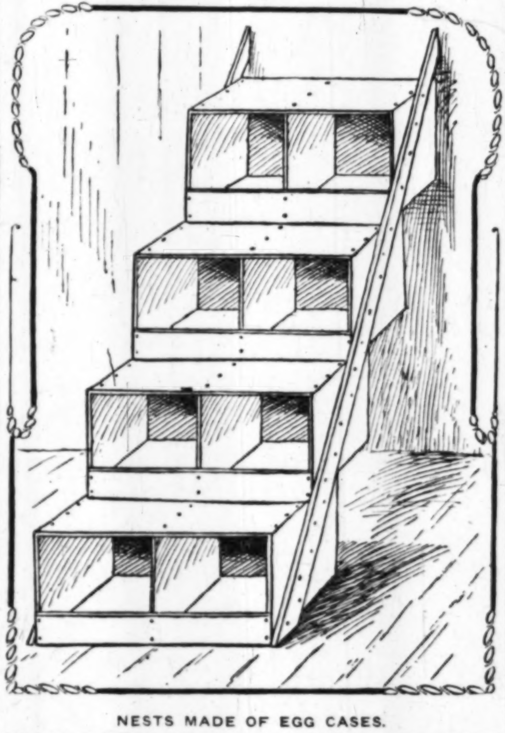
Egg Cases as Laying Nests.

A correspondent kindly furnishes this department with the accompanying outline sketch of a serviceable and cheap arrangement for laying nests, together with the following verbal description:

"Egg cases leaned against interior wall, staircase fashion. A small house lined in this manner will furnish a large number of nests, and if kept exclusively for laying will remain free from dung for an indefinite time. Chicks should not be allowed in this department, and for this reason entrance for the hens should be through a small door or opening several feet from the ground. The roosting house should be another room entirely. Also this laying-room is useless for setting purposes. A separate coop for each sitting hen with the bottom level so that the eggs cannot pile up, is best. In both cases nothing brighter than a 'dim religious light' should pervade."

Young Stock.

Do not put the young stock in with the old. The old hens will use force and keep the pullets waiting to eat, and away from choice bits; the pullets get into a nervous way of eating what is left, and can't thrive, and old hens can spend energy on better things. Fowls should be nervous enough to want exercise, but fear gets them over-nervous. Fear should be banished from the runs. The colonies should be made up as soon as one can judge of a fowl's merits, as young chicks rarely quarrel, and after being made up, if one fowl be chased at eating time, and not allowed a choice, it is because she is a weaker bird. She should be taken out for a run of weaker birds. If an old hen gets sick, the other hens pick her feathers and drive her; she will get strong much faster by being taken out by herself. When she goes back, she will be tackled and a fight must ensue, by which she can show valor. It is hens' nature to study precedence and fight for it, and fighting is against eggmaking.



NESTS MADE OF EGG CASES.

Fowls of equal attainments should be put in the same colonies early as possible, and peace will reign and make for eggs. With the ounce of prevention always at hand, the runs and pens being kept always clean, and good old stock in the young properly fed, there need be no sick fowls for hospitals. The young stock needs looking after closely. If a fowl does not respond to the feeding of the average fowl, she is either above or below average, and generally below. The few extra good specimens should go to the spring breeding pen, the pullets to the oldest sire and the cockerels to the old hens. The pullets below average may lay market eggs, and if kept for that, should be in a pen never visited by a male. By so doing, nobody can breed market eggs from poor hens. The hens lay just as well with no sire taking up their attention, and their eggs keep longer in the market. Only the first few years of starting does it pay to keep these below average pullets. We sell off the cockerels that are below the average, and also the average ones, keeping only the few above average.

When studying one's fowls, he should not constitute himself a judge. He should get out his copy of the Standard of Excellence and study the breed of his choice, described minutely in it, and endeavor to cull accordingly.

Guideposts Along the Poultry Way.

Pullets hatched during February, March, April and May should commence to do business during these fall months, provided always that they have been given proper care and nutritious food. Since we are going into the season when hen fruit brings a high price, it will be both timely and economic to get as many winter layers as possible. To do this, see that "coming in" pullets have plenty of fat-forming and muscle-making foods. The sooner they complete their growth and grow a new coat of feathers, the better and sooner will they lay. When you commence to cull throw out the poorest specimens you have grown, because they are of the least value to you, and ship to market in as fat a condition as possible. The good birds, those coming up to standard requirements, you should keep yourself. Touching males, there is no excuse for feeding surplus cockerels beyond their condition for selling—especially does this apply at a time when feed is high in price. After selecting those you want for producers and possibly a few specimens to sell to other poultrymen for breeding purposes, the remainder had be verted into cash at once.

In the matter of keeping old hens, the w ciates that many do not agree with him in poses. Healthy, vigorous hens will lay quite

ARVELOUS MEMORY OF THE LATE AINSWORTH R. SPOFFORD.

From New York Sun.

MAN who will be missed is Ainsworth R. Spofford, Librarian of Congress between the years 1864 and 1897, and from 1897 until his death in New phire the other day Chief Assistant Librarian of ress. All told, he had been attached to the Na- l Library in one capacity or another, but for the er part of the time as its head, for forty-six years, g been appointed to a place in the library by dent Lincoln in 1861.

will be missed by a good many different classes ople in Washington, but chiefly by the legislators. than a generation of Representatives in Congress, particularly the new fellows, were in the habit of g upon the brusque-mannered, book-absorbed Spof- . Yet during all the period, nearly half a century, h the librarian spent in Washington, nobody ever eded in finding out what his politics were.

s doubtful if he leaned toward any party. He was dent and keen critic of the game, but he never d into it to the extent of revealing even a symptom rtisanship.

difficulties underlying such neutrality may bet- e understood when it is stated that Republicans and crats alike in Congress lent ear to his wisdom they found themselves in tight pinches. He never unsolicited advice, but when he was approached by n desirous of profiting by his experience and coun- e never considered the party end of the proposi- but told what he thought of the situation in a ht-from-the-shoulder, take-it-or-leave-it manner could admit of no doubt as to his meaning.

did it make the slightest difference to him er his advice was followed or not. Probably Spof- ld not know, in one case out of a hundred, whether t his counsel had been adopted. He was that un- combination, a book-submerged man who was yet s in close touch with the doings of the world, but sidered the affair at an end when a public man him what he thought of a certain situation in poli- t the answer and went his way.

was well-beloved for his sound sense and his y and a certain quaintness of temperament and tion by a line of public men extending from Thad s to Theodore Roosevelt. He was considered one e most learned men in the world. He was the of last resort in Washington as to knotty points rliamentary procedure. He wrote a standard book t subject, and it was no unusual thing for Speak- the House like Blaine and Keifer and Crisp and rson and Cannon to ask Spofford to help them to el knotty parliamentary kinks that came up.

will be missed and mourned too by hundreds of ington young men whom he aided in getting an tion. He had a way of mapping out regular uni- y courses of reading for promising-appearing chaps introduced to him who could not afford to college and who did their studying in accord- with his directions after working hours. Scores who were put through the mill in this way Spofford's guidance have made good in many ars he will be remembered longer for his amaz- mory than for any other reason. He could not, s. d of Macaulay, remember the happenings on y when he was born, nor did he perform such lay feats as committing the whole of Milton or or the Bible to memory. Nevertheless it was Spofford by scholars both of this country and of that probably he possessed the most phenome- mory of any man that ever lived.

e they tested him, as they often did, and gers with friends, too, they found that he ontents of the book he had merely skimmed tly as if he'd spent a laborious week in read- only that, he'd even remember the number of the page on which a certain fact or figure, selected for the purpose of trying him out, was presented.

It made no difference whether the volume were a book of philosophy or a book of statistics, Spofford got the in'ards out of it by his skimming method as thoroughly as the reader who pondered the book for days. Even more astonishing, he could and did quote long passages, some of them in foreign languages; from books that he glanced over in this way.

The late Archbishop Chappelle and Spofford were close friends, although at different poles in the matter of religion. One day a number of years ago the Archbishop found the librarian hurriedly browsing in his accustomed manner through a new work by Ernest Renan.

Archbishop Chappelle, a courtly and affable Frenchman, waited until Spofford had tossed away the Renan volume. The Archbishop himself had read the Renan book with great care as soon as it issued from the press and was thoroughly familiar with its contents.

"Spofford," he said chaffingly to the nervous, jerky old librarian, "why do you waste your own and the government's valuable time in such an unsatisfactory, impossible pursuit?"

"Explain that, sir, explain it," said the old gentleman, wheeling in his quick, marionette-like way upon the Archbishop.

"I mean," said the Archbishop, "picking up a book that it took Renan about thirty years to write and professing, yes, sir, professing, to find out the meaning of it, say, within the space of ten minutes while standing first on one leg and then the other and flicking over its pages."

"Tush, tush, sir; I know every line of the book, every line of it, sir," replied the librarian. "One does not have to be a mole, sir, and bury himself in the ground to read a book, like you religionists."

With a smile the Archbishop picked up the discarded Renan volume, opened it at random, and asked Spofford what the Frenchman had to say with reference to a certain doctrinal subject.

To the Archbishop's everlasting astonishment Spofford repeated in French, and almost word for word, Renan's views as to the matter about which Chappelle had inquired. Carrying the test further, the Archbishop, in the manner of an examiner, took the librarian smack through the difficult volume, only to find at the end of the test that the librarian, who had only picked up the book a little while before in wandering through the aisles, had every part of the book as pat as if he'd been poring over it in a study for days and weeks.

Tom Reed, a man who always had to be shown, used to take keen delight in exhibiting Spofford's phenomenal powers of memory to incredulous friends. Upon an occasion Reed strolled into the old library in the Capitol to see Spofford about something or other. He had to prowl all over the place before he came upon the librarian, who, standing near a window, was skimming over the pages of a three-volume "Life and Letters" of Charles James Fox, the British statesman, that had just been issued from the press.

Reed tackled Spofford about the thing he had in mind, but the librarian didn't even see him, much less hear him. He went right along brushing over the pages of the volumes about Fox.

Reed, who was then Speaker, smiled his Chinese smile and wandered back to the House of Representatives. He knew there was no use trying to get anything out of Spofford while the librarian was "reading" a book.

Reed made a careful note of the work he had seen Spofford absorbing on that occasion, and he got the book and read it himself with considerable care. Two years later he walked in upon Spofford, accompanied by some friends from Maine, one day, and said to him:

"Spofford, I'm interested in this Fox fellow, the English Premier, you know. Tremendous gambler, wasn't he? Where can I get some facts about his gambling? Was his gambling exaggerated?" and a slew of questions of similar import.

Spofford named, offhand, the biography of Fox that Reed had himself seen the librarian skimming two years before in which the matter of Fox's gambling habits was dwelt upon exhaustively. Then he summarized, in about four or five hundred words, the gist of what the biography had set forth as to Fox's gambling habits, giving the amounts of great sums that Fox was said in that work to have won or lost at hazard on certain occasions.

Reed and his friends listened attentively, and then when they returned to the Speaker's room, Reed sent for the biography of Fox. He turned to the part of it which dealt with Fox's gambling methods and showed his visitors that every fact and figure that had been quoted by the librarian in his short summary was exact to a dot.

Once the late Senator George Vest of Missouri got into a discussion with a southern friend as to the production of cotton in the South immediately before and immediately after the Civil War. The discussion took place in the Senator's rooms, and he had no books of reference from which to ascertain the desired facts.

"I'll call up Spofford and ask him; he'll know," said the Senator, and he went to the telephone and got the librarian on the wire.

"See here, Spofford," said Senator Vest through the phone, "there's a crazy man down here at my place who pretends to know something about cotton, but he doesn't know any more about cotton figures than I do about the wool production of the Falkland Islands. What I want to know is this: How much cotton did this country produce in the year 1859 and in the year 1869?"

Spofford named the two amounts in bales without leaving the phone. Not only that, but he named the number of bales exported each year and the number of bales kept at home for domestic consumption.

"I don't know what we're going to do up at the Capitol when that old boy dies," said Senator Vest, hanging up the receiver. "All the same, I'm going to check him up on this," and he made a note of the figures Spofford had given him.

On the following day, when he went to the Capitol, Senator Vest looked into a book of reference and found that the cotton figures Spofford had given him in that offhand fashion over the phone were correct to a bale.

The old librarian, always a man of great modesty, never made the slightest display of his vast fund of information, and he was annoyed when he saw that friends of his were seeking to make a sort of show of his feats of memory. One day a new and somewhat unsalted western Representative in Congress brushed into the old library with a party of friends, tourists from his State, and espying the librarian, winked at his guests and broke out upon the library's chief something after this fashion:

"Spofford, quick, now, in what year was the Edict of Nantes revoked and in what year did the Emperor Vespasian die and what did he die of, and in what year did Montgolfier first go up in a balloon, and how many northern men were killed at the Battle of Chancellorsville, and what was the production of wheat in this country in the year 1888—quick, now, old fellow! I want to show these chaps something."

Probably no Representative in Congress, young or old, before or since, ever was regarded with a more shriveling stare than Librarian Spofford bestowed upon this one while he was firing off his foolish lot of questions, and then the old gentleman turned on his heel and strode away in the opposite direction.

The vast store of information he possessed was available for anybody who really wanted it and needed it, but this was not the only occasion upon which he declined to permit unsalted specimens to make a rare show of him.

NEGROES GOING TO LONDON.

ABSENCE OF RACE PREJUDICE MAKES LIFE PLEASANT THERE.

[Kansas City Star:] England is being invaded by American negroes, who suddenly have realized that they suffer in that country from none of the disabilities attaching to their race and color in the United States. Thousands of them have gone there in the last year or two and thousands more are going. The invasion began in force about a year ago. The first negroes to go were variety artists and athletes, who found that they were well treated there. They stayed and wrote to their friends across the water to follow on. A few went last year, but the rush has begun this year and within the last few months there are almost as many black faces to be seen on the Strand and in Piccadilly as on Broadway.

It is hard to obtain any estimate of the actual numbers of American negroes now in England. An official of the American embassy declares that last winter the embassy had hundreds of applications from negro citizens of the United States, who were stranded in England, to be sent home. The embassy, of course, has no funds for this purpose, but the officials did what they could to help and many who went over to capture the variety stage in England worked their way home in the stokeholds of tramp steamers sailing to Baltimore or New Orleans.

This year, the same official declares, there are at least 5000 American negroes in England and 4000 of them arrived this year. A trip to some of the leading watering-places on the English coast will lead one to think that the estimate is much smaller than the actual number. The "busker" is an institution at Margate, Ramsgate, Southend and other watering-places where the Londoners of the middle and working classes run down for the week-end or for a few days' holiday. The "busker" usually is a broken-down actor or music-hall man who makes his living singing and dancing on the sands, depending on the generosity of the holiday-makers for his reward. The native "busker" has been almost driven off the sands by the American negro.

The "black-face" comedian act long has been a favorite with the "buskers," but the "comedians" were white men made black by liberal applications of burnt cork. This year the black men are the real thing, and the "entertainment" which they offer has changed. Instead of the sentimental ditties of the London music halls the "buskers" are rendering the "coon songs" of New York and Chicago and the "nigger melodies" of the plantation days. The sentimental semi-military songs, so popular in America about the time of the Spanish-American War, are also great favorites at present on the Margate sands.

The negro comedian also has made his way into some of the lower-class music halls in London and the provincial towns. He has not succeeded in gaining much of a foothold in the better London halls, for the reason that he has little to recommend him except his color and a certain sweetness of voice, and the London audiences are critical.

There is no prejudice among the lower class home-staying Englishmen and women against the negro. The colonial Englishman regards him much as the American does, but to the cockney or his prototype of the provincial cities every man whose skin is not white is a "native." He draws no distinction between the negro and the high-class Hindoo, and receives them both on terms of perfect equality. He will eat with the negro, drink with him, and the women will go even further, they will marry him.

A negro quarter, although not very well defined, is already springing up in London. It lies in Soho among the tangle of narrow streets inhabited by men of every nationality under the sun, except English, and there are one or two restaurants where fried chicken, sweet corn and other delicacies dear to the negro's heart can be obtained. Another center is in the maze of courts and alleys behind Fleet street.

Farming in California—The Land and Its Products.

FIELD NOTES.

Honest Fruit Packing.

THE jealous or disgruntled often give out the word that even the bucolic citizens of the State are more given to assertions than works, much less the professional boosters and land agents who are accredited with nothing but high-sounding claims. But occasionally the criticisms of our friends in the East who insist on remaining there, are confounded by facts published in eastern papers. A case comes up in the assertion of great trades journal that the California lemon is driving out the Sicily lemon because the former are honestly packed, while the latter are not. Gradually the lemon-packing business has been getting into ideal shape, whether in the hands of a well-managed association and large individual growers, and these eastern papers do say our lemons are of uniform size and of excellent quality. For which nice and helpful praise we are grateful. I know there are many California boomers who do not confine themselves to the truth, but as long as our orchard products are packed in the best style and of merchantable quality those who send out overwrought statements cannot do the harm they could otherwise. We certainly have an honest lot of lemon packers, and the paper to which I refer makes the work of these men the basis for the prediction that the Sicily lemon cannot again seriously interfere with California fruit in the interior of the North American continent.

Apropos to the above, the following is taken from a New York dispatch to the Chicago Packer of August 29:

"There was another eruption in the Sicily lemon trade this week, and by Friday night it looked as though there was going to be a big split in the New York Fruit Exchange. The importers are on the rampage, and out of all the gossip which has been floating around for the past few days has come considerable information as to the present standing of several of the heretofore shining lights in the business. The trouble started over a circular which President Zorn of the New York Fruit Exchange sent out last Saturday. Mr. Zorn did not send out the circular in an official capacity, but as a broker. The letter went to his customers. It roasted to a dark brown turn Sicily lemons, their shippers and importers. It said that the American public was getting tired of buying trash and the jobbers were sick of paying for dishonest and undersized boxes containing lemons in size from a cantaloupe down to a walnut. There was quite a lot to the circular."

Argentine Ant.

I HAVE been handed a clipping from a Southern California paper stating that a scientific authority in San Bernardino county has discovered that the so-called Argentine ant is just the common ant that gnawed bacon of the 49'ers. It is a common ant all right, for it is found all over the State, but as to its not being what Prof. Woodworth pronounces it, is one of the absurdities that crops out occasionally to surprise us. In the first place, Woodworth's word should be accepted in the identification of insects. In addition to his identification the species has been determined by the ant authority of the United States, and by many other competent authorities. So distinct a species is this Argentine visitor that it can be identified by an entomologist as surely as a farmer could pick out a burro from a band of horses, or a vegetable grower remove a weed from his cabbage.

Free Statistics.

SOME months ago I published the number of bearing trees for 1906. These statistics showed 32,700,000 orchard trees and 315,000 acres of vines of bearing age. But figures of this class are not good very long in this State, where planting is so constant and extensive. I will now give the number of citrus trees as shown by the County Assessors' reports for the entire State. Of bearing orange trees there are 7,805,500; non-bearing, 1,847,573—a total of 9,653,073, or approximating 100,000 acres. Of lemons the returns show 1,253,815 in bearing and 202,819 non-bearing—a total of 1,456,634, approximating 15,000 acres. The total of orange and lemon trees shows 11,109,707. These figures are given out by the State Board of Equalization, and are accurate, barring the fact that several hundred thousand may have been overlooked by the Assessors.

Before becoming fearsome over this report and jumping to the conclusion that before long a dozen million citrus trees will be producing 60,000 carloads of fruit at two boxes to the tree, it should be known how many of these trees are not bearing each a hatful of fruit. It would be interesting to know how many of these trees are deteriorating, and how many have been planted where they will now produce a full crop, before we engage in a prediction of overproduction. As an offset to increased tonnage we may expect better transportation service and an immense gain through wider distribution. Even with all these offsets there are some who will insist that we are reaching the marketing limits. It certainly looks like California will be justified, when tariff revision comes along, in claiming that protection of citrus fruits is necessary and that the amount of it if increased will not more than give our State a fair show when the distance of the market is considered.

Florida Organization.

I READ lately in a coast fruit journal that the fruit growers of Florida are joining an association for the purpose of eliminating the middlemen and "blood suckers" that abound in the southeast, and for securing just freight rates. The company proposes to establish a central distributing agency and have a few paid representatives in the principal markets of the country. Unlike the great association of California citrus growers, the members of the Florida organization are not obliged to market their fruit through their own agency. This would appear to be a fatal feature of the plan, as it has wrecked many coöperative movements all over the country. How the management can pay their agents in the principal markets when it cannot depend upon any fruit to handle is more than the experienced Californian can figure out. It is also puzzling to know how the products of a great fruit State are to be handled by a $10,000 corporation.

Barium Poison in Plants.

A CONCLUSION upon the subject of loco weed poisoning has been reached of peculiar interest to the stockmen of the southwest. It is that the loco effect upon the stock is caused by the presence of barium in the weed. The principal loco plants are Astragalas mollissimus and Aragallus lamberti, two very common productions of the southwestern wilds. So damaging have been these weeds and others upon the ranges that the Bureau of Plant Industry has spent years in trying to locate the trouble, finding it a very puzzling problem. By taking extracts of the above-named loco weeds and giving them to rabbits and other animals it was found by elimination of the elements contained that barium caused the manifestations known as loco. Whether this discovery can be used in any way to mitigate the death rate of stock remains to be determined.

Colorado has spent over $425,000 in the attempt to eradicate loco weeds in the last nine years. The loss in this State in one year from loco was about $120,000, and the trouble is found in over a dozen States, all lying west of the Missouri River. Were it not for the fact that animals acquire the habit of eating these poisonous plants, the loss would be greatly reduced wherever the more nutritious food plants are found. The greatest ravages ever reported from one section occurred in Southwestern Kansas, where 25,000 cattle died in one season from eating loco weed.

Paper Removal.

THE CALIFORNIA FRUIT GROWER issued its first number from the new office at San Francisco on the 5th. Immediately following the great fire, the proprietor of this journal reëstablished it at Sacramento, where it has since been located until the removal. It has been dresed in a new face and given a beautiful font of headline, and is very much improved in every way. The readers of the fruit grower should appreciate the fine appearance of the California Fruit Grower.

Dr. Howard Coming.

DR. L. O. HOWARD, chief of the Bureau of Entomology is on his way to California where his visits have been less frequent than his friends would have them. I have not been informed of the nature of his work out here, but he has promised to give the State Insectary an examination. Dr. Howard is in favor of stricter quarantine against the importation of infected plants throughout the whole United States, and is doing all he can to bring about better service in the inspection of plants brought into the country both by private and public enterprise. A visit from the chief entomologist of "Uncle Jim's" department is an event worth remembering, and I am specially interested in this one because Dr. Howard will pass opinion upon the State Insectary recently finished at Sacramento.

The Country's Apple Crop.

THE late figures given out by the Apple Growers Congress Committee appointed for that purpose has compiled figures from twenty-eight States showing the percentage of a full crop to be very low. Only California, Oregon, Washington and Idaho show a full crop, Illinois returning only 10 per cent. of a normal output. The average for the twenty-eight States is about 46 per cent., or less than one-half a crop. Arkansas, another great apple State, shows a deficiency of 90 per cent. If these figures are accurate the citrus growers of California should look for less than ordinary competition from apples. Watsonville expects 3500 carloads, or more than double the output of last year. The report shows, however, that the average quality of the fruit throughout the country is better than usual, though the immense deficiency in quantity cannot be overcome by that. There is little discouragement to the citrus growers in the apple outlook.

Cotton Boll Weevil.

IN pursuance of The Times' policy of giving all the news from everywhere, and in reference to a particular dispatch from El Centro, I wish to state that the only way cotton seed can be legally brought into California is by direct consignment to the State Commissioner of Horticulture, Sacramento, the State quarantine office at the Ferry Building, San Francisco, or to the boards of horticulture at El Centro, Riverside, Los Angeles, San Diego, Santa Barbara, Ventura and Santa Ana. This list is broad enough to cover all the territory liable to be experimenting with cotton planting. This quarantine order has been made at the request of the Bureau of Plant Industry, Washington, agent devoted to the introduction of new ties. No known infection of the boll weevil the west, and the cotton growers should be seed. The fumigation prescribed by the Widows' Friend.

HE following bug story was read before the Pacific Coast Nurserymen's Association at Yakima a few weeks ago by its author, C. A. Chambers of sno:

"Every one on this coast or any other coast, for that tter, knows or has heard of I. H. Thomas of Visalia, herwise termed the 'Widows' Friend.' Mr. Thomas quired this alias on account of his method at the d of the nursery season of giving away to every dow that applied to him all the nursery stock he had over from the season's sales. Mr. Thomas at that e was a heavy grower of nursery stock. Mr. Thomas me to Fresno one day and wore on the lapel of his a large beetle which of course had been properly balmed and mounted to resemble a stick pin. As he s walking down the streets of Fresno, the local horltural commissioner in office at the time, approached Thomas on the street and wanted to know what the tle was he was wearing so prominently on his coat. Thomas is a practical joker, he told the bug man t the beetle he wore was of the species known in the egory of bugology as 'Sic Semper Trifoliata,' a beetle ich was destroying the peach orchards of Kern ntry by defoliating the leaves and otherwise destroy the crop and trees. Well, our inspector got busy the spot and told Thomas if this was the case he st remove the beetle, as it made no difference whether "animal" was dead or alive, he must remove the e; that he did not propose to take any chances on ring this terrible insect introduced into this county. omas insisted that the beetle was harmless inasmuch it was embalmed and mounted. Our inspector made contention that the beetle might contain eggs or rvae, which might possibly hatch and come forth, and therefore demanded very emphatically that it be rned, stick pin and all, to be on the safe side. Mr. omas objected to such a procedure, and did not want bug destroyed after he had gone to the trouble of ring it preserved and mounted. The inspector inted that the bug must be destroyed, but Thomas was tinate and would not listen to the demands made by inspector. What was the outcome? Mr. Inspector ed up a spray pump, installed it on a sled, loaded with a liberal dose of lime, sulphur and salt and drove und town trying to locate Mr. Thomas. He in due rse of time was located sitting in front of one of sno's leading hotels sleeping quietly and perhaps aming about his bug companion. Without saying a rd or before Thomas had time to wake up and rebel, Horticultural Commissioner sprayed Thomas from d to foot, and particularly on his shirt bosom, with contents of the spray pump. The 'Sic Semper Trifota' bug 'got his,' and at the same time our friend omas got his whiskers shampooed, impressing him h the fact that he could not carry on his person any gerous bug, limburger cheese, asafetida pills or thing that might disturb the peace of this country."

Berry Specialty.

SMALL but high-grade strawberry business is profitably carried on by a young New York business man who owns a small farm in New Jersey. The spety is selling strawberry plants in bearing condition in pots like house plants. These full-grown potted nts are in demand for table decoration, and are sold 2 each or more.

The Marshall variety is preferred because of its wy appearance when in fruit. The runners are pot in July, and by the first of August are mature ugh to separate from the plant and transfer to larger s in which they are to be grown. A rich, light soil sed for potting, the same as for house plants. The ted plants are set in cold frames where they may be ded after easily and supplied with water of which y need large amounts. The runners are carefully ched off. There is a brisk demand for the bearing nts around the Christmas season. Plants of the right e for this trade are brought into the greenhouse about middle of October. They are set in the greense at a temperature of about 45 degrees, and the t is raised about 5 degrees each week until it reaches summer heat. If plants are not needed for decoion purposes the berries are sold at $7 or $8 per t. Six to eight potted plants are expected to yield one quart of berries. Each berry is wrapped in ue paper and packed in one-third quart baskets. nts are also sold in considerable numbers for the er trade, but they are not transferred to the greenses until about two months before wanted for sale.—merican Cultivator.

lifornia Coffee.

NOTHER horticultural dream comes from Ventura ounty in the form of a story from Oxnard that Mr. es Leonard has discovered coffee growing in the ija Cañon. The account says: "The trees are six eight feet high, and have every appearance of coffee found in Brazil, Porto Rico and the Philippine ds. They are scattered over the mountains, and alled 'yerba ossa' by the Mexicans, who have never nded them with coffee trees of tropical climates. e sixteenth century a group of Spanish adventurers Matilija Cañon and tributary country, and they many signs of their visit. It is thought that the trees are descendants of some planted at that

This is of course a cock-and-bull story. The plant is ed "California coffee," a species of rhamnus, which ived tenderfeet ever since mining times. It has no relationship whatever to the true tropical coffee. The Mexicans apparently know more than the people who come after them to tell such stories.—[Rural Press.

The Charlemagne Rose Tree.

THE most venerable rose tree in existence is said to bloom against the ancient church of Hildesheim in Germany. Notwithstanding the many parties which at different times have been in the ascendency, they all seem to have respected and tended the rose tree, which it is said was planted by Charlemagne. The trunk is now almost as big as a man's body. There are five principal limbs trained against the church, the tree being protected by iron railings inclosing an area of about twenty square feet. The rude German soldiers in early ages tended the tree, Catholics and Protestants, in turn masters of the town, drained the ground, the soldiers of Turenne fastened up the branches with clamps and those of Napoleon, a century and a half later, erected the railings.—[Rural Press.

Rust-Resistant Asparagus.

IN RECENT years asparagus culture has been seriously threatened by rust, which comes on after the beds have been well established, and by gradually weakening the plants results in great loss to the grower and in the ultimate destruction of the plants. The disease has been particularly severe in the New England States, where asparagus is grown as a profitable industry. It is also severe in other sections, especially on the Pacific Coast, where some success has been secured in the matter of its prevention, probably owing largly to favorable climatic conditions. All efforts to control the disease in the East through the usual methods of spraying and similar treatments have met with indifferent success. It seemed desirable, therefore, that attempts should be made to secure types of asparagus which would be able to resist the rust. To this end collections of asparagus have been made from various sections of the world, and in coöperation with the Massachusetts Agricultural Experiment Station work has been inaugurated in the matter of securing rust-resistant types.

The particular matter to which we wish to call attention now is the result of hybridizing conducted by Mr. Oliver with a species of South African asparagus secured by David Fairchild, which seems to be rust-resistant. This South African species (asparagus virgatus) it is claimed has some other advantages over our types. The young growths are edible even when a foot high, and although the stalks are more slender than those of our cultivated types, this variety will probably prove a valuable addition to our stock of horticultural crops. Successful hybrids have been secured between the South African species and various varieties of our own asparagus. The ability of these plants to resist rust is yet to be determined, but the fact that we have secured the hybrids and that these hybrids, so far as appearances go, give every indication of possessing qualities of value, is worthy of note. Various crosses have also been made between different varieties of our own asparagus to determine the question of rust resistance.—[Yearbook of Department of Agriculture, 1907.

The Bureau of Plant Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture has just issued a bulletin upon factors affecting the keeping quality of table grapes while in transit and cold storage. During the past seven years the bureau has conducted investigations to determine these factors, its work having included also apples, pears, peaches, plums and oranges. It is declared that it has been shown that the different kinds of molds which cause the most common forms of decay in these fruits while in transit and in storage are unable to penetrate the sound, normal skin of the fruit. These molds generally gain entrance through mechanical abrasions produced in the preparation of the fruit for market.

During the past two years the storage investigations have been extended to the table-grape industry of California. The preliminary investigations have shown that most of the injuries to grapes in handling occur at the point where the berry joins the stem—the pedicel. Other forms of injury are broken and cracked berries produced by rough handling or excessive squeezing in packing. The pedicel breaks are perhaps the most difficult to control, especially in tender varieties. The simple bending of a berry to one side may cause a break at the pedicel, frequently so slight as to be nearly invisible but sufficient to allow the entrance of the mold. These broken berries under proper conditions of heat and moisture will show mold in a few days. After the mold has started it will continue to develop and spread in the ordinary grape package even at a temperature near the freezing point.

It has been shown that one of the most important factors in the successful handling of fruits either in storage or in transit is quick shipment or quick cooling after the fruit is harvested. The sooner the fruit can be cooled after it leaves the tree or vine the longer time it will continue in first-class condition. This is especially true where there are any appreciable mechanical injuries in handling. It has been shown with oranges, for example, that after a delay in shipping or cooling for two to four days, the decay in transit may be from two to five times greater than under immediate shipment or cooling, depending upon the amount of mechanical injury in the fruit. These factors of quick shipment and quick cooling are likely to be as important and perhaps more important with grapes than they are with oranges, for the reason that the ordinary grape package offers ideal moisture conditions for the development of molds and if the proper heat conditions are present molds are almost sure to occur.—[San José Mercury.

The Cost of a Calf.

IN an experiment to ascertain the cost of raising a calf, Prof. Shaw, of Michigan Station, took a dairy calf and kept an accurate account of the expense of feeding for one year from its birth. The amount of feeds used in that time were 381 pounds of whole milk, 2568 pounds of skim milk, 1262 pounds of silage, 219 pounds of beet pulp, 1254 pounds of hay, 1247 pounds of grain, 147 pounds of roots, 14 pounds of alfalfa meal and 50 pounds of green corn. The grain ration consisted of three parts each of corn and oats and one part of bran and oil meal. At the end of the year the calf weighed 800 pounds at a cost of $28.55 for feed. The calf was a Holstein.—[Rural Press.

China, a Collection of Nations.

China is not a nation in the sense in which we ordinarily use the word. If we picture to ourselves the countries of Europe, with their different languages and different customs, drawn together into a loose confederation under the government of a conquering race, we shall have some small conception of what this Chinese "nation" really is. The peoples of these different European countries are Caucasians; the different peoples of China are all Mongolians. These Chinese peoples speak eighteen or twenty distinct languages, each divided into almost innumerable dialects and subdialects. They are governed by Manchu, or Tartar, conquerors who spring from a different stock, wear different costumes, and speak among themselves a language wholly different from any of the eighteen or twenty native tongues.—[Success Magazine.

NIGHT.

Softly night is coming down,
  Daylight fades away;
Silent darkness spreads around,
  Shutting out the day.

Struggle, stress and tumult, all
  Slowly cease, while rest
Lets its mantle slowly fall,

Though each morn new promise brings
  Urging one to strife,
Yet the night's sweet sheltering wings
  Bars out the noisome life.

The Infection Fallacy.

"INFECTIOUS AND PARASITIC DISEASES" is the title of a book by Millard Langfield, A.B., M.D., of Johns Hopkins University. (P. Blakiston's Son & Co., 1012 Walnut street, Philadelphia. Price $1.25 net.)

The publishers in their announcement of this book, said that effort had been made to avoid speculation and adhere only to accepted doctrines. A perusal of the volume leaves no doubt in the mind of the reader as to the truth of this statement. The regular old-fashioned errors in regard to the infectiousness of certain diseases, and the germ origin of disease are cheerfully swallowed by the author without a grimace. He tells us how infection may be spread by means of insects such as flies, bedbugs, mosquitoes, etc., also that persons may convey infections, all of which statements tend to increase the wonder as to how it is that anybody manages to escape disease, a natural inquiry which the medical fraternity is utterly unable to answer. It is true the author tells his readers that you need not be afraid of passing a house where "contagious" disease exists. This is somewhat consoling, as otherwise we should all have to leave town and take to the woods when Mrs. Jones's grandchild has the measles.

We are also told that "no matter what the exciting cause of a disease may be, it invariably and primarily comes from without the body." This is absolutely false. Except in cases of poisoning, or of a skin disease, brought about by actual contact, all disease originates from within. It is merely an effort of nature to throw off impurities, an effort which the medical fraternity endeavors to check by the use of poisonous drugs.

A list of specific diseases of known and of unknown origin is given. There are as many in one column as in the other, a fact which would appear to suggest more modesty on the part of the medical fraternity in attacking these diseases, the cause of which they admit they don't know.

The author is forced to admit that the degrees and termination of infectious disease is determined well-nigh entirely by the reactionary or fighting powers of the body. Why not, then, give the body a chance? He also admits that fever is "benign and a necessary feature" in this class of diseases. Why, then, try to suppress it?

Here is a glimpse of reason:

"It is a matter of common observation that of a number of individuals exposed to the same infectious disease not all are attacked, and that in those susceptible the disease presents extraordinary variations as regards its mildness or severity. If the microbe were the sole factor concerned, all exposed individuals would be attacked, and all attacked would suffer to the same degree; a thing which every one knows never happens." Sure, Mike!

Prof. Langfeld strongly recommends heat as a disinfectant in preference to chemicals. He says that moist heat is a far more efficient destroyer of germ life than dry heat, because it has greater powers of penetration.

Reference is made to the wonderful freedom of the Jews from infectious diseases. He shows that fewer Jews are subject to pulmonary tuberculosis than gentiles, and that Asiatic cholera is so rare among them as to lead some authors to doubt that it ever occurs. They also suffer less from animal parasites than other races. This is to be expected when we remember that for thousands of years the Jews have followed the hygienic laws of Moses, keeping themselves clean and avoiding filthy food.

The author notes that among cattle Jerseys are more subject to tuberculosis than other breeds. Why? Because the Jersey, more than any other cow, is pampered and made a pet, and lives an unnatural life.

The author holds out the danger that some day the oriental plague may swoop down upon us and become a raging pestilence. Nonsense. The plague is a filth disease, and can only become epidemic where there is much filth for it to feed upon. Besides, the contagiousness of the plague, like that of other diseases, is a myth. One of the worst epidemics of the plague in modern times was that at Alexandria, in Egypt, in 1835, which destroyed 9000 persons in that city. Yet, the importation of cotton from government warehouses was never interrupted, although the plague was most destructive in those very places. The cotton was loaded on English and other ships without any precautions whatever, nevertheless no case of plague is known to have occurred among the quarantine officers or others engaged in unloading these ships or disinfecting other cargoes in quarantine.

As to malaria, we are, of course, told the tiresome superstition about it being only caused by a mosquito, whereas it is on the contrary, as its name implies, the result of emanations from swamps, or filthy stagnant pools. Clean out the filth on which the mosquitoes feed and the malaria will disappear, not because the mosquitoes have gone, but because the filth upon which they fed has been removed.

The author properly criticises our manner of disposal of sewage, in regard to which he says:

"In the matter of disposal of sewage we are still barbarians, if not criminals; and the indifference with which the public views the pollution of its water supply by alvine discharges is a shame to our much-vaunted civilization. In fact, it is little short of miraculous that a stop has not been put to it long ago, when one considers the wide publicity given to the actual and possible dangers of such a filthy and obnoxious practice. But it is permitted to go on, with the result that there is scarcely a city or town that does not drink water which is polluted by the sewage of another city; and the former places in turn pour their disease-carrying waste into other rivers and lakes which supply the drinking water to still other communities."

He also properly declares that steps should be taken to illegalize the use of human excrement for fertilizer, unless it has been made innocuous by some proved method. He also calls attention to the necessity of cleanliness among those who gather berries. He urges that men with gonorrhoea should not marry until cured, and he very properly refers to the awful danger of eye infection from this all-too prevalent disease.

An illustrated chapter is devoted to a description of various bugs—animal parasites, from the common hair louse and bedbug to the African Guinea worm and other types that are less familiar to us occidentals.

The contents of this book serve to show how deeply modern medicine is sunk in the errors of superstition. The medical fraternity has gone crazy on "bacteriology," and so has wandered into dark and devious ways that remind one of middle-age superstition. If, as frequently stated here, these "bugs" were one thousandth part as dangerous to the human race as the medical fraternity would have us believe, then most assuredly the whole of mankind would have been swept off the earth thousands of years ago, for to quarantine successfully against the emanations from a sick person, if those emanations are "catching," is as abrudly impossible as it would be to quarantine against the perfume from "the flowers that bloom in the spring." The whole system of medicine is based upon a gross and inexcusable misapprehension of the nature of disease, and that again is largely due to the absurd development of the bacteriology mania. Prof. H. W. Wiley, the chief chemist of the United States Agricultural Department, recently said:

"A man may drink a glass of typhoid germs if he is in vigorous health and may not get typhoid fever, because his system may throw off the poison. If he is broken down, however, one of the germs will get hold of him and produce ulceration and typhoid."

Prof. Wiley was right, as far as he went, but he should have gone further, and have declared that there are no such things as typhoid fever "germs"—or the germ of any other disease. These germs are not the cause, but an effect of disease, just as maggots are an effect of rotting meat.

How many thousands of years will it take the doctors to comprehend these simple facts? Just now it looks as if we had not quite reached the limit of the infection mania. At the recent Congress of the American Medical Association in Chicago a physician declared that very few diseases are not contagious including pneumonia, colds and other ailments, against all of which he said a quarantine should be enforced. This shows what we might expect if the "regular" medical fraternity could obtain a little more political power. We should not be able to call our bodies, our minds, or our souls our own. And yet some people call this a free country.

A Feast or a Famine.

AS previously suggested here, the California farmer usually has to confront a feast or a famine. It always has been so, since fifty years ago, when potatoes sold one year at a dollar a pound, and the next year at 10 cents a sack, the sacks costing 25 cents apiece, and it probably always will be so. Whenever a farmer begins to raise a pound of products more than he or his animals can consume he has to meet the marketing question, and then his troubles begin. The railroad and the middleman take most of the oyster, leaving him little more than the shell.

It is reported that the American Wine Association will this season offer grape growers only $6 a ton for their fruit, which is just about enough to pay for the expense of cultivating and gathering. In Imperial Valley this year hundreds of tons of fine muskmelons rotted on the ground. In other parts of Southern California

In the San Joaquin Valley a widow who has been trying to support herself and child by raising a crop of onions and potatoes on ir little piece of land, is, like many of her neighbors, nable to dispose of the crop, and most of it is going to aste. She will now have to hunt for a job before xt winter, instead of being supported by the land, al- ough her wants are exceedingly small.

Meantime, while this is going on, the consumer has pay a rattling good price for products of the soil. Cleft Palate.

CORRESPONDENT writes to tell of good work done for her little girl (who had a cleft palate) by the n of the dental college of the University of Southern alifornia. She was a poor woman and unable to pay medical services. The child had been examined by surgeon who had suggested that it was one for dental her than surgical work. The little girl was greatly ieved, for she was dreading a painful operation, and often wished that "God had finished her mouth and de it like other people's."

velopment of Osteopathy.

HE development of the osteopathic method of aiding nature to restore health has been nothing short marvelous. In the September Cosmopolitan was an en-page illustrated article by Belle Case Harrington criptive of osteopathy. The author shows that fifn years ago there was only one osteopath in the rld. Today there are eight well-equipped colleges of opathy in the United States, and their graduates rere legal recognition, either by direct legislation or by icial decision, in over thirty States of the Union. re than 5000 osteopathic physicians are now practing in the United States, Canada, Cuba, the Philips, England, Ireland, and other parts of the contit. Osteopaths are employed as examining physis by more than 100 insurance companies, and many et-railway and other corporations in large cities rely n the judgment of their osteopathic advisers in the tlement of personal-injury cases.

Theodore P. Shonts, when chairman of the Isthmian al Commission, took an osteopathic physician with to the canal zone; C. Oliver Iselin, of cup-defender e, retains an osteopath regularly in his employ; ge Springer of Idaho, is one of the stanchest champs of the science; while many other of the country's inent people are proud to testify to the efficacy of drugless system of healing.

ollowing is an extract from the article:

Some of the cures which osteopathy has effected e been truly marvelous. Paralysis, where there is rious involvement of the spinal cord, is often cured this mode of treatment. A recent case which atted much attention was that of a man who was lly paralyzed from the waist downward. He was ght to the osteopathic hospital a year and a half . A daily treatment was administered, and at the of six months he had regained control of the bodfunctions, and was able to walk about on crutches. months later he used only a cane, and now he to walk short distances without any assistance ver, with the prospect of complete and permanent ation to health within the next few months.

ndreds of cripples have been cured by osteopathy. int disease, that menace of childhood, is readily ble to treatment if taken before the disease bes too firmly settled. Both muscular and sciatic atism have been repeatedly cured, and many other ilities can be lessened, though not wholly re-phthalmic goiter, a disease considered almost ally fatal by the medical fraternity, yields most ly to osteopathic treatment. The method followed ustment of the upper ribs and the correction of the cervical vertebrae, in which areas lesions involve nervous mechanism of the thyroid gland are frequently found.

ronic dysentery, flux, and the intestinal disorders n to childhood can be relieved quickly and perly by the seeming sleight-of-hand of which the path is master. In fact, nearly all the diseases of od yield readily to osteopathic treatment. Conn of twenty years' standing can be entirely re, though the curative process may require as many s the number of years the disease has existed. ildbirth, if two months' preliminary treatment given, is rendered safe and comparatively painlerations and kindred evils being practically unn under the osteopathic treatment.

cases of asthma of long standing have been ly relieved by this treatment. In fact, one of doctor's first and most spectacular cures was upon an asthmatic patient. He was driving country road when he came to a dooryard in a group of excited people. In their midst an, propped up in a chair, fairly fighting for His friends looked on helplessly, apparently ng death at any moment. Dr. Still saw at once man was suffering from asthma. He brushed nders aside and striding up to the sufferer he examine and manipulate the spine, giving the man almost instant relief. Friends looked on, incredulous, while the rescued man exclaimed: 'My God! What have you done? I didn't suppose any one but the Almighty could ease me like that.' The average practitioner, however, does not expect such quick results. As a rule, the best effect is not obtained by treating at the time of the attack, but rather between paroxysms, and at intervals of from seven to ten days.

"The much-talked-of appendicitis is a disease considered entirely unnecessary from the osteopath's point of view. Given a case at its commencement, the practitioner gains control of the vasomotor nerves governing the appendix, thereby increasing the blood supply and allowing the organ to regain its normal condition. Osteopaths believe that the function of the appendix is to furnish a lubricant which possesses antiseptic qualities and also aids in digestion. They hold that appendicitis is merely inflammation caused by congestion resulting from interference with the blood supply to the appendix. The cause is almost without exception mechanical —constipation. The cure is not in the removal of the appendix, but in the removal of the cause of the constipation. This cause is nearly always found to be interference with the nerves controlling the intestinal supply at the point where the nerves leave the spinal column.

"One of the most dramatic incidents connected with the achievements of osteopathy is the case of Mrs. Helen Delendrice, whose husband is termed 'the merchant prince of the Dakotas.' Mrs. Delendrice was afflicted with what the leading surgeons of the United States termed cancer of the breast; one operation had been performed and another seemed imminent, with slight hope of saving her life. She consulted competent osteopaths, who pronounced her disease not cancer, but a curable malady. Her complete restoration to health attracted universal attention and the following year she appeared before the North Dakota Legislature, and by her personal plea secured the passage of a bill giving osteopaths the right to practice in that State."

By the way, Los Angeles, which excels in so many other respects, also leads the world in the number of osteopathic physicians it contains. Efforts are being made to insure the meeting in Los Angeles of the National Osteopathic Convention next year. Among invitations sent to the national osteopathic body was one from Mayor Harper, who wrote as follows, the quotation being taken from his letter as published in the "Cosmopolitan Osteopath:"

"We offer you the friendly environment, not only of the State having the largest number of osteopathic physicians in the world, but we offer you the city having the largest number of osteopathic physicians of any city in the world; which means that population which gives the largest recognition to and patronage of osteopathy.

"To carry the thought further, it means a city of 300,000 population, all of whose eight daily newspapers give friendly and sympathetic news service of osteopathic procedure. Indeed, no newspaper in America has made that systematic and long-continued and exhaustive campaign for the advancement of rational therapeutics that has been made by Dr. Harry Brook, editor of the 'Care of the Body Department' of the Sunday Times Magazine."

Remuneration of Physicians.

THERE is some truth in the following statement by Dr. Boardman Reed of Los Angeles (in his book "Diseases of the Stomach and Intestines") in regard to the remuneration of physicians:

"We physicians, by our zeal in the cause of science and willingness to do certain kinds of work with little or no regard to a proper recompense cheapen our profession. Our surgical friends are right to insist upon a generous remuneration for their most valuable services; and the lawyers, too, are always far better paid than we are. When therefore you have trained yourselves (or been trained) to do first-class and most necessary work in the way of skilled examinations in the laboratory and at the bedside, you should next train your patients to pay for it properly."

The trouble seems to be that the worthy, conscientious physician is, to a great extent, overworked and underpaid, while the contrary is true of quacks, both "regular" and irregular.

In an editorial on the remuneration of physicians, the Journal of the American Medical Association says:

"When we think of the intolerable vogue of charlatanry, of the greed of patients, of the dragging weariness of our overwork, of our often pitiless poverty, of our unprovided-for families, of the oncoming hopeless old age, we too may at times envy the rewards of those who chose not medicine, but the success and fame of the commercial life, and with efforts almost superhuman, right or wrong, forge to a first place in the world of finance."

In the same number of the Journal Dr. Tyson is quoted as folllows on the future of the profess[illegible]:

"Medicine will no longer be looked on as the art of curing diseases, but as a science of preventing such of them as cannot be altogether abolished, and then the physician will take his proper place as the most important functionary in an enlightened state."

On the other hand, the enormous charges made by members of the medical profession when they succeed in catching a rich patient are on a par with highway robbery. Every possible device is used to exaggerate the importance of their services, and operations are advised that would not be dreamt of in the case of a poor patient. As frequently suggested here, a poor man has vastly more chance of recovery when he is sick than a rich man.

The profession will never assume its proper position until its members become teachers instead of tinkers—dealing with causes instead of effects. Then, in addition to this, they should be paid by the year a reasonable stipend, to teach the people to keep well, when the interest of the physician and that of the patient would be identified.

Care of the Body

A Revolt Against the Closed Shop.

AS noted in the local columns of The Times, medical students of Southern California colleges have engaged a lawyer to probe the action of the State Medical Board in granting licenses at the examination held last month. It is charged that undue partiality was shown to students of a favored Northern California college, of whose forty-two students examined forty passed, while of the total number of 141 applicants examined, some presenting diplomas from eastern colleges, seventy-three, or more than half, failed to pass.

There is nothing new or surprising about this. As frequently stated here, the State Board of Medical Examiners, while ostensibly existing for the purpose of protecting the dear public against incompetent medical practitioners, is really established for the purpose of preserving the closed shop in medical practice and keeping out competition by framing "catch" questions, which only those who have been previously posted could possibly answer.

It is time that the State Medical Board was relegated to the political garbage pile.

Salt and Religion.

IN a sermon delivered in a Methodist church a bishop took as his text "Ye are the salt of the earth." In the course of the sermon he said:

"The rich man and the beggar would alike die from its want. The philosopher would become a simpering idiot, thrones would totter, kingdoms would be overthrown should this life-giving substance be suddenly taken away."

The worthy bishop is mistaken. Table salt (chloride of sodium) instead of being necessary to man is, as frequently shown here, a poison—a slow but sure poison. It preserves food from decay outside the stomach and retards digestion within the stomach, also involving an extra and unnecessary strain upon the kidneys.

The bishop went on to say that the Christian religions were created to be to civilization as salt is to the physical life of man. If religion is no more necessary to man than salt, then it has little real reason for existence.

Letters are constantly received by the editor of the Care of the Body from grateful readers, stating how much their health has been improved since they abandoned the use of chloride of sodium, and depended upon foods—especially salad plants—for their necessary supply of chlorine and sodium.

"One Man's Meat Another Man's Poison."

IN "A Stuffed Club" recently Dr. Tilden criticised those empirical food reformers who would have everybody, strong and weak, sick and well, eat the same kind of food. As he says, civilized man is in an artificial state. Consequently, he has not the digestive power of the natural man. Much of the force that goes to aid digestion in the natural man is expended in the brain of the artificial man. Therefore, as Dr. Tilden says, cooked and artificially-prepared foods and all sorts of stimulants are creations conceived and born of necessity. He declares that all our bad habits of eating and over-stimulation come from forcing maturity—forcing the seeding time before maturity of the physical.

There is much truth in these remarks. It is unreasonable to expect that after hundreds of generations of flesh eating, people can suddenly turn around and go back to the original fruitarian diet of man. It is equally absurd to suppose that a man who sits at a desk for twelve hours a day and overworks his brain, taking little or no physical exercise, can digest the same food that will nourish a woodchopper or a fisherman. To this extent it is true that "one man's food is another man's poison. There is nothing the matter with the food, but the sick stomach cannot use it.

At the same time, it must be remembered that there are certain general diet rules which hold good for every one, also that a person may gradually be weaned from a false to a true diet. Especially is this true in the case of children, whose parents have adopted a rational dietary. Here change comes naturally and easily.

In some cases there apppears to be a reversion to the original habit of eating. For instance, the editor of the Care of the Body has a son 21 years of age who has never been able to eat flesh in any form, even when it was smuggled into his food without his knowledge. It mortifies him that he is not able to do so, and he would like to eat it, but he cannot without nausea. It may be added that he is a good specimen of sturdy physical manhood.

Hereward Carrington writes strongly on this subject as follows in "Vitality Fasting and Nutrition:"

"Further, I am convinced that what is good and healthful food for one person is necessarily good and healthful for another. The same foods are alike detrimental or beneficial for all. Only the erroneous beliefs and false teachings of the medical fraternity prevent us from perceiving the complete rationality of this statement. They have invariably and steadfastly maintained that what is good and wholesome food for one is not necessarily good and wholesome food for another; that the individual idiosyncracies differentiating the organism of one from the organism of another are complete and absolute enough to justify the assumption that food may be beneficial to one person—harmful to another. In short, they propound and defend what Dr. Page so cleverly called "the most foolish of all aphorisms," viz., "one man's meat, another's poison." As generally understood, this sentence is, I am convinced, one of the most erroneous, and harmfully erroneous, sentences in the English language. As generally accepted, it enunciates a false doctrine, supports a false philosophy, and is illogical and erroneous throughout. Its harmful effects can scarcely be overestimated.

A Suggestion to Suicides.

SUICIDE is becoming alarmingly common in America. People kill themselves for the most trival causes, or without any cause at all. Some go crazy and commit suicide because they suddenly come into a big fortune, while others take their lives because they are poor. In Los Angeles recently a woman drank carbolic acid because she couldn't have children. On the other hand, women sometimes kill themselves because they have too many. This woman might have adopted a child. There are plenty of homeless infants awaiting a woman's loving care.

The real cause back of the ostensible causes of suicide is in most cases the unnatural life we lead in this country today—the constant high-pressure tension in pursuit of things that are not necessary to one who has learned to be contented. It is worry—which is a form of fear—not hard work, that makes people crazy and sick.

The method adopted by suicides are as varied as the causes assigned for their acts. Why so many who shuffle off choose such a painful and inartistic method as carbolic acid is a mystery. Here's a much better plan:

Put a couple of ounces of good perfume in a bath tub full of hot water. White Rose is somewhat vulgar. Essence of Violets is better. Then get in and open a vein. The blood will discolor the water, so that only your face and neck will be visible when they break into the room. Or you might add a little milk, which will tone down the red, and make you look like a deceased tadpole in a bowl of strawberries and cream.

You might also have a graphophone—not of the loud, strident kind, but one with soft tones—to play something pretty and weird as you pass away. Such, for instance, as the gavotte in Don Giovanni.

Then, be considerate, and let your friends know what it's like on the Other Side. That is, if you can get into wireless communication, which, with all due respect for the psychic research societies, is exceedingly doubtful.

This is not an argument in favor of suicide. Merely a plea for more esthetic methods among those who are determined to quit the game. The method is not copyrighted.

Cool Summer Nights.

IN the opening days of August there was a short warm spell, and the heat in Los Angeles, during the middle of the day, was somewhat oppressive—oppressive for Southern California, that is to say. In the East it would have been regarded as comfortable at this time of year. One feature of the Southern California summer should be more widely advertised—the cool nights. There is scarcely a night during the year—however warm the day may have been—when a blanket is not necessary for comfort. Those who have sweated through the horrors of a summer night on the Atlantic Coast will appreciate this. When the nights are cool one can sleep soundly and wake up refreshed.

This alone should be sufficient to draw thousands to California from less favored climes.

Danger of Anesthetics.

AN Associated Press dispatch from New York recently announced that a successful experiment had been made in a homeopathic hospital demonstrating that electricity may be substituted for a drug, as an anesthetic.

As stated here recently, should this prove to be true, it will be a great advance. How many thousands of lives have been sacrificed to chloroform and ether, God and the doctors only know—and they won't tell.

Following is from an article in the Southern California Practitioner, under the heading "The Chloroform Crime:"

"At the meeting of the Western Surgical and Gynecological Association recently held in St. Louis reported by the Medical Record, Dr. L. W. Littig of Iowa City, Iowa, stated that he had sent a circular letter to 3500 physicians practicing in Iowa. Eight hundred replies were received, many of them containing information which led to reports of fatalities by men who did not reply to his first letter. He had rejected reported chloroform fatalities occurring from two to four days after anesthesia, because he did not think it was possible to secure anything like reliable data in this class of cases. He had rejected ether fatalities occurring at the close of a long and difficult operation. He had excluded cases in which he thought that the operation itself was of sufficient magnitude to cause death on the operating table, or soon thereafter. He had excluded obstetric fatalities in which placenta previa or severe hemorrhage complicated delivery. He had excluded cases in which pneumonia or other lung complications followed gall bladder or other abdominal work. The report contained sixty-three chloroform fatalities."

"As a Man Thinketh."

A FAVORITE saying among the followers of the misnamed "New Thought" cult—the truth of which was old when Job wrote his book—is: "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

Here is a quotation from Marcus Aurelius: "Such as are thy habitual thoughts, such also will be the character of thy mind, for the soul is dyed by the thoughts."

Remember, however, as the editor has said, that neither Marcus nor the New Thoughters go to the "cause of the cause." "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he." True. But as a man digesteth in his stomach so doth he think. Therefore, we naturally arrive at the ultimate proposition: "As a man eateth, so is he."

Immunity from Disease.

DR. STOCKTON-HOUGH in his "Relative Influences of City and Country Life" says: "The resident of the town is fully acclimated to its atmosphere, but cannot spend a single night in the country without a risk of life."

A most extraordinary statement. When people are acclimated, or immune to conditions such as a malarial section, or the bad atmosphere of a city, it simply shows that their vitality has been so much depleted that nature is no longer able to produce a crisis, which we call disease, in her attempt to throw out the impurities in the blood.

When a person is a confirmed smoker he is immune to vomiting, even if he smokes a strong cigar, that would make a non-immune person vomit in a few minutes. When a person is a confirmed drinker he can, without any perceptible ill-effect, swallow an amount of whisky that would lay out a non-drinker in a very short time. Are we to infer from this that people who smoke a large amount of nicotine and drink a large amount of alcoholic beverages are stronger and healthier than others? By no means. On the contrary, the fact is that their systems, being full of nicotine or alcohol, the vitality has been so lessened that the system no longer has the power to attempt to throw out the intruder, which will inevitably cause serious trouble sooner or later.

Genius and Work.

A WRITER recently said: "Genius is capability to work hard unremittingly and unceasingly until your object is attained."

This is untrue—or at least only partly true.

You might as well say that by hard work a man born weak may defeat a world's wrestling champion. He may by hard and persistent work greatly increase his strength, but he cannot defeat the champion—except he do the David and Goliath act.

To go further, you might claim that by hard work a cow could learn to solve a problem in astronomy.

Perhaps the fairest way to put it is this: Genius is exceptional inherited talent plus the habit of steady concentrated work. When you find the two allied you have something very like genius.

Even then, however, there are exceptions—men and women who are above ordinary rules. Shakespeare, from what we read of him, was rather more of a loafer than a hard worker, yet the hardest kind of hard, persistent work won't enable an ordinary mind to approach Shakespeare.

Remember, finally, that the saying is quite true which tells us that genius and insanity are nearly allied. Genius, like criminality, is a manifestation of the abnormal. No man of genius was ever absolutely sane. This does not, of course, mean that he is a subject for incarceration in a madhouse.

AMETHYSTS OF ACHILL.

A RARE DAY FOR TOURISTS ON THE ISLAND OFF THE COAST OF CONNEMARA.

[London Standard:] When we heard there was an amethyst mine in Achill—that island of purple mountain and blue lake, green bog and brown trout stream, off the coast of Connemara—we were naturally anxious to explore it. We drove to Donagh, the nearest village to the mine, in a jaunting car.

At Donagh the village turned out to meet us. Our expedition was a godsend to that little community of picturesque loafers, and if we violated their privacy by peeping into the reeking interiors of their whitewashed cabins they violated ours by frankly closing in around us as we stood in the road, listening in polite but genial interest while we discussed our plans, their barefooted women in the background, shy of speech but generous of smiles; the men at our elbows, brown and well-featured, spare but tall, wearing in their features the signs of a long lineage and on their persons rags that an English tramp would kick contemptuously into a ditch.

Michael O'Malley, direct descendant of an ancient line of kings, in a caved-in billycock and trousers, secured by pieces of string, constituted himself as the leader of our party, principally because he had a pony which the ladies could ride in turn, which had also had the honor, he told us in his soft, polished way, of carrying Lady Roberts and the late Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman on similar occasions. Michael was 72—this fact he announced not once, but many times—and his wife, a beautiful barefooted old lady, sat at her spinning-wheel by their cabin door. He admitted her good looks, but naively imparted the information that his daughter was a much nicer woman.

It was part of our ill luck that day that one of our party who never moved without his rods mentioned fishing, and we immediately learned from the soft-spoken assurances of the crowd that the sea was fairly stiff with pollock at Keem Bay, which was practically on our way to the mine, and our number was thereupon increased by five tattered Donagh men who volunteered as fishing experts. As if this was not enough, our ornithologist put a question about a rumored chough's nest on Crowhorn Cliffs, expressing a desire to secure an egg or if too late for that, a young bird. His suggestion met with the same ready and indulgent assent. The nest was assuredly there, but in so dangerous a position that only a roped expert could get at it. This necessitated five more men and a rope, and by the time we started on foot up the steep road stretching before us like a white ribbon on the sheer side of the great gray sunlit cliff overhanging the green Atlantic our original party of six had increased in numbers to sixteen.

But when we stopped half-way and unpacked the lunch basket the Donagh men, with their inimitable manners, discreetly withdrew to a distance. They looked hungry, but we couldn't feed them all; however, we gave Michael O'Malley the packet of jam sandwiches left over to distribute if he thought fit, and the charming dignity with which he dispensed them and the grave, courteous thanks with which each man received a jam sandwich from his hand made us think very highly of the innate refinement of the Irish character.

We were less enthusiastic, however, when we arrived at Keem Bay and found there were no boats to fish from, a fact our guides knew perfectly well before they started, but kindly forbore to disappoint us earlier than necessary. Fishing was off, so we turned to the bird nesting as the next item on the programme, and walked two miles across bogs to get to the place, where we waited a full hour while the men tested the rope and the boulders and talked softly and incessantly to each other. At last, however, Patsie, a pale, red-haired man with a black pipe in the corner of his mouth and the rope around his waist, followed by four others holding on to it, crawled out of sight down the cliff. They reappeared in a surprisingly short space of time with the news that the nest was there, but had been some time deserted; in fact it now appeared that a fortnight ago the old birds had been noticed on another cliff some miles away.

By this time we began to feel helpless in face of a superior power, but even then we should have insisted on going to the mine in spite of the persuasive arguments that it was now too late if it had not been for the rain, turned on, I feel sure, by St. Brondan himself, Ireland's commercial saint, for as we returned by road to Donagh each man selected his victim and drew an amethyst from his pocket.

ONE of the authorities on the subject of ancient fashions states, with all sobriety and belief, that fans were invented just after corsets were adopted by the ladies of France. "They were necessary," he says, "to hide the agony of the ladies who were so tightly laced." So it seems that fans were preeminently designed to hide the expression, whether of pain, ennui, sorrow or joy.

This idea must have been well instilled into the mind of the modern chaperon who fancies she conceals her bored yawn behind her chiffon fan. She is like the ostrich, who hides his head and thinks himself invisible.

Fans have their uses; they are pretty, graceful and sometimes useful to create a breeze, although there is an exception to all rules.

The fan of duchess lace, for instance, cannot be much comfort to overheated dancers, yet it is beautiful. Once the fan was an ideal ally for the flirtatious. This lace fan is admirably suited for this purpose, for it conceals just enough of Lady Coquette's tell-tale features.

The chiffon fan is desirable for the same purpose, although it, too, is of no particular use to create a breeze. The paillettes on the one shown give the fan a dressy, flashing effect, which is extremely pretty when it is carried with a light and gauzy ball dress. Chiffon fans are very frail and must be handled with great care.

Sandalwood fans have always been very much admired. The wood may be carved in many beautiful and curious ways, which greatly adds to the value of the fan. Sandalwood fans are old-fashioned, and their sweet fragrance makes them very desirable. Many of them are found among the belongings of the past generation.

The fan with miniatures upon it is of satin, with the most adorable paintings framed in beads and spangles. Of course, the value of this fan depends upon the quality of the workmanship—and in some cases this is so handsome that the fan is far too valuable for use.

Another painted fan is of satin decorated with flowers. This is a very graceful one, and deserves to hold a high place in the estimation of the dainty lady who carries it. Painted fans of this description are appropriate for debutantes, whereas the fans decorated with spangles or lace are far more appropriate for matrons.

The black fan with ostrich plumes and ebony sticks is one that is remarkably handsome of its kind. Conceive what an attractive picture could be made of an elderly woman with silver hair, clad in a sweeping gown of black velvet and duchess lace—with this black ostrich plume fan to finish the costume.

The white ostrich fan with ivory sticks might be carried by the younger woman.

Fans are graceful, and they add very much to any costume, provided always that it be evening dress. It is needless to say that one would not carry a handsome fan unless the costume were appropriate. How would a girl look, for instance, who carried a chiffon fan while wearing a plain tailored street dress?

SCHOOL for HOUSEWIVES

By MARION HARLAND

SCHOOL CHILDREN'S LUNCHEON BASKET

"Soup or Milk Awaiting the Child's Home Coming."

"The Kindergarten Youngster Must Have Her Luncheon!"

"Plenty of Butter on the

THE preparation for the school child's lunch should be made when he eats his breakfast. That is, he should have a substantial meal, which will enable him to get along comfortably with the simple lunch which is all circumstances permit him to take at noon. When he has begun the day with fruit, fresh or stewed; a good bowl of well-cooked cereal and milk or cream, a glass of milk to drink, eggs simply cooked, bread or toast and butter he will have taken enough nourishment to stand by him until night, provided he has a sensible, digestible lunch in the basket he takes to school with him.

Before going further, let me remind the mother of small children that the scientific students of dietetics declare that a child requires about four times as much carbo-hydrates—starchy food—as he does proteids—meat foods—and that he should have half as much fat in his diet as he has meat. Such fats may be given to him in butter, cream and salad oil, as well as in the fat of meat. The usual error in children's food is that of giving them too little fat and meat in proportion to the starchy foods, such as white bread and potatoes. The starch helps keep up the heat of the body, but it does not make bone and flesh.

These proportions should be borne in mind when planning for the children's school luncheon. The child whose morning meal has not contained meat should have this or its equivalent in his lunch basket. Also he should have plenty of butter on the bread or sandwiches given him for that meal.

THE "COLD SNACK"

The trouble with the luncheons put up for most school children is that they are not appetizing. The theory—well borne out, it may be admitted, by many examples — is that a child will eat anything given him. Under certain circumstances this is true. When a child has had a morning of play or of active outdoor exercise he will sweep over the luncheon table like a devouring flame, carrying everything before him. But this state of affairs does not prevail at the school luncheon. He has been shut up at work all the morning. If he is a studious child, the blood has been drawn from his stomach to his brain, and he is too fagged to be hungry. The appetizing circumstances connected with the home luncheon are lacking. There are no savory odors, no display of food to tickle his palate. He opens a basket, or it may be a close tin or pasteboard box, and takes out his cold "snack," and attacks it usually with the one thought that the sooner the meal is over the sooner can he join his companions at play.

What does he find in the lunch basket? That depends upon his mother. Sometimes it may be a parcel of dainty sandwiches, a piece of cake, an apple or an orange. Sometimes, I am afraid, it is a jumbled assemblage of the sort of thing we call "broken pieces" when we give them to the beggar. Cold biscuit or muffins, a couple of thick slices of bread hastily spread with butter and with a "hunk" of meat thrust between them, perhaps a few cookies. Not a tempting array to the child whose appetite is in need of stimulus.

I acknowledge the bother it is to put up a school child's luncheon. I know it must be done just in the hurrying time after breakfast, when the cook is waiting for orders, when the market man or the grocer may be at the door for the list of supplies, when the postman is whistling at the steps, when John is gulping down his last mouthfuls of coffee to rush for his train or his car. The baby may be fretful, too, and there may be half a dozen other things to do. What easier than to say, "Just run into the pantry and get some doughnuts and bread and butter. I haven't time to stop now"? Or, "Ask Bridget to cut you a sandwich and give you some cookies. I am in such a hurry and you don't mind."

While I appreciate the situation and have had experience myself, which inclines me to be lenient with the shortcomings of other mothers in this direction, yet I think that the mother makes a grave mistake who lets any other duty take precedence of the filling of her school child's lunch basket. Instead of regarding it as something which can be hurried over at the last moment, she should plan for it as she would for any other meal of the day, and make sure the night before that there are provisions in the house for the lunch basket as she would for the regular breakfast or dinner. There should be a loaf of bread for sandwiches, meat that can be minced or sliced, and any of the other items needed to make a good lunch for the child.

TASTY DAINTIES

What these other items may be she will discover after a little experimenting. Until she has thought it out, she would never have guessed the different things which could be tucked into a lunch basket. Cake, of course, and cookies and doughnuts and apples and oranges and bananas. All these suggest themselves. But what about a little mould of jellied chicken to eat with thin bread and butter, or a baked apple, or a cup custard, or a small form of jelly or blanc mange, or a special turnover, or a wee bowl with pudding in it? How about stuffed eggs, or a tiny dish of potato or chicken salad saved from yesterday or, perhaps, made specially for the lunch basket? Would not these things tempt the appetite of any child?

After a little while it becomes almost second nature to plan for the child's lunch basket. When the dessert is being made for dinner at night a portion of it may be put aside or baked or set to form in a small dish by itself. When salad is mixed the school child's share is reserved from the first. Of the cold meat, that is to serve for hash or stew or other rechauffe for the family, a little is minced to put into sandwiches for luncheon next day.

A special set of small furnishings may belong to the school child's lunch basket. A few little dishes fitted to hold the custard or the pudding, a special spoon for him to eat them with, his own napkins—all give him a sense of possession and pride in his lunch basket he could never have otherwise. Waxed paper should always be at hand to wrap his sandwiches and tissue paper to do up his eggs after these are stuffed.

Of these sandwiches there may easily be a variety. Ham sandwiches, the fat and the lean chopped together; ham and egg sandwiches with a chopped hard boiled egg added to the ham; sausage sandwiches, minced cooked sausages spread on buttered rolls; sandwiches of cold fried bacon, minced fine with hard boiled egg and spread on brown bread; of cream cheese, softened with butter and mixed with a few chopped salted peanuts; of chopped stewed prunes, of figs, of jelly, of jam; of any cold meat sliced or minced; of apple sauce spread on white or graham bread. The sandwich need not always have plain sliced bread for a foundation. Rolls, buns, biscuit, sally lunn, muffins — study a variety. Only always have the sandwich dainty, no matter what its composition.

The well-grown school girl or boy takes a basket with the lunch that is to serve for dinner at noon or at hunger until such time as it is possible to return and get the cup of hot soup or the glass of milk that the mother should strive to have awaiting the child's homecoming when school is over. But the kindergarten youngster, whose school day ends at noon, feels she, too, must have her luncheon with which to break the morning at 10 o'clock. Not for her are necessary such elaborate preparations as are accorded the luncheon of her big brother and sister. A simpler fare will serve. Sandwiches, perhaps, spread with some wholesome preparation of meat or jam or apple sauce, and a cooky or two and an apple. Nothing substantial enough to interfere with the noonday appetite should be included, but only something to stay the small stomach until the regular luncheon hour arrives.

.·. .·. THE HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE .·. .·.

IF more housewives were "born cooks," like Clover Leaf, I think the four-dollars-a-week problem would soon settle itself. Unfortunately (or is it fortunately?) we are not all gifted with the same talent.

Do the members know that iron and kettle holders made of cheesecloth are excellent? Use several thicknesses; stitch around the edges and across from each of the four corners, and sew a loop or a ring on one corner. Wash them with the tea towels. You will then always have clean, white holders that are a pleasure to use.

J. P. A. (Hammond, Ind.).

Thank you for a clever idea! The average holder gets stiff and grimy with the using, an offense to touch and to sight. Yours will remain flexible as well as clean. How did we keep house before the introduction of cheesecloth among our availables?

Using Old Materials

The appeal for "old-fashioned burlaps" interested me. I did the same kind of work last summer. I should advise our friend to make her own patterns.

Rip open a clean barley sack; tack it on to your frame, and draw any pattern you like upon it. I have seen one made in the old diamond quilt pattern—in black, or dark gray, and yellow. It was very pretty. Another was made from a pair of old overalls. This was all blue in the background, with a black kitten playing with a ball relieved against it. The goods must be cut lengthwise, and in strips a quarter or a third of an inch in width. Cut down to the end of the material, then turn without clipping through the edge and come back. Do not cut into strips and sew together. When joined in that way the strip will not go through the implement used in working.

I write this because it is so much cheaper to do as I have said than to buy everything. The strips may be of old silk, calico, woolens, etc. The finer the material the finer the needle must be. This little implement costs $1.50.

I shall take pleasure in sending you some very good recipes some time.

Mrs. C. A. M. (Minneapolis, Minn.).

We shall be your obliged debtors when the recipes arrive. There is always room at the top for every really excellent thing.

Victim of Dishonesty

I am writing this in the hope that some one may profit by my experience, and also that I may learn the true reason of my misfortune. This may reach the eyes of one who was tempted by the pretty wares as we were.

I bought at Sorrento a folding mirror and a watchcase (both useful in traveling) made of the pretty native olive wood. I carried them safely all through my trip, but to my sorrow, last November, I found one morning my mirror cracked and the casing gradually coming apart. We concluded that the steam heat had done the damage.

Yet, knowing that the climate of Sorrento is very hot and damp, lying, as the town does, right on the bay, I am somewhat doubtful as to the real cause. Would the steam heat affect it?

Might it not be that my pieces were made of unseasoned wood?

Will some one tell me how I may thoroughly cleanse my hairbrush? I fear using too much water for fear of loosening the silver mounting, and soda turns the bristles yellow.

M. C. G. (Chicago).

Your latest suspicion is undoubtedly correct. I have been the victim of similar dishonesty too often not to enter into your chagrin. One Sorrento portfolio twisted into a curve by the time I got it through the custom house; an elegant stand, made expressly to order in Damascus, is so disfigured by gradual disintegration that I am fain to keep it covered with a cloth. I might go on with the disgraceful story, but it would not be new to the purchasers of olive woodwork on the other side. It has ceased to tempt me. It is made to sell—not to use.

Wash the brush in ammonia and water. Do it quickly, and dry in the air and sunshine, setting the brush with the back uppermost, that the moisture may not settle in the roots of the bristles.

The sun tends to bleach these also.

Defends Lard

I have noted several disrespectful flings at lard in the Exchange, and I rebel. I have used it for shortening for twenty-two years and I know whereof I speak.

Do I buy my lard? By all means! That is, I get the unrendered leaf and try it out myself. I cut it into pieces, about two inches square; put them into a kettle with a tumblerful of water and a little salt, placing the pot over a very slow fire. I leave it there for most of the day, cooking steadily. There is no odor whatever to permeate the house. When the grease is all cooked out I pour the contents of the kettle through a strainer placed over a basin, from which I pour the pure leaf lard into pails. I put over the strainer a flour sack ripped open, or a large salt sack, first wetting it—to keep the scraps out of the lard.

When all the grease is drained through the cloth, I bring the four corners of it together, and twist them hard, at the same time pressing on the scraps with a wooden potato-masher. When I have squeezed out all that will come away, there is left a mere handful of scraps, to be thrown away, or used as "cracklings," as one may desire.

I use this pure leaf lard—sweet, white and flaky—in preference to butter for frying, also for shortening in everything except the very best of cakes, which I have never tried with lard as shortening.

What would become of farmers' families if they did not use lard?

I don't doubt for a minute that factory lard is unfit for use as food. When "home rendered," another light falls upon the subject.

Let me remark, in conclusion, that I put down the usual seventy-five dozen eggs last summer, paying 15½ cents per dozen for fresh eggs. All this spring we enjoyed ham and eggs, custards, etc., while eggs were selling for 35 cents a dozen. I used the silicate of soda—fifteen parts of water to one of silicate of soda, or "water-glass."

LUCY B. K. (Des Moines, Iowa).

When I uttered the strictures that stirred you up to "rebellion" I had factory lard in mind. The favored ones, who can and do make their own shortening, are in a minority pitiably small by comparison with the mighty mass of housewives who must buy from the grocer or go without lard.

Some of those who read this did not wait for the horrible disclosures of the "pork scandal" that shocked the country a little while ago to study the history of the "shortening" canned for the market. We had read—some of us had seen—how diseased hogs were boiled down into lard and chopped into sausage, and investigated tales we had been loth to credit of the filth and adulterations connected with lard rendering and pork packing.

If I had time and opportunity to put up my own lard from clean, white, healthy "leaves," as you have, I should laud it as you do.

I thank you for reporting again upon the preserved eggs. Other correspondents say fourteen parts of water. You seem to be successful with the weaker solution.

Asks for Recipe

Will you print a recipe for dandelion wine in the Exchange?

G. (Glenolden, Pa.)

Steep dandelion flowers in boiling water for five minutes and strain off the liquid, pressing the flowers hard. Sweeten to taste and add brandy in the proportion of a pint to four gallons of the liquid. Put into uncorked bottles, tying net over the mouths to exclude dust and insects, and keep in a cool place until it ferments. Draw off then, and rebottle, sealing the corks and laying the bottles on their sides in the cellar.

Making Syrup from Maple Sugar

I am the recipient of twenty pounds of maple sugar, brought from the Indian reservation. I wish to make it into syrup. The sugar is in a very crude form (or so it seems to me), not at all like the maple sugar bought in the stores. It is more like common brown sugar, and is more or less dirty. It needs clarifying to produce clear syrup. Will you please tell me how to proceed in order to make it into syrup?

PAJUB GAZED UPON THE SACRED WATERS

"Here," [illegible] he, "I should find the truth I [illegible]." But he found it not.

RESTING DOVES

[illegible] his travels brought him to [illegible], which lay thirty leagues to the [illegible] of Delhi. He toiled up the steep [illegible] whereon the city was built, until [illegible] reached the [illegible] on its very sum-[illegible]. After an inspection of the mag-[illegible] palace of the maharajah, he [illegible] his way to the sacred tank of Ul-[illegible], where was stored holy water, taken [illegible] the Ganges.

[illegible] heart beat quicker upon his [illegible] at the sacred tank. For there, [illegible] the roof of a little pavilion [illegible] the sacred water, was a [illegible] of doves. But so had he been in-[illegible] with hope on many similar oc-[illegible]; and always had he been dis-[illegible]. Hastening his steps, how-[illegible] he soon gained the pavilion. Here [illegible] adoration to the great god.

THE SECRET REVEALED

[illegible] into the holy water, he [illegible] of the legend in the Sacred [illegible] of Ramayana. He thought of [illegible] told him while yet a child, [illegible] Bhagirathi, after 20,000 years [illegible] from his father and [illegible], besought Vishnu to cre-[illegible] Himalayas. Ganga was the [illegible] of the Himalayas, and with [illegible] could the dust of Bhagi-[illegible] ancestors be baptised, in order [illegible] might ascend to happiness [illegible] company of the gods. There [illegible] virtue in the Ganges, or [illegible], which had its source in a [illegible] cavern, said to be [illegible] hair of Siva. And as the [illegible] him was of the Ganges, [illegible] the words taught him [illegible]

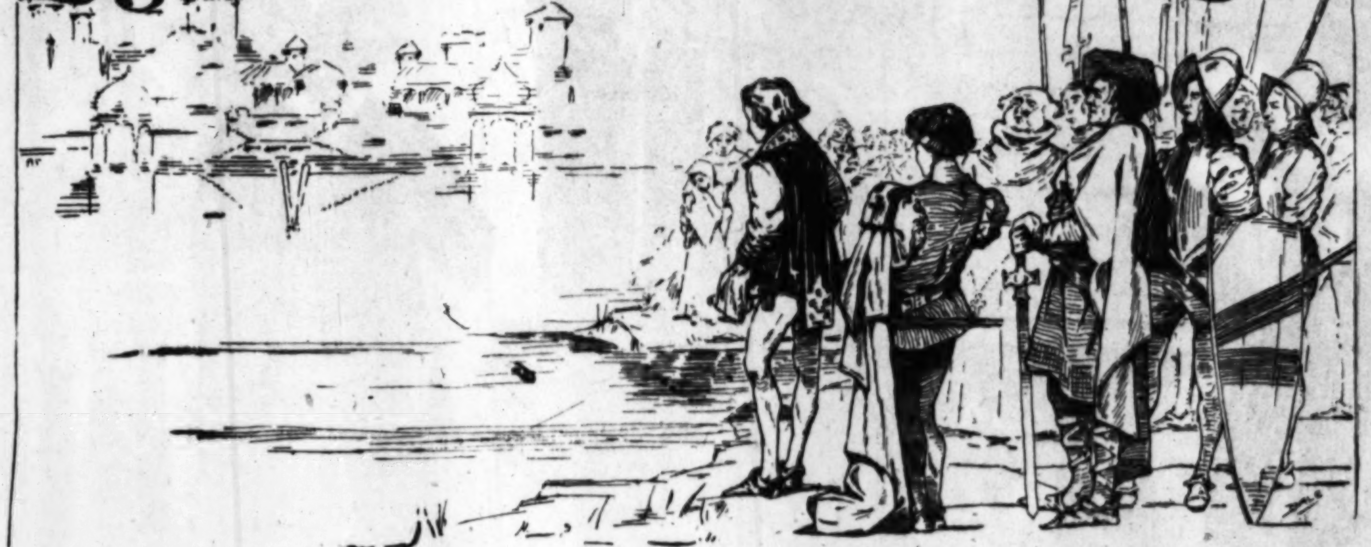
Then, as he again looked into the water, whilst praying to Ganga to rid him of his burden, it seemed that his reflection there had a new meaning. It seemed that his image spoke, and these were the words the mouth framed:

"No evil spirit pursues thee other than thyself. Thou hast been idle, shiftless, worthless. This alone has been the cause of thy ill fortune. Be industrious at thy work as thou hast been in thy prayers and all will go well with thee."

Pajub started back, aghast. Could this, indeed, be true? It must be; for the god had spoken. Slowly he retraced his steps to the bank, resolving to plan for himself a better course of living. Turning, for an instant, to watch the doves, he murmured:

"The sage spake truly. My secret did I learn where the doves rested—and what a simple secret it was!"

Legend of the Enchanted Lake



"SO BUSY WAS HE THINKING OF THIS WEIRD MYSTERY."

ONE came upon the village of Trouvail only after ascending and descending numberless hills. Trouvail itself lay in a hollow, flanked on both sides by mounts. There was nothing extraordinary in its appearance. Its streets seemingly had lost all idea of direction, for they wandered hither and thither in an aimless fashion. And, although the houses were built in the self-same style—squat and compact, with red brick walls and overhanging eaves—some of them, out of sheer obstinacy, turned their backs upon the street and presented to it their rear entrance instead of the front door.

Indeed, there was nothing to redeem Trouvail from the commonplace save its wonderful lake. So close to its crystalline waters did many of the houses lay that their outlines were reflected upon its surface—clear and distinct, as though in a mirror. Yet true as was this reflection, when a human being stood upon its bank the result was different. The body of the person was always mirrored with the utmost fidelity, but instead of the face there appeared distorted and horribly ugly features. This lake, with its strange peculiarity, might have brought fame to the little town of Trouvail had the village not been situated far out of the beaten path of travel.

ARRIVAL OF THE PRINCE

By the merest chance it was that Prince Aziel happened that way. Not long before this time his father, the king, had announced his intention of abdicating the throne in favor of the prince. But before he gave up his power he resolved to choose a wife for the prince, in order that an heir to the throne might be assured. The prince himself was too deeply interested in his studies to think of marrying, nor did he care a jot about being king. To escape being reproached for his neglect, he decided to travel a little while in out-of-the-way places, with but a few attendants. Thus he came upon Trouvail.

"'Tis more than passing strange!" murmured Prince Aziel, as he stood upon the bank of the lake, scarcely repressing a shudder at the forbidding image reflected where his face should have been. Beside him were grouped his retainers, and a little way beyond stood a crowd of gaping townsfolk. But the prince saw none of them, so busy was he thinking of this weird mystery.

"Who is there to explain this strange thing?" he demanded loudly.

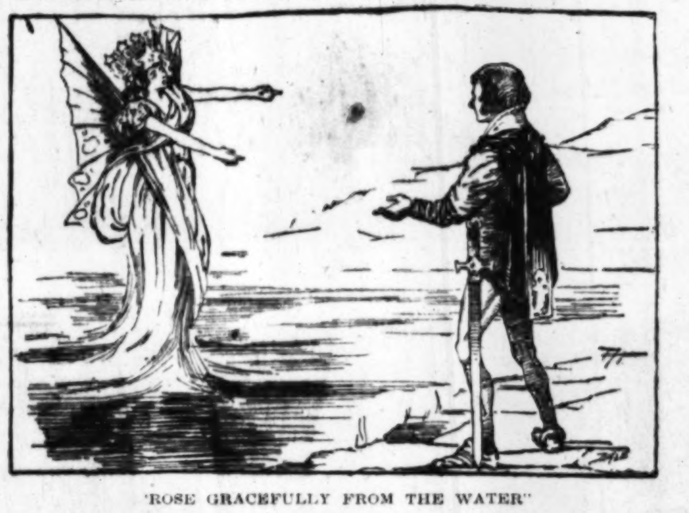
No one answered. The villagers had become so used to the possession of their lake that they had long ceased to regard it as wonderful, and with their ancestors had died the secret of its mirrorings.

At last one old man spake in a quavering voice, "Perchance Father Veillard may know. He is a very wise old man who dwells in a hut upon the mountainside, and he is even older than we—yes, much older."

"Bring him to me!" impatiently commanded the prince.

When the sage stood before the prince he replied to his majesty's question in this wise:

"About the lake I myself know nothing; but among my forefathers there was a legend which declared that a powerful genie created the lake. An ally of the Evil One was he. For his amusement he filled this depression in the hills with the tears shed by those in agony, so that the lake might always stand as an enduring symbol of pain. And so long as the lake remains will the souls of these sorrowful ones continue to haunt its waters. When one stands beside its banks the tortured spirits rise to the surface and hide the features of the person, according to the legend."



'ROSE GRACEFULLY FROM THE WATER"

Here was an opportunity for the prince to apply the great knowledge he had gained through arduous study. He dismissed his courtiers, bidding them find lodgings in the town. He made known to them his intention of dwelling in the house nearest the lake, where he resolved to stay until he had solved the mystery.

One day, as he reclined upon the mossy bank, sweet strains of music came faintly to his ears. From the lake itself the sound came, as though a spirit band of musicians were concealed in its watery depths. While the prince listened, fascinated, there slowly appeared not far from shore the form of a beautiful nymph. She rose gracefully from the water and floated through the air toward where the prince rested.

Immediately the prince beheld the nymph, love entered the heart of him who never before had loved. And Aziel sprang to his feet, crying:

"Oh, beauteous spirit! Thee I shall wed, or none!"

"Too great a price must one pay for my love, good prince," sweetly said the nymph, as she gazed with pitying eyes upon the young man. "I was appointed ages ago by a good genie to aid in the liberation of these souls from pain. To secure their release I must wed a mortal; but no sooner do I receive his promise than he must perish. Knowing this, do you renew your request?"

"Yes, I do insist!" cried the prince, extending his arms toward the nymph. With arms clasped about each other out above the lake they floated. An instant, and prince and nymph had disappeared below the waves. Nor was there ever found a trace of Aziel.

For a few days Trouvail woke from its sleepy indifference, as courtiers dashed here and there in unavailing search. But soon it lapsed into its state of former quiet. And few even noticed that no more did there appear in the lake the distorted image of any person who stood and looked into it.

Saved by a Spider

ON the ceiling of one of the rooms in Sans Souci, the world-renowned palace of Frederick the Great, is painted a great spider with its web. The origin of this strange decoration is as follows:

This apartment was the great king's breakfast room, and adjoined his bedchamber. Every morning when his majesty entered the room he was accustomed to find a cup of chocolate, but on one occasion just as he was about to drink, he bethought himself of something he had forgotten, and returned to his bedroom.

When he again entered the breakfast room his majesty discovered that a great spider had dropped from the ceiling into the cup, and he naturally cried out for fresh chocolate to be prepared.

The next instant the king was startled by the report of a pistol. No sooner had the cook received the order than he blew out his brains. Not because the king had refused the chocolate did he do this, but because he had poisoned the cup and had thought himself discovered.

It was in remembrance of this narrow escape that his majesty ordered the spider with its web to be painted on the ceiling.

A Willing Martyr

JOHNNY'S mother one morning discovered a shortage in her supply of pies, baked the day before, and her suspicions fell upon Johnny.

"Johnny," she said, "do you know what became of that cherry pie that was on the second shelf in the pantry?"

"Yes," he replied, "I ate it. But I had to."

"You had to!" exclaimed his astonished mother. "What do you mean, child?"

"The teacher asked yesterday if any of us could tell her how many stones there are in a cherry pie, and I couldn't find out without eating the whole pie, could I? There's just 142."

Legend of a Faithful Hound

PRINCE LLEWELLYN once went out hunting, leaving his infant child in charge of Gelert. He was horrified to see upon his return an empty cradle and the floor bespattered with blood. Gelert sat on his haunches, looking joyously into his master's face, but the impetuous prince read the evidence wrongly, and slew the hound on the spot. In the next room he presently saw the child, alive and well, and in a dark corner a dead wolf. Overcome with grief at his mistake, the savage warrior mourned the loss of his only friend, and buried the dog near by with all honor. To this day the place is called "Beddgelert"—the Grave of Gelert—now a pleasant little village in North Wales.

To Imitate the Song of the Nightingale

TAKE a pear-tree leaf an inch long and half an inch thick. With the thumb-nail dig a semi-circular piece out of the middle, so as to leave only the white inside extremely thin, covered on the uncut side by the outer skin. This opening should be in the shape of a half threepenny piece; if you have not cut it clean out you will only be able to draw out the croaking of a raven. Double up the leaf and apply it to the palate, the bared part of the swell at the back of and above the roof of the tongue, not toward the hollow, and try to pronounce the following syllables, to imitate the nightingale: Eu-oo, eu-oo, eu-oo, eu, eu, eu, eu, tshee, tshoo, tshee, tshoo, tshee, roo, roo, eu, eu, eu, roo, shee.

SEVERAL REASONS

"YOU ASK me why I like to go
To school day after day;
I'll tell you, if you wish to know,"
Said Johnny's sister, May.

"It's all because I want to do
My best to please mama,
And also try my hardest to Make glad my dear papa."

I so delight to take my place
Among the girls in class;
I'd simply hate to miss one face
Or lose a single lass.

"I always have a splendid chum
For company; you see,
At home it would be most humdrum,"
John's sister, Kate, told me.

"Such interesting things you learn,"
Replied John's sister, Prue;
'And I am striving now to earn
Bright fame and glory,' too.

'If possible, I'd like to be
As wise as father, and
I therefore must work busily
So I can 'understand.' "

Of Johnny, then I made request
For him to tell the reason—
Since he did not appear depressed—
Why he should like this season.

"I like school 'cause it always leads
To bully, fine vacation;
The faster," said he, "school term speeds,
The greater my elation!"

Contest in Grimaces

AT Champigny, an exceedingly pretty place on the Marne, French children a few seasons ago took part in a grimacing competition. The prizes, of course, went to those who succeeded in pulling the most horrible faces, the contest taking place during a whole afternoon.

The boys and girls were only too ready to engage in this exhibition, and for hours could be seen, tongues lolling out or crammed into a small cheek; a rosebud of a mouth, screwed up, gaping or twisted as ludicrously as its tiny owner knew how; dainty little noses drawn up or pulled down out of all shape, and eyes squinting in a desperate effort to look round the corner.

Onlookers began to wonder whether the juvenile competitors would ever stop grimacing, while others, who ought really to have known better, assisted the boys and girls in distorting their features. One venerable, white-haired old man showed himself quite skilful at this. He must have been a professional contortionist, or, at any rate, was well suited to the calling. He would make a face, and, to the best of their ability, the children copied it.

Turtles as Race Horses

YOU doubtless know of zoos where girls and boys are permitted to ride, for a small fee, on some of the animals confined there. But, although camels and elephants are so employed, tortoises are rarely used for this purpose. Indeed, the only zoo where children may ride on the backs of turtles is Hagenback's famous zoo in Hamburg, Germany.

These tortoises are immense fellows, weighing several hundred pounds. They have been taken captive on islands of the Pacific, where they have no enemies among the animals.

Most turtles are very timid, and draw in their heads upon the approach of human beings. These, however, have grown quite used to the presence of girls and boys.

When the young rider mounts a turtle he holds before the animal a head of lettuce attached to a rod. And the tortoise runs and runs after this lettuce. Of course, he never gets it, but he doesn't know a trick is being played upon him. Sometimes girls and boys run races upon the tortoises. This is great sport.

A Distorted Figure

WRITE or draw on thin white cardboard any letters or design you fancy, prick the outline all round, hold it at an angle to another piece of white cardboard or paper, placed horizontally, and let a light shine through the pricked outline, which will give distorted forms. This done, put aside the light and the perforated cardboard, and by placing your eye where the light had been, you will see the second drawing take a regular form.

The Mouse's Treasure

BY THE window of an old house in the Rue de la Huchette sat Madame Laury, repairing a fragment of delicate venetian lace. Nearby, her little grandson, Gabriel, a lad about 11 years old, coaxed from his violin strains of music as fine and fragile as the filmy, gossamer-like threads in madame's hands.

"Tomorrow is the day for your class in the conservatory, is it not?" asked madame.

"Yes, grandma," replied Gabriel.

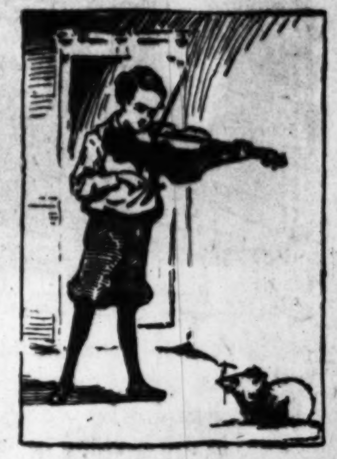
"Then I shall leave you to your practice," said madame, "while I carry back my completed work."

No sooner had his grandmother departed than Gabriel called softly:

"Grisette! Grisette!"

Immediately a little gray muzzle poked itself from a hole in the corner of the room. And as the lad commenced to play a soothing air the sharp nose protruded still further, until there came into view a mouse with silky moustachios, a fine, soft coat of gray and eyes like black pearls, which followed intently the course of the bow.

The boy nodded in a friendly way to the mouse and then continued the music which so delighted his tiny audience.



HE PLAYED TO GRISETTE

Presently there was heard the sound of footsteps. Grisette vanished as the door opened and madame entered.

Observing the anxious frown upon his grandmother's brow, Gabriel asked:

"What is it that worries you, grandma?"

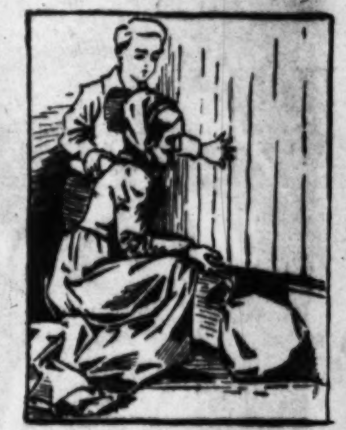
"My poor child, I do not wish to burden you with trouble," gently answered madame.

"I pray you, do not hide any secrets from me, grandma," Gabriel beseeched.

"I may as well tell you," replied the grandmother, with a sigh, "that they have complained about my work for the first time. You know my eyes are growing feeble, and I can no longer do such fine sewing as well as I should."

The lad ran to her and threw his arms around her, crying:

"You must not sew any more, grandma! I shall go out, and I am sure I can earn enough for us both!"



BAGS OF MONEY

"No, my boy; I promised your mother I would have you finish your course at the conservatory. You already show much talent, nor would I have your career ruined," responded madame.

At this moment she caught sight of the mouse, which had come from its hole.

"A mouse! a mouse!" she cried, seizing a brush and quickly pursuing the daring little animal.

"It is gentle. It will not harm you, grandma," protested Gabriel. But madame did not heed his words. She ran to the hole into which the mouse had disappeared and pulled away a loose board in the wainscoting. What she saw below seemed to interest her; for without hesitation she reached down and drew forth two heavy bags covered with dust.

Untying the cords which bound them she emptied upon the table a stream of coins—gold louis bearing the figure of Napoleon III.

"It is a fortune!" she gasped.

"And Grisette is the fairy godmother who has given it to us!" exclaimed Gabriel.

After all, Gabriel did not have to go to work, nor was his grandmother compelled to sew for a living. With the money, left no doubt by a family which had to leave Paris hurriedly during the war of 1870, they were able to place themselves in comfortable circumstances. Gabriel finished his studies at the conservatory, while madame enjoyed the quiet she so well deserved.

Grisette, the fairy godmother, never again appeared—not even to be thanked. But you may be sure that neither Gabriel nor Madame Laury ever forgot their mouse benefactress.
